Scituate spearheads move to get Gov. Weld on track

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Scituate selectmen are calling out the troops to get restoration of the Old Colony railroad to the South Shore off the starting blocks.

With 73 percent of the electorate in the Greenbush Line corridor in favor of bringing back the train, Scituate selectmen bet that in an election year Gov. William F. Weld will be in their corner in the fight against a vocal minority.

In letters to boards of selectmen in Hingham, Cohasset, Hull, Weymouth, Norwell, Marshfield and Duxbury, Selectmen Chairman Kevin B. Kinsella urged his counterparts to attend a pro-train meeting at 7:30 p.m., Jan. 18 at the Scituate High School library.

At the meeting, selectmen will be asked to sign a letter to Weld which implores him to focus his attention and move forward on implementing the restoration of the Greenbush branch of the Old Colony Project.

Selectmen will also be asked to join Scituate selectmen in hand delivering the letter to Weld "with all the attendant media coverage," Kinsella said.

He said it's time for train proponents to turn up the volume and remind Weld that area residents voted yes on Greenbush in an overwhelming majority. Referendum questions were placed on the ballots in area Spring 1991 town elections.

In Norwell the train won with a 7-1 majority, in Selectmen to write to Shaw's

Cushing Plaza tenants meet to compare notes

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The lack of holiday decorations at Cushing Plaza this season didn't go unnoticed by businesses at the Rte. 3A shopping center. Some wonder if the new owner's lack of attention to the Christmas season is a sign of things to come.

Cushing Plaza was recently sold for $2.65 million to Shaw's Supermarkets Inc. which plans to redevelop the plaza with a Shaw's there.

The news of the sale followed weeks of rumors and speculation about the future of the shopping center. Shaw's recently notified all tenants that they were tenants-at-will and would be given 90 days notice to vacate. But besides that letter, tenants have been left in the dark.

Cohasset selectmen decided Monday to write to Shaw's urging the company to communicate its intentions as soon as possible to the tenants.

The discussion followed receipt of a letter from the Social Service League, doing business as the Cohasset Consignment Shop, warning that the League needs some assurances as to a retail facility if it is to continue its activities which include supporting the Meals on Wheels program, Mammogram screenings, counselling and support groups, and programs on eating disorders, battering, drug and alcohol education.

Published author writes for the joy of it

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

Some writers work for years and never get published. According to Patricia Chute, that has no reflection on a writer's talent.

But since the Cohasset summer resident (she and her family have summered on Atlantic Avenue since "forever") has made it to the bookstore shelf three times, she knows the satisfaction that comes from being published.

While knitting in her Brattle Street home, she talked easily about her body of work, two novels and two biographies, which has taken her more than a decade to produce.

Yet the writing is only part of the struggle — waiting for a publisher to take the book is another challenge.

"That is a process which is agonizing. It is a little bit like waiting for a baby to be born," she said.

But she would write whether she could be published or not, she said. In fact, for the past eight years as a Harvard Extension writing professor, she told students in her writing class not to worry about getting their work in print — they should take pride in a job well done.

Cohasset's week

Blood drive set

The American Red Cross is sponsoring a blood drive from 2 to 7 p.m. Wednesday Jan. 12 at the Cohasset Community Unitarian Church, 23 No. Main St.

RTF permits available Jan. 8

1994 permits for residential use of the Cedar Street recycling transfer facility must be purchased no later than Monday Jan. 31. Vehicles without a current permit attached will not be allowed to enter the facility.

The fee is $65 for the year. Permits for two vehicles per household may be obtained at the same time for $65, provided both registrations with the same address are shown at the time of application. Any RTF permit application made for a second vehicle at a different time will require an additional payment of $25. No exceptions will be made. A rate of $33 has been set for persons who live alone.

Permits will be sold in the supervisor's building at the RTF beginning Saturday Jan. 8 and at the board of health office Monday Jan. 10, 1994. Payment can be made in cash or check payable to the Town of Cohasset.

Patrol boat is requested

Harbormaster Shawn Kelly's proposed $45K fiscal year 1995 budget got the nod from selectmen Monday without much debate. The board asked he obtain special hose ends that shut water off automatically and remove the handle off the water spigot at the Harbormaster's shed to help keep the department's $600 water bill under control. Fisherman use the hose at the town landings and kayakers use the spigot outside the office and sometimes leave it on, Kelly said.

Kelly plans to submit a warrant article asking for $40K for a new 22 ft. boat which he could use for rescue and patrol purposes in the outer harbor and further out to Minot's Light and the Black Rock area if needed. Selectmen deferred action on his request until they get a clarification from town counsel on just how far out the town's harbormaster should patrol.

The boat would replace the gray work boat "called the gray battleship," Kelly said, which is hardly used at all. If he gets a new boat, the Harbormaster's 17-ft. Whaler would be the work horse of the fleet, Kelly said.

ConCom in hot seat

The conservation commission's wish list includes increasing its secretary's hours to 33 per week and hiring a part-time conservation agent to help deal with the ramifications of the Wetlands Protection Act among other environmental concerns that face the volunteer commission.

Selectmen recently offered the commission some of Building Inspector Bob Egan's hours but commissioners said Monday they still want someone trained in conservation matters.

"We would use Bob Egan as a conservation inspector," Commissioner Jeff Waal explained. "But that's different than a conservation agent with a certain amount of education and experience in the field of conservation."

Selectman Jane Goedecke said she needed to talk to commissioners to try and understand their reasoning.

"There is only so much money and time we can offer," she said. "And it seems that no matter what we offer, it is never enough."

Waal said the building inspector would only be able to do about 30 percent of what a conservation agent could do. The commission estimates a part-time agent would cost $12,000 to $15,000 a year.

"More thought needs to go into this," Goedecke said. "We offered an employee to help but (it appears) you don't really need him. We're not going to sacrifice potential zoning enforcement for time you may not f[illegible] is really valuable," she said. Egan is the town's zoning officer.

Selectmen tabled action on the commission's FY'95 $22,453 budget request, which does not include money for a conservation agent but does include increased secretarial hours. Patricia Walsh, secretary for the Conservation Commission, has been working more than her allotted hours without compensation, commissioners said. The commission plans to submit its request for an agent and money to pay for one in warrant articles for the annual town meeting.

Outages are a problem

Selectmen heard from David G. Calhoun, Two Sheldon Road, about electrical power outages that plague the Sandy Beach/Beach Island area.

"Eastern Edison's equipment has not proven to exceed the performance requirements dictated by the elements in this area," Calhoun wrote. "The telephone and cable service have performed admirably in spite of the same exposure to the same conditions."

Selectman Jane Goedecke noted that outages in the area "have always been a problem."

Goedecke who lives in the area said when people are new they're amazed at the outages "then they become part of life."

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle defended the electrical service saying it "is a little different than a cable or phone." He added that the salt in the air affects the insulation on the wires.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said he wrote to Eastern Edison officials alerting them to the ongoing problem.

Scituate spearheads move

Scituate the ratio was 3-1 and in Braintree, 2-1. In Weymouth 5,259 were for the restoration and 1,765 voters said no.

With a 55 percent negative vote, Hingham was the only town in the corridor to vote no.

Kinsella says he is frustrated that as construction begins on the Middleboro and Plymouth lines of the project, Greenbush is still stuck in the study stage while transportation problems in the region continue.

"It goes on and on with well-intended studies," he said. "But it isn't getting built and in the meantime residents of the South Shore suffer.

"What's the use of the MegaPlex if people can't get to the expressway?"

Cohasset Selectmen Chairman Martha K. Gjesteby said, barring a conflict with the Scituate meeting date and her board's meeting, she and other members would attend. Gjesteby, who also sits on the Citizens Advisory Committee which is reviewing the latest feasibility study on restoration of rail service, feels restoration of the Greenbush line is critical to the economic future of the region.

Hingham Selectmen Chairman Edna English said in any case her board would draft a letter to send but "someone may go to make our feelings felt."

She said Hingham selectmen, although not unequivocally opposed to the project, have many reservations about restoration of the railroad including safety of the gate crossings and negative impact on the town's historic resources.

English said while at-grade rail service through Hingham Square "is not in the best interests of Hingham, we continue to press for prudent and feasible alternatives."

She said the board was following "the tunnel with great interest."

At-grade rail service to Greenbush with a tunnel under Hingham Square is one of six transportation alternatives under review in a current MBTA feasibility study. Estimates are the tunnel may add up to $180 million to the Greenbush project.

Hingham's William Grimes, spokesman for 'Back on Track' a pro-train group, said he'll be at the meeting to voice his support.

Pointing out that trains and crossing gates are featured in many of Hingham's historical photographs, Grimes doesn't buy the argument that the at-grade rail service will damage Hingham's historic character. Colonial Williamsburg and Greenfield Village both have the train, he noted.

Grimes agrees with Scituate selectmen that it's time to move forward.

"Everyone knows who's on what side, so let's get this thing built and stop squabbling about it," Grimes said.

Kinsella said while the meeting is open to everyone, its focus is to push for the train. The letter to Weld will be signed by supportive area selectmen as representatives of the electorate, he said.

"Dissidents are not part of this effort," he said. "I appreciate the concerns of Hingham but at some point in time we have to say let's get going with this thing. We in the other towns are not going to just sit on our hands, that's crazy."

'What's the use of the MegaPlex if people can't get to the expressway?'

— Scituate Selectman Kevin Kinsella on restoration of the Greenbush Line.

Parking lot signs okay'ed

The town hall parking lot will soon have three aesthetically correct signs. Selectmen okayed the signs proposed by Hassan Sign Company of Cohasset. The signs are singled faced, painted signs to be done on aluminum faced plywood with a white baked enamel background, black lettering, and light gray inside borders. The signs, which will cost $270, will be mounted to pressure treated posts stained light gray.

The signs (which say entrance, exit, and one-way) are in response to town hall employees' concerns that the narrow driveways accessing the town hall parking lot are being used as both entrances and exits presenting a safety problem. The signs will delineate which driveway is which, selectmen said.

Name: B. Clifton Jones

Occupation: Police officer and town safety officer. (Officer Jones was recently commended by Chief Brian W. Noonan for his outstanding police work Dec. 14 when he not only discovered a house fire on Beechwood St. but without regard for his own safety entered the burning building and led a mother and five minor children to safety.)

Best day of your life: They're all good!

Most embarrassing moment: I was about to make a warrant arrest, we had a description of the car so I pulled it over. But it turned out to be the guy's buddy not him. That's embarrassing professionally.

Goal: When I go home every night being able to say I did my job today.

Favorite season: Spring.

Best vacation: Ten days every February when we go to Naples, Florida to visit my daughter.

Favorite holiday: Christmas.

Pet peeve: People who act ignorantly about traffic signs when they know they're there, such as, people who say they didn't see the No U-Turn sign downtown.

Favorite book: "Rise and Fall of the Third Reich," by William Shirer.

Favorite movie: "Sister Act." I' m looking forward to seeing "Sister Act II."

Biggest worry: The loose morals with people in society today with the way things are going like AIDS and drug and alcohol abuse.

Favorite place: Cohasset.

Cushing Plaza tenants meet

"Ninety days notice pales in comparison to the almost 30 years which the League has maintained a facility in this area," the letter states.

Several business owners and managers met with their attorneys at Sea 'N Cheese Dec. 20 to discuss possible strategy and to compare notes.

"We do want to work as a unit," Andi Merrill, manager of the Consignment Shop, said. "We don't just want to sit here and do nothing."

Rick Peters, owner of Sea 'N Cheese said razing the plaza would be a shame because the Rte. 3A shopping center "was really starting to work.

"And now we have a bulldozer looming around the corner," he said.

Peters said the businesses are urging their customers to let the town know their feelings by attending board meetings and writing letters.

"We hope to keep the issue before the people," Peters said.

John D. Kelleher, head of real estate development at Shaw's, said recently that Shaw's "is not the kind of company that would go in and close the plaza down." He said once the plaza is redeveloped there will be some additional space left for some current tenants and if space is not available, the company will assist those businesses in finding a new location.

Merrill noted that tenants like the Consignment Shop, Buttonwood Books & Toys, and Sea 'N Cheese would not be able to relocate easily.

"We have 3,000 square feet, where are we going to find that in Cohasset?" she asked.

Betsey Detwiler, owner of Buttonwood, said her store has 4,000 square feet.

"We've worked like dogs to build this business," she said. "It won't be easy to relocate after putting so much energy in this. This plaza is home," she said.

The Mariner welcomes letters to the Editor.

around town

by Sallyann Chatterton

❒ Hello folks, Sallyann is on a very well-deserved vacation so your editor is pinch hitting this week!

❒ Hot off the presses from Notre Dame Academy in Hingham is the honor roll for the school's first term. It should come to no surprise to Cohasseters that our town is well-represented as some very hard working young women are recognized for their efforts!

On the Principal's List is Julie Catalano. Danielle Nohe earned a place on First Honors list and Second Honors go to Jennifer Cellucci and Julie Smith.

Keep up the good work ladies!

❒ Derby Academy in Hingham also reports that Patrick Gaughen, Ryan McWilliams, Theodore Noon, and Beth Pierson, all of Cohasset earned Headmaster's certificates for achieving an average of A- or above in their academic subjects for the first term.

Michael Fallon, Alexander Gaston, Sydney Johnston, Ashley Mihos, Corinna Noering, Morgan Pierson, Ian Simons, James Simons, and Ryan Stasko were recognized for Second Honors, achieving a B or B+ average in all academic subjects.

Well done to all of you for making Cohasset proud!

❒ Hats off to Elizabeth Myers, a lovely Cohasset ballerina, who performed with the Boston Ballet in 'The Nutcracker' as a Party Child, Dec. 21 to Jan. 2.

Liz was in all performances at the Wang Center in Boston. She also recently finished dancing the same role at the Plimoth Philharmonic Holiday Pops. The Party Children, eight girls and boys, from the Boston Ballet Schooi, made up most of Act I.

The old-fashioned holiday party scene had children's dances, parent/child dances, and the gift giving culminating with the arrival of Uncle Drosselmeyer and the Nutcracker! A great reminder of old fashioned holiday parties!

Elizabeth is a sixth grader at the Deer Hill School.

Our own Alison Killilea, a senior at the school, has been selected as a Field Hockey All-Star by the Eastern Independent League (EIL) and the Association of Independent School Girl Athletics (AISGA).

This is Alison's second year chosen as an IEL All-Star. Alison's proud mom and dad are Sue and Tom Killilea.

Coach Debra Hill talks about Alison's determination which makes her a field hockey force to be reckoned with.

"Alison is hoping to go on to play field hockey in college," Hill says. "To choose between tennis and field hockey as her chosen sport for next year was a very difficult decision for her to make because she is an excellent player in both sports."

Congratulations Alison, we always knew you were an All-Star!

❒ Can't believe that 1994 has greeted us with lots of wet, heavy snow! But the town's youth aren't the least bit sad I bet.

As I'm writing this early Tuesday morning, I can almost hear the shreaks of delight from Cohasset kids as they see the no school list which includes their town scrawl by on the TV screen. Poor Hingham! They're the only town around with school.

❒ Keep us posted with your family's happenings. You can call Sallyann at 383-0560 or items may be dropped of at Hennessy News on Brook Street in the Village, please mark them Around Town and I'll see that Sallyann gets them!

Thanks to all of you who supported Around Town in 1993 and be sure to let us know what your good news is in 1994!

— Take care, Mary Ford

School board rolls up sleeves in budgetary session

By Sean P. Sweeney
Mariner correspondent

School Superintendent Stephen Hart initiated discussions with the Cohasset School Committee at its meeting Dec. 16, regarding capital budget items which face the town over the next five years.

Hart indicated that he would prepare articles for the town meeting warrant if the committee thought it appropriate on five specific areas of expected capital budget expenditures.

According to Hart, a new state regulation will require that by 1998, all underground oil tanks on town property will be required to be coated with a protective sealant or replaced with new tanks. Since the tanks which are presently located underground on school property are already over twenty years old, Hart has recommended that they be replaced with new double-lined tanks.

Hart suggested that it may be appropriate to remove and replace the biggest tank, located at the Junior/Senior High School, in 1996. The expected cost of doing so would be approximately $75,000. The plan would then call for removing the other two smaller tanks from the Deerhead and Osgood schools in 1997 at an approximate cost of $65,000.

Another alternative would be to convert to a natural gas system, although Hart does not feel that this would be financially attractive to the town at this point.

Another area of capital expense depends on whether the town would approve participation in the early retirement incentive program under the new Education Reform Act.

Details of the plan are still unclear, at least as they pertain to how many Cohasset educators would be eligible for early retirement. In towns that conduct town meetings, participation must be approved by a town meeting vote. Because of the timing of the passage of the Education Reform Act, many towns could not approve participation in the first year of the plan because town meetings had already been held. As a result, only 62 communities statewide participated in the first year of the plan.

In the first year of the plan, 809 teachers and administrators across the state were eligible for and approved for early retirement. The number of educators who will be eligible this year will depend on how many communities elect to participate in the second year. In any event, towns are only eligible to participate one year and each town is guaranteed one early retirement participant.

Participation in the plan could actually end up costing the town more money than it saves depending on the number of educators who are eligible and their ages.

A third area of expense over the next few years involves the replacement of buses. The buses now owned range in age from 1986 to 1989. According to Hart, the average life expectancy of a bus is between six and eight years. With this in mind, Hart feels that the town needs to look at replacing some of the buses, at least one, this year. The price of a bus is somewhere in the $40,000.00 to $50,000.00 range. Hart also discussed the possibility of seeking bids for private bus services.

Space considerations will also warrant careful review over the next few years as the town must consider the inadequacies associated with the Osgood School. Hart identified the lack of a cafeteria and auditorium at the school and the inaccessibility of the library as major concerns. The committee members were in agreement that an in-depth space study is necessary in order to determine what can be done to address space problems facing the Cohasset schools. Ralph Kidder, the vice chairman, stressed that curriculum should determine space needs rather than allowing space limitations to limit curriculum options.

The fifth area of capital expenditures that Hart addressed was the need to make the Junior/Senior High School more accessible to the handicapped. Hart indicated that there will definitely be a warrant article dealing with the construction of a chair-lift at the school. Committee members stressed that the schools should start to look at making themselves more generally accessible to the handicapped rather than simply addressing the needs of certain students as they arise.

CHS SENIOR RECOGNIZED

In other business, Hart had the pleasure of awarding the Superintendent's Certificate of Academic Excellence to Cohasset High School senior Courtney Schultz. The award is sponsored by the Massachusetts Association of School Superintendents and is given to the senior in each town with the highest academic ranking. Schultz is presently ranked number one in her class at Cohasset High. Hart congratulated Schultz on her achievement which is the culmination of four years of hard work. Schultz was accompanied at the meeting by her parents.

The committee also received a presentation from guidance counselor Anne Porter regarding the Camp Marist program. Now in its seventh year, the program is geared towards building trust and friendship among Cohasset High School freshmen. The program is conducted over two days each summer at Camp Marist in New Hampshire. The program involves large group trust activities and smaller group discussion activities. Porter praised the efforts of volunteer faculty and student peer counselors in making the program such a success.

Porter also discussed a program now in place at Cohasset High School known as Project School Family. Cohasset started its program, which involves ninth graders, after talking to representatives from other communities that have a similar program in place. The program continues to foster the unity which is first developed at Camp Marist.

Students are divided into small units known as families. These families meet once every two weeks and conduct emotional and physical trust activities along with discussions of relevant issues. The activities and discussions are led by trained volunteer teachers and peer counselors. According to Porter, the program's organizers hope to continue the program with tenth graders.

Getting on track

At last the voice of reason has arisen from the quagmire we have grown to know as the long-suffering Old Colony Greenbush restoration issue.

Scituate Selectman Kevin Kinsella, a longtime advocate of the project, is calling for a public show of support. For too long we have allowed the dissenting voices of one community to obfuscate what the vast majority of South Shore residents desire - better transportation to and from Boston.

Kinsella is obviously fed up - as most of us democratic-minded individuals are - of having a vocal, publicity-grabbing minority turn the attention away from the valid and strong support this project has gained. How many ways do we have to demonstrate to the state that we truly support this project? How long do the people who would use this rail system have to assure the state that the great majority of residents desire the return of this railroad?

Selectman Kinsella is obviously tired of the roadblocks created by a few to delay the intent of many. It's time the officials of the Greenbush communities, namely Scituate, Cohasset, Hull, Norwell, Marshfield, Hingham and Weymouth, put their names on the line and declare their support for this project. It is, as we are all well aware, the voters' clear choice that this railroad be restored.

Kinsella said it is time for rail proponents to turn up the volume. While a few loud, disgruntled voices have prattled on and managed to block the project, the rest of us have sat back and listened. Well, no more. As Kinsella has noted, it's time for some definitive action and it isn't going to happen unless and until the rest of us make some noise.

We urge all Greenbush rail supporters to attend the Jan. 18 meeting at the Scituate High School Library. Let's demonstrate to the state and Gov. William Weld that the residents here eagerly await the day when the trains will once again pull into the Greenbush station.

It is wisely noted that in this election year, the governor may be listening more intently to the voice of the voters. What better time to seek his attention and support? It is therefore crucial that voters show their strength in numbers by attending this meeting and letting their town officials know how strongly they support the restoration of the railroad.

We applaud Selectman Kinsella's plan to move the Greenbush line back into the public forum, and we add our enthusiastic support to the entire Old Colony project.

Now let's get this thing moving!

Thanks to all for Celebrate '94 success

To the Editor:

For the second year, the Community Center of Cohasset began the new year by organizing "Celebrating '94," a family event modeled after Boston's popular First Night. More than 1900 people enjoyed professional concerts, entertainment, shows, music, delicious food and the camraderie of an evening shared with friends.

This year we enjoyed the return of several entertainers and the addition of many new groups, several of whom have performed worldwide and at Boston's First Night, but chose to participate in a smaller community endeavor. Once again, the center received rave reviews from the performers about the people who attended. Many put in a request to return next year. What a great compliment to all who attended.

The event was possible with the generous support of the following local sponsors: Pilgrim Co-op Bank, Hallmark 100/Karen Kirkendall, Target Industries, Boston Yacht Sales, Goodale Insurance, L.P. Carpenter Interiors, Carousel Antiques, Mary Jeanette Murray and Barry Waste Services.

We would also like to thank the following: Rhonda Myers, chairperson; William Malone, building/event coordinator; Jack Foley, tickets; Ann Whiteley, entertainment; Glen Pratt, grounds, lighting and security; Karen Devine, food coordinator; and their committee members who numbered 27 last year and grew to a team of 56 for this year's event.

Special thanks to all the town departments and their staffs; the much-needed assistance and advice of the highway department, tree and park department, and wire department; all the churches and organizations who allowed the use of their churches, halls and facilities; and The Mariner Newspapers, Patriot Ledger and Boston Globe for their great coverage.

As with most events, there were hundreds of volunteers too numerous to personally name who made it all happen. These volunteers include those who installed the necessary extra power sources, strung lights, made signs, set up and manned road blocks, decorated halls, monitored events, shared in preparation, worked that evening and scrubbed floors the day after.

We owe a special thanks to all those who quickly came to our aid with snow plows, snow blowers and shovels after Mother Nature surprised us with the snowfall many dream of for Christmas but received for New Year's.

We thank everyone who supported this event making it all possible, and wish you all a happy and healthy '94.

Consignment shop is looking for answers

(The following Dec. 14 letter was sent to selectmen.)

Dear Ladies and Gentlemen:

We are writing to bring to your attention a possible problem with our continuing operations. Representatives of the Social Service League have made repeated inquiries as to the owners' intentions for extending existing leases. Although the property manager, Mr. Winer, has responded to our inquiries, it would appear that he has no more information than we do concerning the intentions of the new owners. There are rumors circulating that the new owners intend to raze all or almost all of the existing buildings and build a retail grocery store and possibly a drug store. Whether or not these rumors are accurate, remains to be seen. However, in order for the league to continue its activities, (including those specified in the enclosure), funded substantially by the consignment shop undertakings, we will need some relative assurances as to a retail facility.

At this point, most of the tenants at Cushing Plaza are in a similarly difficult position. It is respectfully suggested that the Board of Selectmen has an interest in assuring continuity at Cushing Plaza or in the alternative, an orderly and economic transfer of operations to some other appropriate location in the Town of Cohasset.

We would appreciate indeed, an opportunity to confer with you concerning these matters, and it may very well be that you will be able to have representatives of the new owners in attendance as well, so that you and we could question them as to their intentions.

The most recent letter from the new owners' representative suggests, that we would receive at least 90-days' notice of any contemplated changes. It is apparent, that a 90-day notice pales by comparison to the almost 30 years in which the league has maintained a retail facility at the plaza.

Very truly yours,
Annette D. Sawchuk

Hospice volunteers thanked

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Cranberry Area Hospice, I would like to thank the dedicated volunteers who made this year's Festival of Trees such a wonderful success.

Over 4,000 children and adults came to Plimoth Plantation to see 60 beautifully decorated trees. Each tree interpreted this year's theme, Christmas Fantasy.

We would like to recognize Sara Henesey from Hingham who joined over 500 volunteers to organize this event.

Without these tireless volunteers, the Cranberry Area Hospice would not be able to provide the same level of hospice services to patients and their families.

Final report on landfill is due

(Ed.'s note: The following release was submitted by SAFE, a grassroots group opposed to expansion of Cohasset Heights).

SAFE (Stop Any Further Expansion) urges area residents to oppose the latest expansion proposal of the Cohasset Heights Ltd. (CHL) landfill.

Jan. 10, CHL will submit its Final Environmental Impact Report (FEIR) for its 27.5 "Area V" expansion.

The report was originally filed Dec. 22. However, since the FEIR was missing key pages, SAFE and Senator Brian Mcdonald requested that the study be withdrawn and filed again in complete form. The state then required CHL to withdraw the report and to re-submit it correctly, which will be done Jan. 10.

"We have until Feb. 9 to review and comment on this report," said SAFE President Alix White, who urged residents and town officials in Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull to comment on the report.

"The stakes are high," said SAFE Vice-President John McNabb, Jr. "If this report is accepted by the state, the proposal then goes to the next step in the regulatory process. If it is rejected, that is the end of it."

"We will hold a public meeting in the next few weeks to explain the report, the problems with the expansion, and how to comment on the report," McNabb said. "The landfill expansion will threaten Lily Pond, our public water supply, our air quality, the Weir River ACEC, wetlands and open space."

Chamber sponsors SCORE

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce will have a dinner meeting at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 12 at the Chart House, Border St.

The speaker will be from the Small Business Administration's SCORE program. This volunteer program offers individuals with extensive business experience who counsel on issues ranging from start up to merger. Their expertise encompasses tax law, finance, business plans, personnel policies, bidding government contracts and other subjects.

Dinner is $10 per person. For reservations cal 383-1010 or Bob Martin at 383-0787.

Free eye exams offered

The Massachusetts Society of Optometrists in conjunction with the American Optometric Association, will sponsor the program, IVISON USA which provides free eye examinations to low-income working people and their families.

Anyone wishing to participate should call 1-800-766-4466 between 8 a.m. and 10 p.m. weekdays between Jan. 3 and 31, 1994 to be screened for eligibility or write for an application to VISION USA, 243 No. Lindberghg Blvd., St. Louis, MO 63141.

The examinations will be performed by optometrists in the community who are members of the Massachusetts Society of Optometrists.

The joy is in the writing, local author says...

"I like to teach. I would hate not to teach because you n't be without people (but) it isn't what I wake up nking about," she said.

Lately, she has been waking with thoughts of her latest work, a biography of Anton Chekov, on her mind. She finished writing last spring, and is trying to get it published.

'That is a process which is agonizing. It is a little bit like waiting for a baby to be born,.'

— Patricia Chute on waiting for a publisher to take a book.

"It's not mainstream...there are a lot of pictures in it. If I sell it, I will be (elated)."

Although her first two books, Eva's Music and Castine, published in the 1980s, were fiction, she has turned her interests to historic biography.

"I haven't abandoned fiction, but my heart is with this other business," she said. Chekov is her second effort; her first, Tolstoy at Yasnaya Polyana: Life and Work, published in 1991, is about the life of Leo Tolstoy at his home in Russia.

She stumbled upon her interest in writing about Tolstoy — although she revered him as one of the most important writers of all time.

Chute found a collection of photographs of Tolstoy's home in a library. Fascinated, she thought she could collaborate with a Russian historian on the research for a book.

However, Chute decided to take the project on her own. Impassioned by her research, she took four trips to Russia and worked six years to put the book together.

At first, she was intimidated by Tolstoy's greatness and the sense she was an outsider in a foreign country.

"Leo Tolstoy is the pre-eminent; the Giant of Russia," she said. "It was a huge house; and then there was me.

"The first time I was there I was not at home. I was conscious of being an American, I was conscious of having an interpreter."

Patricia Chute

As time went on, she was accepted by the staff of the 1,000-acre estate (only about 260 acres are open to the public) and felt more comfortable there. She could wander freely in the house designed like "a very important railroad car," long and narrow, with rooms off of a center corridor.

Once, she even held some of Tolstoy's personal books in her hands, studying his handwritten notes in the margins.

She realized she was finally at home when one day, feeling tired while at the estate, she asked a guard if she could take a rest.

She walked out onto the porch, curled up and took a nap on a bench outside.

"I wandered there like I wandered here (in my own house)," she said.

Although she said that writers should be able to do fiction or non-fiction, they are worlds apart.

"I used to do eight pages a day in my crazy youth. You have a tremendous balancing act between that what you know and what you put down. (Non-fiction) is not only slower; my personality is not involved."

Writing about writers may have come naturally to Chute, whose mother, Peggy Lamson, was a writer, and her father was a professor of Renaissance English Literature and Military History at Williams College and at Harvard.

While growing up in Williamstown without television, she read constantly. Her background was a her only training when she sat down to write at 44. She published her first short story in McCall's magazine.

"I realized I didn't have technique," she noted. After one writing class, she said she was ready to work on her own.

"Some little instinctive light went off — I said one course is enough. I went back and started Eva's Music."

A book agent saw her short story in McCall's and asked to read her novel. But Chute only had 40 pages completed. She worked around the clock to finish the first 150 pages to give to her agent to read. It took two years to complete Eva's Music, but it was published immediately.

Her second book, Castine, named for a town in Maine, was published in 1987.

She admitted that it was easier to get published 10 years ago, and as she waits for the Chekov biography to find a publisher, she realizes great books never see the library shelf.

Chute believes, and tells her students, that a manuscript can "cool off" but doesn't have to die.

"There is a sort of internal timing. Your instincts are the best thing you have on this. There is a point, if you have exhausted all possibilities and you have to let a manuscript cool. Come back in one year. It doesn't have to die in your mind — it simply takes a back burner position."

Chute lives in Cambridge through the winters, with her husband, Dick, a lawyer. She has four children, Hillary and Richard, who went through the Cohasset Yacht Club sailing program, and Sam and Valerie.

Fifty signatures are needed to have a name placed on the ballot. Campaign forms must be filled out, Town Clerk Marion Douglas said.

Demolition bid rescinded

Wayne & Co. of Hingham the low bidder for the Hagerty property demolition project rescinded its bid due to an internal mechanical error.

Selectmen awarded the contract to the next low bidder Rosano Davis at $34,000, at their board meeting Monday. They will also ask Rosano Davis for an estimate to demolish the metal storage building at the site which the Hagerty Property Committee is recommending be left up for the time being. The manufacturing buildings, which housed Cohasset Colonials a furniture kit company, will be torn down.

Speaking for the Hagerty Committee, Russ Bonetti said Monday the committee recommended leaving the storage building up to see if the structure could be incorporated with any plans for the land, which the town bought recently. But if it's easier cost wise to remove it now, the committee is open to that, he said.

Selectmen also decided not to refund the bid bond of about $1,500 that Wayne and Co. provided the town. But Bob Martin, spokesman for the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, implored the board to reconsider saying the amount was a hefty fine for a mistake. He said bid bonds are intended to assure that the company will offer a performance bond.

Selectman Jane O. Goedecke said the board needed to determine what a bid bond is used for before reconsidering their action.

Celebrate '94 a success!

Nineteen-hundred people sporting blue and white "Celebrate '94" buttons enjoyed one great event after another in Cohasset on New Year's Eve!

It all began with a beautiful carillon concert by Sally Slade Warner from the star-lit steeple of St. Stephen's Church. As revelers read their programs and chose which events to see, many made their way through food courts of clam chowder, chili, cornbread, gourmet desserts, biscotti and more.

Children, and even some adults, were seen wearing painted faces and glow necklaces as they rode the hayride, laughed at Joe Howard's magic or were mesmerized by the Brown Bag Opera.

Ian Massie, the Scottish bagpiper, filled the air with his music all night long and the wandering slight-of-hand magician, Stevie the K, visited every building, surprising the crowds.

Chuck Morris and his sidewalk blues band were a definite hit, with people requesting he return next year.

Favorites from last year included the Jazz Quartet at the Meetinghouse, who again played to a standing-room-only crowd; the Dartmouth College Dodecs; the A Capella Singing Group; Cohasset's own singer and songwriter, David Crossland, and Dance Visions.

Between all these great acts and more, the bowling, rock 'n roll and art exhibits, there was never a dull moment!

But the thing that shone through the most was the camraderie and community spirit as everyone enjoyed the evening and each other!

Randolph keeps skaters winless, 5-2

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Strong forechecking was the message Buddy Yandle wanted to get across to his Randolph High hockey team, heading into its New Year's Eve clash with Cohasset.

He wanted to see it consistently for 45 minutes.

The Blue Devils were obviously up to the task as Randolph outmuscled the Skippers all evening for a 5-2 win at Hingham's Pilgrim Arena.

"Our initial game plan was to work on our forechecking," said Yandle. "We came out strong and threw a lot of shots at their goaltender."

The game was a virtual compare and contrast of two teams heading in opposite directions.

The win was Randolph's third on the season (3-2-1) and equaled the number of victories the team had all of the '92-93 season. Yandle said the team was aiming for a .500 season. "Anything over that would be a feather in the cap," he said.

For Cohasset, the loss was the sixth in as many games. And although the team is young and relatively inexperienced, head coach Dennis Walsh was disappointed with his squad's effort against the bigger, Blue Devils team.

"They're physical," he said, "but we can play physical too. "They did the better job forechecking and we weren't playing the body the way we should."

Rather than have a man go into the corner one-on-one, Yandle sent two in and positioned a player near the blue line instead of in front of the net. The pair in the corner won nearly every battle along the boards, would work the puck back, and only then, head towards the net.

"We put players in scoring positions," he said.

Cohasset's seventh-grade goaltender, Kyle Bunstein, started his first game of the season between the posts for the Skippers and wound up with 31 saves on the game.

Walsh was impressed with his goalie's play. "We thought we'd give him a chance to play and he did very well," Walsh said.

Bunstein robbed Randolph captain Scott Robson on two from in close as the final seconds of the period wound down. He was beaten just once in the first period on Chris Hathaway's slap shot through traffic at the 6:37 mark, but was deluged with 18 shots in the second.

Pat Reynolds tied the game with 13:41 left in the second, but the Blue Devils ran their lead to 3-1 when Robson notched No. 2 in a scramble in front of the net and Rob O'Neil beat Bunstein with a slap shot on his glove side at 4:40.

When Cohasset did get the puck out of its own end the Skippers had all kinds of problems putting together an offensive flow. Walsh said they "weren't passing the puck well and Randolph was able to capitalize on the Skippers' mistakes."

The Blue Devils were backchecking as well as they have all season, breaking up several Skipper passes and opening up 3-on-2 breaks for much of the period.

The Skippers caught a break in the opening minute of the third when Tony McGaughey made a beautiful rush the length of the ice, only to have his wrist shot bang off the cross bar behind Bunstein.

That type of play has epitomized McGaughey's season, so far.

"Anyone that knows our team, knows when you shut Tony down you take away 60 percent of our offense," Yandle said.

Randolph's remaining 40 percent of offense proved to be more than enough for the Skippers. The Blue Devils made it 4-1 at 14:01 and added another from defenseman Tony Cugini with three seconds left on a Randolph power play and 6:57 remaining in the game.

Yandle replaced goaltender Rich Stoller with Mike Powers at the 6-minute mark. Cohasset's Nevin Bunstein stuffed the puck past Powers with 5:23 left, but that was as close as the Skippers would get.

Skippers goaltender Kevin McKenna robs a player of a goal during a recent game. Cohasset head coach started seventh-grade goalie Kyle Bunstein in the Skippers' game against Randolph. And although Bunstein was impressive in net with 31 saves, the locals still came out on the losing end of a 5-2 decision.

Zadel weighing his options carefully

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Dave Zadel can't wait until the end of January. By then the 6-foot-5, 215-pounder will be through with his college visits and life for the Archbishop Williams High School senior will return to some sort of normalcy.

Every night Zadel, the first Boston Herald All-Scholastic for the Bishops since Pete Kendall, is bombarded with up to four phone calls, lasting in the neighborhood of 30 minutes each. It became impossible for him to get to bed before 10 p.m.

"What really bothers me is the schools I don't want to go to keep calling and I have to keep telling them 'no'.

"This summer, after my junior year, I really started to get the calls."

Zadel wanted to make a big impression this year for the Bishops from his position at defensive end and offensive tackle.

Last season scouts began to take an interest in Zadel and his quickness off the line. He worked extra hard with the weights during the summer. By the start of the '93 season he could bench press 305 pounds and squat another 450.

The sweat Zadel put forth in the weight room paid off. He ended up with 22 sacks and 123 tackles and was, without a doubt, that catalyst of Williams' line on both sides of the ball.

Dave McKee

by Joe & Dave

Like thousands of fans I boycotted Budweiser Beer to try and keep the Patriots in New England.

In addition, I booed the TV screen whenever Pats owner James Orthwein appeared.

However, this has not been enough. It looks like the Patriots will be leaving New England for St. Louis unless a megaplex bill is passed in the state legislature.

With this in mind, I decided to call Speaker of the House Charles Flaherty and Senate President William Bulger Monday morning to see what was happening on the bill.

I may only be one voice in the dark, but I had to do something. I could not sit by and watch the Patriots leave after rolling to four straight wins.

Anyway, I called the state house and got the direct number to Flaherty's office. (For all you right thinking Americans, the number is 617-722-2500. Feel free to give him a call. I'm sure he's lonely when he's not chatting it up with lobbyists.)

After three rings the phone was answered by a woman who sounded about as happy as Don Shula.

"Good morning, speaker Flaherty's office," the voice said.

"Hello, this is David McKee from Mariner Newspapers on the South Shore. How are you today?" (I always try to kill people with kindness.)

"Fine," she said flatly.

"I was wondering if I could talk to the speaker about his views on the megaplex and whether he wants to keep the Patriots in New England?"

"Oh yeah," the lady said. "Could I please have your name and phone number so someone, possibly the speaker, can get back to you."

I gave her my name and number and snuck in a quick question.

"Do you think the megaplex bill will be passed?"

"I don't know," she said. "But someone will get back to you. Have a nice day."

Yikes, nothing like getting "The Brush" on the first Monday of the new year.

I decided to give Senate President Bulger a call.

I called the state house again and got the direct number to his office. (Once again for all you right thinking Americans, the number is 617-722-1500. Feel free to call the Prez anytime. If you can't get through the first time say, "Whitey wants to talk. Pronto." You'll be in like Flynn.)

After two rings a pleasant woman's voice answered.

"Hello, Senate President Bulger's office."

"Yes this is David McKee from Mariner Newspapers on the South Shore. How are you?"

"Just fine. How are you?" she answered sweetly.

"Just great. I was wondering if I could talk to the senate president about his views on the megaplex and whether he wants to keep the Patriots in New England?"

Zadel weighing his options

In Williams' 8-0 win over Bedford High, Zadel was all over the field and wound up with 17 tackles, an interception, a sack and a forced fumble. His performance didn't go unnoticed by a long shot and Zadel was picked as "Player of the Week" in the Boston Herald, Patriot Ledger, Brockton Enterprise and Boston Globe for his play. He was also named to the Ledger All-Scholastic team and as a Catholic Central All-Star.

"I had over 50 schools looking at me, so I wanted to play well," Zadel said of his final season on the gridiron for the 5-6 Bishops. "I wouldn't think about college, though. My attention was totally focused on football."

Zadel has narrowed his college choices down to Virginia Tech, Wake Forest, Tulane and the University of New Hampshire, all of which have offered him scholarships.

"I want to be known as the last kid from the school to make it to a big-time school since (Boston College's) Pete Kendall," he said. "I play basketball, but I'm not that great at it. I only have football."

Known mainly for his explosiveness off the line, Zadel's only real drawback is his weight. He'd like to beef up another 30 pounds and is confident he'll be able to. Zadel is also realistic in knowing the chances of playing at a big football school during his first season is remote.

"In college, they have great weightlifting programs," he said. "I'll get redshirted, no doubt about it. But I'll play my sophomore year.

"I'm going to concentrate on weightlifting, gaining weight and getting ready for double sessions."

Zadel's workouts are intense and emphasize leg strength. The added muscle gives him more thrust when the ball is snapped.

He lifts "at least four times a week," concentrating on dead lifts, benching and squats.

"The coach here (Kevin McDonald) is really into weight lifting and he knows a lot about it."

McDonald has been a big help in helping the college scouts by providing game films and talking at length with them about Zadel and his accomplishments as a member of the football team.

"He's pretty famous around here about getting kids into school," Zadel said. "Every year he gets four or five kids in on scholarship."

Zadel is looking at a major in architecture or engineering and is excited about the step up to college football and school work.

"I'm really looking forward to it," he said. "It's going to be a big challenge. It's a tough major, plus I'll be competing against the best talent from all around. I'm excited about it."

Zadel did play football in the seventh and eighth-grade at Cohasset High, but decided it was time to move on when the program began to fall off.

"I loved the school and people," he said, "but the football was at a low point. It didn't look too promising, although it has been built back up."

"Could you hold on."

In about ten seconds, the woman came back on the line.

"You know what, Jim Julian, the guy you want to talk to is not at his desk right now."

I charged on like Leonard Russell on third down and short.

"Are they working on the bill today?"

"I know the house is," she said.

"Will it pass?"

"That depends."

"Is the senate president in favor of the bill?"

"I think so, yeah."

I decided to change gears and see what kind of person works for Bulger.

"Are you a Patriots fan?"

"Actually, I am," she said brightly.

"Did you hear about the game against the Dolphins. They won in overtime."

"Yeah I saw the highlights. What was it, the last game?"

"It might have been unless your boss does something."

"Well, someone will get back to you. But if you don't hear anything, call back later."

"I will. Have a nice day."

I was starting to sound like a weasel government PR guy. Like they say, when you hang around skunks, you start to smell.

I did not hear back from either Flaherty or Bulger as the day wore on so I called back in the afternoon.

The first call was to Flaherty's office.

"I do have that message in for you, Dave." the lady told me like I was her long-lost brother. "But let's see if we can do something for you."

I was put on the line with someone named Georgeanne.

I told her I wanted to talk to the speaker.

"You mean you want to talk to him personally?"

"Yes I do, Georgeanne."

"Well, I'll let him know you called. It is crunch time around here. We've received many calls on this. We'll add you to the list."

"Gee, thanks."

I called Bulger's office again for the latest info.

"Umm, Umm, he's in session right now," the woman said on the phone.

"Do you think I could reach him later?" I asked.

"You mean a time frame?" the woman growled. (Obviously, the phone calls were mounting at the state house and Bulger was feeling some heat from his constituents and the press.)

"Well, he's down in the chamber. I don't know what else to tell you."

"You can tell me the Patriots are staying in New England," I responded.

"I don't anyone who can say that," she said. "Have a nice day."

I did not hear back from either Flaherty or Bulger for the rest of the day.

I went home and had a Bud.

In Hingham, a high school basketball player, along with 11 other individuals, was arrested on criminal charges stemming from a Dec. 18 break-in of a vacant home. They didn't stop there, however. The group of punks senselessly smashed windows, bottles of wine and caused thousands of dollars worth of damage.

Just days later the hoopster was back on the court for the Harbormen's next game.

Schools have strict, specific punishments when it comes to students and student/athletes caught with alcohol and drugs. School officials should be commended for having buckled down and enforced these rules when the situation has called for it.

Of course, the argument can be made that the Hingham incident didn't occur on school grounds or during a school-sponsored activity. It is a police matter some have said. It would only confuse things if the school became involved and dealt out its own punishment. And isn't a person innocent until proven guilty? He is according to our law.

But what's interesting in this case is that police said there was alcohol confiscated when the individuals were arrested. A hockey player in Canton was suspended for 12 weeks after police found alcohol in a car he was in with friends.

Some consistency has to be formulated. School officials and/or the MIAA has to decide if a high school student or student/athlete will be dealt some form of punishment if the incident happens off of school grounds or if it will be left alone for the police to handle.

The opinion here is that the player should be allowed to participate on the team until some sort of decision is made by the courts. If the incident happened to occur on school grounds or during school hours then it would justify both school officials and the courts to decide the punishment.

Sadly, the Hingham home was not the only thing that was damaged. Through no fault of their own, other teenagers in the community will come away with a somewhat tarnished image, thanks to handful of peers who had nothing better to do with a "night on the town."

Marshfield's Matt O'Brien picked an opportune time to win his first two wrestling matches of the season as a member of the Catholic Memorial varsity squad.

Just a freshman, O'Brien was the only Black Knight grappler to advance to the finals in the recent West Roxbury wrestling tourney. The 112-pounder scored pin victories in his two preliminary matches to earn a spot in the finals.

O'Brien was eventually defeated, but he had a second-place trophy to show for his day's work, not to mention a blast of confidence leading into CM's Thursday night meet against West Roxbury.

Torin Sweeney had the chance to take a first-hand look at the future of Cohasset wrestling as well the status of the present squad during two recent meets.

And the Skippers head coach liked what he saw at both.

Five of Cohasset's seventh through ninth-grade wrestlers finished in the top four in a recent tournament at Carver High. Heavyweight Larry Adams took first and freshman Jeff Thompson wound up second in the 115-pound division. Eighth-grader grappled to third at 100 pounds, while Adam Sasso and Justin Buckley took home fourths.

Several others wrestled well, including Jordan Fiore, Bob Morgan, Ben Smoot, Mike Baird, Ben Littaur and Luke Caldwell.

In the popular Marshfield Invitational Tourney, Cohasset placed 12th in the 17-team field, but had four wrestlers finish in the top six of their weight classes.

"Based on what we brought," said Sweeney, referring to the number of

Bowling clinics set

The Community Center is offering a 10-week bowling clinic for grades K-3 Tuesdays, Wednesdays or Thursdays and a clinic for grades four and five Fridays, beginning the week of Jan. 10. Team participation is encouraged. Trophies are awarded at the last "pizza party" session. The fee is $36. Call 383-0088 for more information.

Wrestling offered at Community Center

Instructor Peter Buckley will offer wrestling for grades 4-6 beginning Thursday, Jan. 27, at the Community Center, 3 North Main St., Cohasset. In this five-week course participants will learn the basic take-down moves, the three starting positions and live wrestle. The fee is $25. Call 383-0088 for more information.

Freshman Erica Hettstrom performs a straddle-cut catch on the low bar at a Cohasset High gymnastics workout.

N.E. Health and Racquet expands

New England Health & Racquet announced the reorganization and expansion of its Youth Programs. Registration continues through Jan. 10 at 20 East Street in Hanover. Classes begin the following week.

The Youth Program includes Karate, sports clinics — baseball, basketball, soccer— strength training, nutrition and exercise classes. There is also "Mom and Me" aerobics for newborn through teens.

"In designing our programs we wanted to combine movement with creative arts in order to encourage young people to tap their innate creative resources," said General Manager Kathy Schilling.

"The most recent studies show that 80 percent of children in the U.S. are out of shape and many are overweight. Parents are becoming more conscious of the importance of their own and their children's fitness and the role it plays in maintaining good health.

Parents are encouraged to explore the many new options available for children (under 16) at New England Health & Racquet, the family sport and fitness superclub. (Drop-in babysitting for children six months to eight years is ongoing.) For more information, call 826-1300.

Schedule released for 1994 Bay State Winter Games

The ninth annual Bay State Winter Games will be held in the Berkshires Feb. 11, 12, and 13. Applications are now available for Alpine skiing and cross country skiing. Over 1,000 athletes ranging in age from 10 to 76 will compete in four sports: masters ice hockey, figure skating, Alpine skiing and cross country skiing.

ALPINE SKIING

Bay State Games Alpine Skiing will be held Feb. 12 at Jiminy Peak in Hancock, Mass. Two-run giant slalom for high school students. Applications available. Application deadline Jan. 20. Call 727-3227 for information.

CROSS COUNTRY SKIING

Bay State Games Cross Country Skiing will be Feb. 13 at Swift River Inn in Cummington, Mass. 5K and 10K freestyle race for all ages. Divisions grouped by age. Applications available. Application deadline Jan. 28. Late entries accepted with an additional $5 fee. Call 727-3227 for information.

FIGURE SKATING

The Bay State Games' skating exhibition, the Bay State Skate, will be Feb. 12 in Williamstown, Mass. Show features top figure skating talent from New England. Featured performer is Shepherd Clark, a national skating star. Tickets are $8. For ticket information call 727-3227.

Skating class on tap

Ice skating classes are scheduled at the MDC rinks in Weymouth and Quincy. There are weekend, evening and afternoon classes for children and adults.

The course fee for the seven weeks is $65 per child and $75 per adult. Sign up is held at the rinks during the week of Jan. 9. For specific sign up dates and times call the Bay State Ice School, 965-4460.

wrestlers, "it wasn't that bad (a finish)."

Ryan Freeman found himself in the toughest weight class of the meet at 125 pounds, but proved his mettle with a second-place finish. Freeman's only loss came at the hands of team champion North Attleboro's entrant, who finished third in the state last year.

Scott Theriault (152), Andy Church (189) and Kevin Duffy (103) finished fourth, fifth and sixth, respectively. Three of Church's wins came by pin.

Nate Caldwell had a big day in the heavyweight division by winning his first match of the season.

Cohasset's final tournament of the season before the South Sectionals is this Saturday at Whitman-Hanson Regional High School. Before that, though, the Skippers go at it with Scituate on Jan. 5, in a meet Sweeney believes is up for grabs.

"They're a young team," Sweeney said. "They're much like us. It could go either way so it should be very interesting."

Athletic scholarships available

More than 100,000 collegiate athletic scholarships are available each year to male and female high school and junior college student athletes. Contrary to popular belief, students don't have to be all-star to qualify. Much of this money goes unused. A new publication with forms, sample letters and tables of factual information is available for student athletes. It takes them step by step through the important process of getting an athletic scholarship, and includes college and conference listings.

For information on how to get a collegiate athletic scholarship, send a #10 self-addressed, stamped envelope to the National Sports Foundation, 611A Willow Drive, P.O. Box 940, Oakhurst, N.J. 07755.

New 'Step' workout schedule

The new schedule for Step classes at the Cohasset Town Hall are set.

The "Fatburner"/Intro (beginners to intermediate) will be held Monday and Wednesday nights from 5 to 6 p.m., and the "Fatburner"/Power Step (intermediate to advanced) classes are scheduled for Tuesday and Thursday nights from 6:30 to 7:45 p.m.

Special pricing is available for monthly sign-ups or 10-session cards. Drop-ins are welcome. Please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791 for more information.

Garden club to meet

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will meet at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday, Jan. 25 at St. Stephen's Parish. Coffee will be served at 9 a.m.

The guest speaker will be landscape designer, Margaret Conners who will discuss her design of the landscape at the lighthouse keeper's cottage on Government Island. She wiii also offer suggestions for home gardens.

This week on Pierson

From 8 to 9 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 6 Wigmore Pierson will host four women who are president of their business on the South Shore. Special problems faced by women in business in the 1990s, the current economic climate and tips for women thinking about starting their own business will be discussed.

The show airs on Channel 53 in Hanover, Hingham, Hull and Norwell and on Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset and Scituate. The public is welcome to be part of the studio audience at Continental Cablevision, Gannett Rd., North Scituate.

For information call Robert Belliveau at 545-2500.

After school programs set

The Cohasset Recreation Commission is providing the following after school programs at the Deer Hill School Jan. 17 through March 4 from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m.

Monday — Ages 4-5, team games and sports in the gym. Grades K-3, table and board games in the cafeteria.

Tuesday — Ages 7-12, drama workshop in the cafeteria. Grades 4-6, hoop games/ skill development in the gym.

Wednesday — Ages 4-5, low-organized games in the gym. Grades K-3, arts and crafts in the cafeteria.

Thursday — Ages 4-5, arts and crafts in the cafeteria.

Friday — Grades K-3, low-organized games in the gym. Grades 4-6, board and table games in the cafeteria.

The school department conducts a day care program at the Deer Hill School daily after school until 6 p.m. Anyone needing day care before or after recreation programs. Day care registration forms are available at the Deer Hill and Osgood school offices. Osgood children enrolled in the program will be bused to Deer Hill after school.

Registration forms are available at the Deer Hill School and are being sent home with the children. They should be returned to the recreation department before Jan. 13.

Fire-fighters' sick leave use plummets in FY'94

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Since Chief Roger W. Lincoln took over the reins of the fire department, first as acting chief and then as permanent chief — one budgetary headache seems to be on the wane.

The department's use of overtime for sick leave has dropped dramatically in the first quarter of FY'94 as compared with the same period in FY'93.

Sick leave hours dropped to 28 percent of the total amount of overtime hours utilized as compared with 61 percent last year.

I really don't know (why) but I'm happy about it.'

— Fire Chief Roger W. Lincoln

The chief can't explain why.

"It's a difficult question to answer," he said. "I'd like to think it's improved morale but I can't say that. "I really don't know but I'm happy about it."

In addition to hiring a hometown fire chief, the town also approved the first fire-fighters' contract in three years last fall.

Lincoln's overtime request of for FY'95 will be $5,000 lower than this year's or $106,367. Lincoln is requesting $45,016 for sick leave coverage which equates to 2017 hours or about 38 hours per week.

Sick leave reached upwards of 70 hours a week in 1992 propelling selectmen to ask former chief John R.

Winter goes with the territory for highway crew

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The third snow storm in three weeks has the highway department seeing red about halfway into the fiscal year.

The $45,000 appropriated for Snow & Ice Control for FY'94 is gone and the town is about $15,000 in the hole, said Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield. The deficit has been exacerbated because the department had to spend about $8,000 to fill its salt shed at the beginning of the season when traditionally there's been enough money left over in the prior year for this purpose. Last year the town spent $88,000 on snow and ice control.

State law allows towns to deficit spend their snow removal budgets. Gregory Doyon, executive secretary, noted however, that if this continues to be a snowy winter, the deficit could run as high as $50,000 which would have to be made up next year. Selectmen, who voted to authorize the highway department to overdraw its account, are currently engaged in budget hearings with all town departments in anticipation of the March annual town meeting.

The highway department uses about 16 plows and trucks to clear Cohasset's roads. The town owns four trucks and the rest are called in. Labor costs are paid by the hour. Litchfield said since Dec. 12, the trucks have been out 19 times.

Litchfield said because the frozen snow is so heavy and hard that plowing private ways, which are quite narrow, presents a problem. He said there's no room to

Despite Mother Nature

Cohasset's Post Office is perfect

During the continuing blizzard when the cold made furnaces strain; snow in driveways and walkways caused mega-headaches (and backaches) and generally gave citizens cabin fever; and school children got two days of unexpected vacation — there was still something we could depend on: local mail service.

"We delivered mail everyday last week under some real harrowing conditions," says Cohasset Postmaster James L. Hooley with a smile.

And it's almost always that way, he adds.

Logan Airport may have closed off and on last week but others in the state stayed open, so Priority and Express Mail went to other airports and was trucked into the area, making its ultimate destination to local residents' homes on time.

Hooley said the only time he can recall that mail service was interrupted due to weather was the Blizzard of '78 when there was a state-imposed ban on all travel.

He said the Cohasset Post Office windows were open as usual on Friday and Saturday, and attendance was 100 percent.

"It shows the dedication of the postal people in Cohasset," Hooley said.

He reminded residents to keep their mailboxes, walkways, and driveways clear so the mail carriers can do their job no matter how bad the weather gets.

Burning season opens

Residents can burn brush, cane and driftwood between the hours of 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. through May 1.

Anyone planning to burn should call the fire department's business number at 383-0616 each day and leave their name and address.

Burning of grass, leaves and hay is not allowed because they cause too much smoke, Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said.

Railroad effort supported

Although they can't attend, Cohasset selectmen gave their counterparts in Scituate unanimous support in their efforts to call out the troops to get restoration of the Old Colony Railroad off the starting blocks.

Selectmen said Monday they couldn't attend the Jan. 18 meeting at the Scituate High School Library because of a conflict with their own meeting next week. But they voted unanimously to join Scituate in sending a letter to Gov. William F. Weld supporting the cause.

Scituate selectmen wrote to all the towns in the Greenbush Line corridor asking them for their support. They plan to implore Weld to focus his attention and move forward on implementing the restoration of rail service to the South Shore. The plan is to present the letter to Weld with "all the attendant media coverage," Scituate Selectman Kevin Kinsella said.

A vote on Greenbush restoration was held in the spring of 1991 and won overwhelming area support with 73 percent voting to bring back surface rail service. With a 55 percent negative vote, Hingham was the only town in the corridor to vote no.

Kinsella said he thinks Weld will be sympathetic to the rail restoration effort in an election year.

Rte. 3A overhead crosswalks

Could overhead crosswalks on Rte. 3A be in Cohasset's future?

If the state road gets two new supermarkets, they could be, state officials say.

In a memo to Chief Brian W. Noonan, with a copy to selectmen, Safety Officer Clifton B. Jones said he was not in favor of placing a crosswalk on a highway that does not have a pedestrian light. His comments were in response to a recent request from Seavey Engineering for a crosswalk on Rte. 3A near the Jonathan Livingston Seagull Plaza so employees at Seavey could access the shopping center.

Jones said he spoke with officials at the state Department of Public Works who say that with the possibility of a new supermarket major changes may be in store for Rte. 3A.

"Traffic lights, reduced speeds, overhead pedestrian crosswalks could be a possibility, according to the Dept. of Public Works," Jones said.

"I therefore request that this be placed on hold until it is determined if and when this new market becomes a reality," Jones said in his memo.

Currently two supermarket companies plan to build on Rte. 3A. Star Market has purchased land north of Super Stop and Shop and Shaw's recently bought Cushing Plaza.

Annual road race is a go!

At the request of the Rotary Club and Cohasset Road Race Committee, selectmen gave the go ahead for plans to conduct the 18th annual road race 'Cohasset by the Sea' March 27. The popular event brings hundreds of runners and spectators to town every spring.

The race will begin a 1 p.m. starting and finishing at the Town Common. The race will be preceded by a walk which will get underway at 10 a.m., starting and finishing at the Sandy Beach Parking Lot.

"The event has become an annual ritual of spring and a major fund-raiser for the Rotary Club," said race director Peter Logan. "Last year the Club contributed more than $40,000 to Cohasset High School students and to projects within the town."

Logan also requested assistance of the fire, police, highway, park and animal control departments, "each of which has been of invaluable assistance and is greatly responsible for the national acclaim the race has achieved in the past," he said.

Framed photograph given

A spectacular photograph of the Town Common in winter with the Town Hall in the background now adorns a wall in the selectmen's office.

Selectmen graciously accepted the photograph donated by Lee Cisneros of King St., who also took the photograph, at their board meeting Monday.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

RESIDENCE REPLACEMENT RULE

QUESTION: We plan to sell our home next month. This will be our 2nd sale in 3 years. We deferred paying capital gains tax on the 1st one because we bought a more expensive home. Can we do the same thing again?

ANSWER: You can use the residence replacement rule to defer your profit tax as many times as you wish. To qualitfy, both the old and replacement home must be your principal residences, you must occupy the replacement home within two years before or after selling your old home, and the replacement home must equal or exeed the old home's sales price. Home ownership continues to be a great tax shelter.

Allison Moskow of the South Shore Art Center works with her son, Zachary, as she prepares a children's lecture series about the successful Black American painter Jacob Lawrence. She will teach programs at the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools next month.

Art Center celebrates Black history in elementary grades

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

Cohasset students will put down their textbooks and use their art appreciation skills in order to learn about Black history next month.

In preparation for National Black History Month, the South Shore Art Center plans to celebrate Blacks in the arts in Cohasset schools.

Allison Shutz Moskow, director of programs for the South Shore Art Center is planning a lecture series for Cohasset children in kindergarten through sixth grade at the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools. A Masai Warrior will visit the High School Feb. 9 for a demonstration of African culture. Dates for the lectures are to be announced.

Moskow will talk about successful Black American painter, Jacob Lawrence. His paintings depict the history of Black migration from the deep South to America's northern industrial cities. Born in Atlantic City in 1917, Lawrence now lives in Seattle, Washington, entirely supported by his art.

The South Shore Art Center has sent docents to schools through its Arts to Go program for about two years, but this is the first time the program highlights an ethnic theme.

"I wanted to pick a black artist who has succeeded in a rather unwelcoming white artist world," Moskow said. "The contemporary art market is dominated by white males. it shows how exemplary (Lawrence's) work is."

"He is someone who consistently painted the Black experience," Moskow said. "How many opportunities do we have to see the Black experience? Few. In that sense, it's intriguing for me. It's fascinating that the visual arts can be used (this way)," she said.

The lecture series will provide Cohasset students with a hands-on activity to learn about minority groups. At the same time, it will allow Metco students to celebrate American Blacks as they are immersed in a predominantly white school system. Metco students commute to school in Cohasset from Boston each day to take advantage of suburban schools. The program supports students in every grade throughout the South Shore.

"(In Cohasset) we have socio-economic diversity but we don't have racial diversity," Moskow explained.

"To understand people different than us is a huge task. To use a visual aid like a painting gives something tangible for the students to look at and understand. Maybe they will learn to have a deeper empathy for people whose experience is different than their own."

Moskow will focus on universal themes while she discusses the paintings with the students.

"I'll do it on a much more personal level; I'll ask them to look at their families, their schools. Have any of them ever moved? You can't ask a suburban white kid from this area to understand...but you can relate it," she said.

A Black family is depicted as they move from the South to work in Northern industrial towns in this painting by Seattle-based artist Jacob Lawrence. The artist will be highlighted in a school program for Black History Month at Osgood and Deer Hill Elementary Schools. The program is sponsored by the South Shore Art Center.

Moskow, who holds a Master of Arts degree from Boston University first learned about Lawrence when she saw one slide from the Migration series in an art class.

"His style intrigued me," she said. "I saw the piece of the puzzle — I wanted to see the whole puzzle."

Her curiosity led her to the Washington, D.C.-based Phillips Collection, which sent her catalogs and teaching materials for Lawrence's work.

With the materials, Moskow plans to develop a curriculum specially designed for grade school children.

"The Phillips did an excellent job interpreting each age level," Moskow said.

In addition to the discussion of Lawrence's paintings, Moskow will use poetry by black writer Langston Hughes in her seminars.

"Jacob Lawrence's subject matter is by nature open to inter-disciplinary study. That's partly the joy of sharing his work.

"Art shouldn't be in one environment. It should be integrated into more than one form of expression," she noted.

Moskow moved to Cohasset in 1991 with her husband, Keith, and their two-year-old son, Zachary. She has lectured with the South Shore Arts Center for one year.

push the snow to the side, so front loaders, which lift the snow and move it out of the way, will have to be used when it snows again.

"I'd rather have two feet of powdery snow than snow which turns to rain (and freezes)," Litchfield said.

He said the highway department uses a combination of sand and salt on the roads but too cold temperatures hinder its usefulness.

"It has to be 20 degrees for it to work," Litchfield said. "Two, three or five degrees and no sun doesn't help."

Once the roads are clear of snow, the highway department doesn't sand unless the police call and say the roads are slick, he said.

"They (police) are out all night patrolling and they know," Litchfield said.

He warned that residents should not push snow from their driveways into the road because it presents a safety hazard.

Gjesteby is MAPC rep.

Selectmen Chairman Martha K. Gjesteby has been reappointed as Cohasset selectmen's representative on the Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC).

The MAPC, a state agency, serves 101 cities and towns in metropolitan Boston in helping to provide a forum on shared local, subregional and regional problems and challenges. Projects to be reviewed and commented on involve federal assistance, state capital expenditures, as well as environmental, water, solid waste, sewage disposal and transportation issues which may affect Cohasset and other communities.

Ambulance billing update

The 1994 fiscal year collection rate for the town's ambulance service continues to hover in the 80 percent range.

There were 33 billed calls in December for a total commitment of $10,576.40. There were 33 actual ambulance transports in December, according to Jane E. Henderson, clerk at the fire department.

Receipts deposited with the town treasurer amounted to $5,761.26.

So far this fiscal year the town has billed $55,483.36 and collected $44, 521.58, an 80 percent collection rate.

The town charges a base rate of $195.89 per single ambulance transport. Use of oxygen, defibrillator or the MAST (anti-shock trousers) is extra.

Bill payments are okay'ed

Selectmen approved payment of $3,358.50 to Town Counsel Richard A. Henderson for his professional services provided to the town for December.

The board also authorized payment of $7,000 to Civil Design Inc. for engineering services regarding beach and highway repairs around town.

WE MAKE YOUR DENTAL VISIT A PLEASANT EXPERIENCE

around town

by Sallyann Chatterton

❑ Happy New Year to all!! As most of you know, we all celebrated the New Year in Florida where it was warm! Were we in for a shock upon our return; haven't stopped shoveling yet!

Mimi was diagnosed with pneumonia while there, but the warmth helped and she is rapidly on the mend, thank heavens! She'll be spotted around town before long; she looks great.

❑ We had a nice letter from Walt and Nanci Sweeney over the holidays. Walter is in the process of trying to get his knee replaced from all his football injuries. If that can be done, they are planning to head to Cohasset this spring. Wouldn't that be great?

More news on that as information comes in.

❑ Congratulations go to Charlie and Jerry Henry this week. They recently celebrated their 30th wedding anniversary. Over a sumptuous dinner they gave each other time-sharing in Aruba. Isn't that a super idea? Here's hoping we get full details upon their return, and aren't you full of envy thinking of warm sunshine and days of swimming?

Happy anniversary to a special couple!

❑ Those with long memories in town affairs will be interested in word of holiday greetings from the West Coast that Frank Knoy, a genial, contributing member of our community in the 1950s and 1960s, has reached the advanced age of 96 and is living in Costa Mesa, Calif., with his wife Edna. All of their four children are living nearby.

Frank, whose mixing formula helped smooth the conversion from manufactured to natural gas in the Boston area, was a water commissioner in Cohasset and active in Rotary and Boy Scout affairs.

Kelly Holway concentrates before she bowls during a special afternoon for grades K-4 at the Community Center of Cohasset. The event coincided with an early release day in the schools.

❑ Cohasset's METCO program got a financial lift and a bus load of locals a spiritual lift with attendance at a performance of the "Black Nativity" in Boston recently.

"Black Nativity" is poet Langston Hughes' stirring gospel-song-play version of the Christmas story, presented for the 24th year by Boston's National Center for Afro-American Artists.

Organizers Marilyn Adams, Joan Kovach and Ozzie Ingram rate the sold-out expedition an exciting success and thank all who helped make it so.

Proceeds will go to help fund a late bus for METCO students who attend school activities here. For those who missed this opportunity, the word is there will definitely be a "next time." Don't miss it!

❑ Dr. Jessica Baron of Cohasset was recognized at the fifth annual alumni association dinner held at Tufts University's Medford/Somerville campus.

Dr. Baron, newly named president of the Tufts University Veterinary Alumni Association, is one of 16 local alumni leaders Tufts honored at an annual event for service to their alumni association and the university. She is a 1987 graduate of the Tufts School of Veterinary Medicine in North Grafton.

❑ The Tewksbury family certainly had a memorable Christmas this year. Sara Catherine was born Dec. 22 at South County Hospital in Wakefield, R.I. Sara is the daughter of Lisa (Gallivan) and Thaxter Tewksbury of Charleston and here's hoping we see her around town when she visits her grandparents!

❑ For all of you would-be babysitters, the Community Center has just the course for you! Under the teaching of Linda Farrag, RN, students age 10 and older can learn first aid, fire safety, entertaining youngsters, nutrition and child development. They will also receive an extensive babysitters' manual. The course begins Jan. 19 and the fee is $30.

For more information call the center at 383-0088.

❑ Wig Pierson is a proud papa, and with good reason! His eldest daughter, Elizabeth, age 13 and in the seventh grade at Derby Academy, earned the headmaster's list with four A's and one B in the term that ended just before Christmas. Likewise, his son, Morgan, earned second honors at Derby! Congratulations to both of you for a job well done. Morgan is 11 years old and in the fifth grade.

❑ That's the news for this week. Please don't forget to call me with yours! We love to hear it!

editorial

Thanks for speaking up

Before 1994 gets too far along, we still have some 1993 business to take care of. Here at the Cohasset Mariner we salute the following local citizens:

Rose Kahn, Karen Hettstrom, Jacqueline Conant Whipple, Kathy Bryanton, Joe McElroy, R. M. Campbell, Catherine E. Davis, Gail Flynn, Harold W. Litchfield, John E. Conway, Bruce and Jane McLean, Janet MacLure.

R. E. Martin, Jr., Ron Bersani, John Christoffel, Marjorie Steele, John C. Loupos, Stephanie Church, Charles E. Santoro, Cliff Jones, Marilyn Jackson Adams, William MacArthur, Brian McKenney, Meredith Ann Hansen.

Osborne F. Ingram, Chester L. Hoogeveen, Scott L. Moe, Don Armin, Keith F. Knowles, Kenneth Ingber, Cohasset Permanent Firefighters Local 2809, Lizzie Kahn, Paula Knowles, Mary R. Vaughan, Jack Worley, Austin L. Ahearn Jr., Betsey Connolly.

Joan Wright, Merle S. Brown, Kim Maynard, Owen L. O'Malley, Sally Kakas Quebec, L. C. Jenkins, Gisley Souza Lima, Jack Cibelli, John F. Hubbard, Sue McNamara, Robin Grinnell, Lori Merliss, Deirdre Cummings.

Lynn Sheridan, JoAnne Chittick, Susan McFadd, Peter Logan, Patricia Welch, Debbie Flanagan, Virginia A. Ferenz and Richard W. Ferenz, Polly Doggett, Jeanne M. Stone, Stephen Arakian, Rhonda Myers, and Joan Cassen.

Some of the names may be familiar to you, others may not be. But the people attached to these names all have one thing in common: they wrote at least one letter to the editor in 1993.

A few wrote thank you's to the people of Cohasset or organizations for their help or support; others complained about a decision or lobbied to have their views considered; while still others educated us about programs, problems, or activities.

But no matter what the subject — putting pen to paper to share your views with your fellow citizens is important. The First Amendment is close to our hearts here in the newspaper business and at no time do we appreciate it more than when ordinary citizens, like those listed here, take advantage of their Freedom of Speech. And what better vehicle is there than your local paper?

The editorial pages of the Cohasset Mariner belong to you. It's where you can speak out or just say thank you to a citizen or organization that went beyond the call of duty.

Sometimes it takes a good dose of courage to let your voice be heard but we think it's worth it. Often one voice is all the inspiration needed to propel others to action.

To those of you that have thought about writing and haven't, please reconsider. To those whom we hear from on a regular basis, keep writing!

There are lots of weeks to go in the New Year — which will be filled with events, decisions, and happenings that have an impact on Cohasset.

Let us hear what you think in 1994.

Hurry, hurry!

Time is running out for the Cohasset Mariner's first annual 'Citizen of the Year Award'. Don't miss the chance to nominate someone you think is deserving. Clip the ballot out today and FAX it to us at 740-8955 or 837-4843 by the 5 p.m. deadline tomorrow. If you like, you can drop your ballot off at our Marshfield office, 165 Enterprise Dr., or at the Hingham Journal & Mariner office, 73 South Street, Hingham.

Action urged on CHL landfill report

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL) has submitted its final Environmental Impact Report to the state for approval.

If granted, it will be on its way toward expanding its dump by another 27-1/2 acres, as well as on its way toward turning its landfill, which currently accepts only construction debris, into one that will be a receptacle for municipal garbage as well as commercial and industrial wastes.

This trash will come to Cohasset from other states as well as other parts of Massachusetts, and it will sit along Route 3A for all to smell and to see.

I am writing in the hopes of reminding my friends and neighbors in town that now is the time when we must pay attention to CHL and what its plans mean for our community.

letters

If you are concerned, as I am, about the potential threat to our water supply as well as to other natural resources, and if you are concerned, as I am, about the quality of life in Cohasset and its surrounding communities, then please take the time to deal with CHL now. Call or write to Governor Weld; send a comment letter to his secretary of environmental affairs in response to this final Environmental Impact Report; contact your state representatives.

Tree& Park thanked for yeoman's effort

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Recreation Commission wishes to acknowledge their most sincere gratitude to Peter Laugelle and the men of the Tree and Park Department for their magnanimous effort clearing Elm's Meadow Skating Area.

Due to the wet conditions in the meadow, this past fall, access to clear the Skating area during September, was denied. The only alternative method of accessing Elm's Meadow to clear vegetational growth is to freeze the area at the low-depth level, then cut the annual growth at ice level. Once this is accomplished, the water level can be raised by placing an additional board in the Spring Street dam and freezing water at a higher level. While this method is effective, the effort necessary must be a trojan effort, hence, our gratitude to the Cohasset Tree and Park Department.

Elm's Meadow provides a lighted, outdoor skating area for residents of Cohasset that is especially safe, due to controlled, low water levels. Elm's Meadow is graded in a fashion that keeps water levels between 3" to 3 or less feet. The deepest portion of Elm's Meadow is along Spring Street, by the dam. However, at it's deepest level, the water is only about three feet deep.

None the less, skaters need to exercise caution when skating on any outdoor area and the following information should be employed as only a general guideline for ice safety. Common sense is the most important denominator:

Ice safe for	0-30 degrees	30-40 degrees	40-50 degrees
Single skater	1 3/4 "	2 3/4"	6"
Couples	2 3/4"	3 3/4"	8"
Crowds	3 3/4"	4 3/4"	12"

These figures are for clear, fresh water ice only: for snow ice, add two inches: for water logged ice, add three inches: if skates cut in - GO HOME! Salt water in mild climates is always treacherous - KEEP AWAY FROM IT! Also, thickness in 40-50 degree column are safe depths for short periods of time only.

Do not throw debris on ice to check for safety. This only clutters the ice, making skating dangerous, and does not give you an accurate indication of ice strength.

Recreation Dept. Director

GOP plans brunch for candidates

The Norfolk-Plymouth District of the republican party is sponsoring a brunch from noon to 2 p.m. Sunday Jan. 30 at the South Shore Country Club to met candidates for the U.S. Senate and attorney general. Former hotel executive exits fast lane

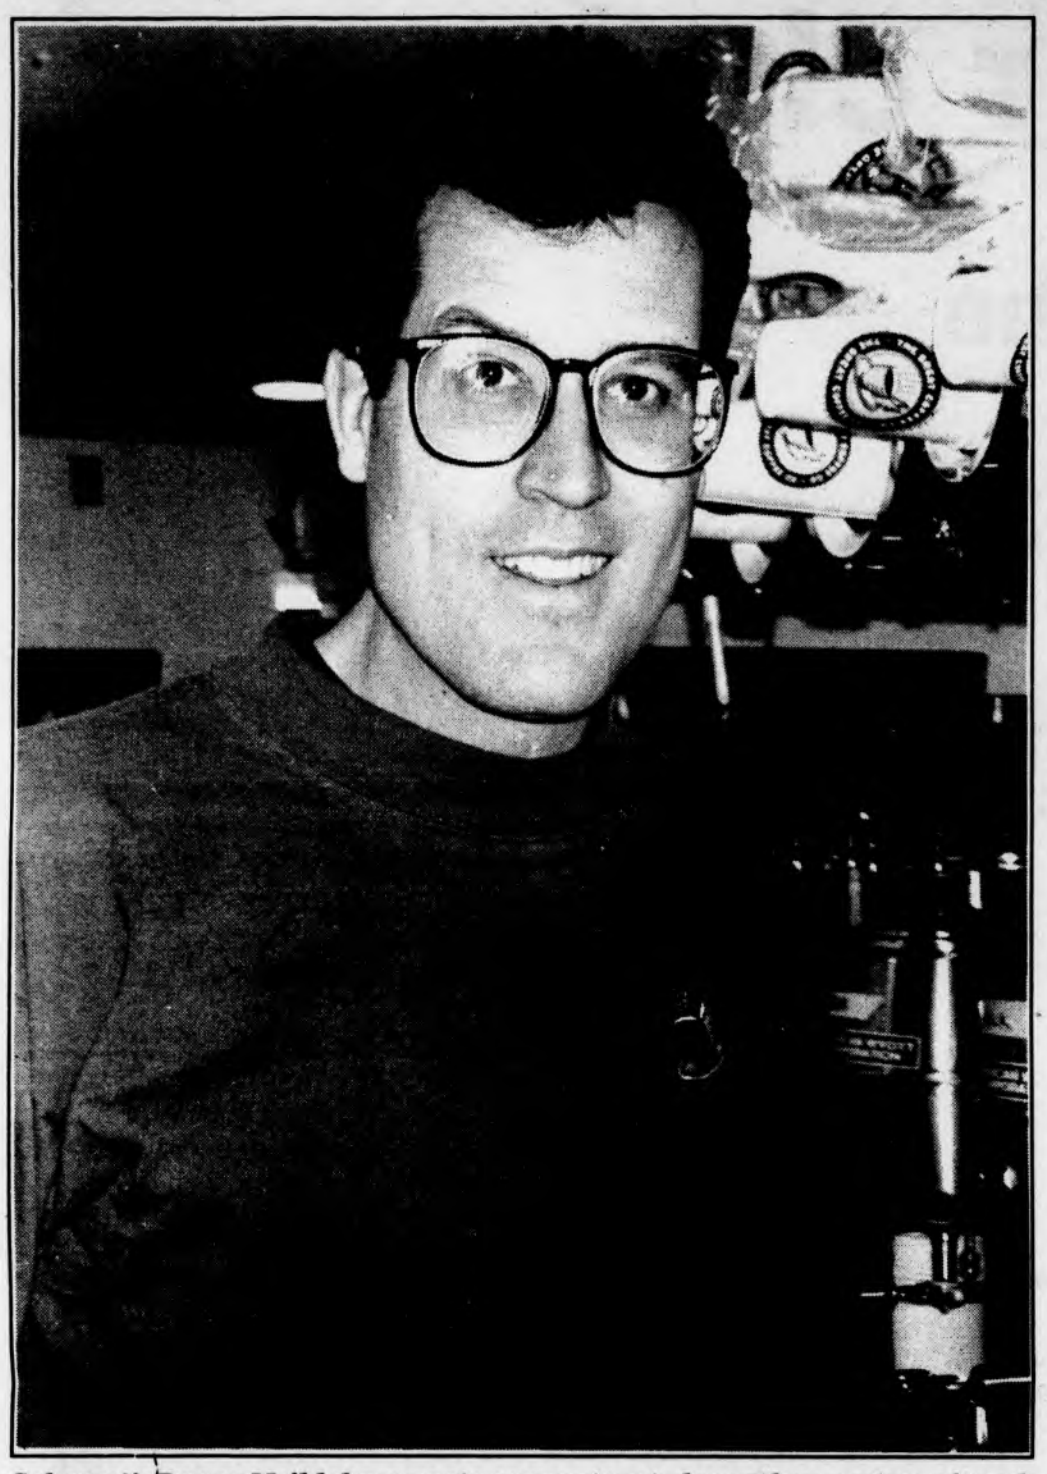
Gourmet coffee business is built from the ground(s) up



Cohasset's Denny Meikleham wants commuters to know they can 'pour it and floor it' on their way to work.

(Staff photo/Mary Ford)

By Christa M. Degnan
Mariner correspondent

With the opening of a small drive-in coffee shop, "The Great Coffee Company" in Weymouth, one may see the ten-year Cohasset resident and former senior vice president of development for Guest Quarters Suite Hotels, Denny Meikleham, as an 80's power broker retreating to a simpler life in the suburbs.

But in fact, he is simply applying the same corporate skills he used to help his former employer acquire and develop more than 40 hotels during the 80s to fulfill his dream of creating and running his own business.

Just as he analyzed sites, raised capital, and acquired property to help expand the Beacon Hotel Corporation into a $400 million empire, Meikleham founded "The Great Coffee Company" in the same way. But in following the vision to run his own business, he is involved in much more than financial planning and development. Meikleham rises every day at 4 a.m. to prepare his specialty coffees for the commuters he shared the road with for nine years in time for his shops 5 a.m. opening.

Instead of pursuing potential backers, Meikleham invested in the belief that hard work and dedication to both customers and ideals of quality and service will result in a successful business. The growing following he has found in Weymouth is proof of this philosophy.

Meikleham has developed "The Great Coffee Company" literally from the ground up. Measuring everything from the traffic flow on 3A to the water purity to the individual portions of beans in each batch of the gourmet coffee, he has calculated a formula for success — and incredible coffee.

Likening planning his business to preparing dinner for friends, he keeps his small kiosk spotlessly clean and well stocked. Actually, he used friends , who are coffee lovers, to test the suppliers of his coffee beans.

'I want to go to bed at night knowing I make great coffee.'

— Denny Meikleham, brainchild of The Great Coffee Company, a gourmet drive-through coffee shop serving Boston-bound commuters.

Meikleham sums up this dedication to quality and service saying, "I want to go to bed at night knowing I make great coffee." Like a chemist or an artist, he's proud of his craft.

He believes he's giving high quality and value to his customers. For a few more pennies an ounce, Meikleham provides quality coffee to the growing number of people who are experimenting with alternatives to an ordinary cup of joe. Gourmet coffee, he believes, is "the last great inexpensive luxury."

When asked if he misses the glamour of the corporate world, he admits getting up in the middle of the night when the alarm goes off isn't easy. However, he's built something and he's his own boss.

Meikleham graduated from the School of Hotel Administration at Cornell University in 1977. He makes his home on Holly Drive in Cohasset with his wife, Susan, and their four children.

The Great Coffee Co. is on Route 3A in North Weymouth. Experts say that coffee is the second most popular beverage in this country after soft drinks.

Hot gourmet coffee facts

• About 51 percent of the population over 10 years old will consume at least one cup of coffee a day.

• While sales of 'regular' coffee have remained stagnant in recent years, growing just 1.5 percent in 1992, sales of gourmet coffee are growing an average of 10 percent annually. Gourmet coffee sales in 1991 were about $780 million, or 19 percent of the total coffee market. By 1994, gourmet coffee sales are anticipated to capture 30 percent of the market.

• Overall, 21.1 percent of Americans have purchased specialty coffee. Gourmet coffee drinkers are an educated, affluent group. Most live or work in large, urban communities. Consumers that have completed college are 49 percent above average in their consumption of gourmet coffee. Most gourmet coffee drinkers earn above $35,000 a year.

• Affluent singles are another strong market for coffee sales. They are 39 percent above the national average in specialty coffee consumption.

Nadeau to try to come to grips with the problem. Nadeau was able to get sick leave down to about 58 hours a week by March of 1993.

In addition to sick leave, other factors that drain the overtime account include vacation coverage for the chief ($6,400), fire-fighters' personal leave ($3,300), injury leave ($4,000) and call backs ($16,700).

Call backs occur when three men are required in the ambulance to treat a severely injured person, for example, and an off-duty firefighter has to be called to the station to cover, Lincoln explained.

"The fire department must be there to do the work for the people and get there quickly," he added.

Lincoln gave selectmen a detailed written analysis of fire department overtime needs breaking it down into estimated hours for each category.

His total department budget request (less capital items) for FY'95 is $1.2 million which is up less than 1/2 of one percent from last year.

Selectman Jane O. Geodecke praised Lincoln on his budget presentation. She added however that with town budgets so narrowly balanced the need for possible transfers should any glitches occur looms on the horizon.

"It's a doubled-edged sword, things may not happen they way we want with budgets so finely tuned," she said. "Let's hope it works."

Lincoln will ask town meeting voters for $15K for a new emergency generator and $25K for a new exhaust system for the police and fire station in warrant articles.

The exhaust system will pay off in the long run by reducing the health hazards of diesel and gasoline fumes, Lincoln said.

"Long term exposure to carcinogens in diesel exhaust fumes can be deadly," he said.

Lincoln noted that on-duty fire-fighters live, work, eat and sleep with their fire engines.

"Clean air means healthy employees and less sick time," he said. "Long term pay backs means less chances of disabled fire-fighters and lower station maintenance costs due to less build up of diesel residue."

The new exhaust system would connect directly to the exhaust pipe of the vehicle and as the vehicle is exiting the hose automatically detaches, Lincoln explained.

The practice now to protect against diesel fumes is to leave the doors open for five minutes after the vehicle exits.

Lincoln said all other area fire departments have this type of exhaust system or are installing one now.

The present emergency generator at the fire department is 31 years old, Lincoln said. He explained it is rusting from the inside out.

"Unfortunately this most vital piece of equipment would most probably fail at a critical time while supplying power," he said.

Selectmen said they would recommend both warrant articles pass muster with town meeting voters.

SAFE meeting on landfill

S.A.F.E., a grass-roots organization opposed to the expansion of Cohasset Heights Landfill, will hold an informational meeting on the proposed landfill expansion into Area V, at 8 p.m., Tuesday, Jan. 25 at the Unitarian Parish House.

S.A.F.E. welcomes and encourages all interested citizens to attend.

Board volunteers sought

Town Moderator George L. Marlette would like to fill two vacancies on the South Shore Regional Refuse Planning Board.

There's also a vacancy on the Committee to Study Town Government Structure, which is a Troika appointment.

Anyone interested in serving should write a letter of application and leave it at the Town Clerk's office at Town Hall.

ConCom agent stage set

Selectmen may have set the stage for the eventual hiring of a town conservation agent Monday night. Although the actual filling of the position could be more than a year off.

The board accepted the warrant article which would give the Conservation Commission authority to create the conservation agent's position.

Cohasset, which is the only town in the area without the services of a conservation agent, is in need of someone with expertise in environmental matters and someone who can interpret the Wetlands Protection Act, commissioners say.

Voters at town meeting will have the final say whether to give the conservation commission the authority to create the position which would also require approval of the Attorney General because it involves a change in the town's by-laws. Money for the position would have to be approved at a subsequent town meeting, adding more time to the process.

But nevertheless, commissioners hope eventually to be able to hire a part-time agent for about $12,000-$15,000 a year.

Selectmen approved the conservation commission budget as presented except for the requested increase in clerical hours for the commission's secretary Patricia Walsh. Commissioners asked for an increase in Walsh's hours noting the extra hours she puts in every month at meetings.

At selectmen's suggestion, Building Inspector Bob Egan will serve as a conservation inspector for a few hours a week in addition to his duties in the building department. His job conservation description and duties should be ready by Feb. 15, Executive Secretary Gregory A. Doyon said. There is money in the conservation commission's proposed FY'95 budget for Egan's training, commissioners said.

Selectmen plan to see how sharing the building inspector with the conservation commission works out before reaching a consensus on whether or not the town needs a conservation agent.

Gymnasts put Scituate behind them

By Joe Reardon

They can no longer play the role as the brash underdogs or the team of the future. Upset wins and moral victories are a thing of the past, thanks to an abundance of talent, experience and a savvy coach whose knowledge of the sport and its intricacies help give the club that added push when it's time to compete.

Like it or not, when the Cohasset High girls' gymnastics team ended Scituate's 11 year South Shore League win streak, the Skippers became the squad to beat this winter.

After dropping the Sailors, 120.35—118.8, Cohasset went right back to work with two consecutive victories over Duxbury, 117.3—111.15 and 116.6—107.8.

And although neither of the wins were the gem the Skippers turned in against Scituate, Cohasset easily won both meets to move its record to a perfect 5-0 on the season.

Head coach Ruthann Sargent believes her team was still riding the wave of its huge victory over Scituate and the girls' concentration wasn't what it usually is. She is well aware, however, that her gymnasts must remained focus and that there is a lot of season still waiting for them.

"I tried to emphasized that just because we beat Scituate, it doesn't mean we could let our guard down," Sargent said.

But on the same note, she added that the Skippers should go into meets focused on what they have to do, but more relaxed, knowing if they can beat a team of Scituate's calibre, they can do it against other teams in the SSL. Success breeds confidence and Sargent wants her girls to be confident, not overconfident.

Cohasset had a lock on the top spots in its Dec. 22 contest with Duxbury at home as Megan Pratt won the Bars (7.1), tied with teammate Erica Hettstrom on the Floor (8.3) and took the All-Around (29.05). Along with sharing first with Pratt, Hettstrom won the Beam (7.9). Jodi Colwill won the Vault (7.9) to complete the first-place sweep for the Skippers.

The winners also placed in other events and other Cohasset gymnasts placed in the top three.

Hettstrom finished second in the Bars (6.95) and her sister, Tara, took the runner-up slot in the Vault (7.75). Colwill and Tara Hettstrom completed a Skipper sweep in the Floor, finishing second and third, respectively, with a 7.6 and 7.5. Colwill wound up just behind Pratt in the All-Around with a score of 28.65.

The Jan. 6 meet was almost a carbon copy of the first with the Skippers sweeping first in every event except the Vault and taking the top three in the Bars and Beam.

Pratt's 7.0 edged out Erica Hettstrom (6.9) and Tara Hettstrom (6.5) in the Bars, while Tafana Fiore took the Beam in 7.9. Colwill (7.5) and Erica Hettstrom (7.2) rounded out the sweep.

Erica Hettstrom (8.1) and Pratt (7.5) finished 1-2 in the Floor, and Colwill and Tara Hettstrom tied for third in the Vault at 7.6.

Erica Hettstrom was the All-Around winner (29.7) in front of Colwill's 28.9.

Gymnastic openings at center

The Community Center of Cohasset still has openings in a variety of gymnastic classes for boys and girls of all ages and levels. Classes are offered Monday through Saturday.

The center's staff consists of coaching director Ruthann Sargent, assistant Patti Donahue, and staff members Tiffany Madeiras, Susie O'Brien, Karen Clemente, and Rich Bonano.

Upcoming events include February Vacation Camp for girls, also March 4, "Girls Night Out" for ages five to 10; and March 11, "Boys Night Out" for ages five to 10.

For more information call the center at 383-0088.

Winter, and the dismal weather that comes along with it, is the main reason we cringe when we step on the scale for that weekly reading. Let's face it, it's a lot harder going out for that 30-minute run when the wind chill factor dips below zero.

But common sense and a little intuition can actually make winter running enjoyable. You get a feeling of stubbornness by not letting Mother Nature dictate how tight your Levi 505's fit.

The most important thing to remember when it comes to cold-winter running is to wear layers of clothing. In extreme cold, start with a T-shirt, turtle neck (which also keeps your neck warm), another sweat shirt and finally a nylon jacket to break the wind.

Your legs warm up much quicker and usually require a pair of running tights or long underwear with nylon pants over them.

It's crucial to wear a hat and gloves as well. More than 50 percent of a person's body heat is lost through the head. And no matter how well you are prepared for a run, if your hands aren't covered, I guarantee you'll be miserable the entire way. Painters gloves are the most practical. They're light and keep your

Grapplers take win over Scituate

Cohasset High School placed sixth place overall in last Sunday's wrestling tournament held at Whitman/Hanson High School.

After a decisive win over Scituate High last week, Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney reported that Cohasset's record now stands at 1-1.

In the Whitman/Hanson tourney, Cohasset's 125-pound Ryan Freeman finished in first place, and 139-pound Andy Church placing third overall. Teammate Dan Silva, a 171-pound wrestler, was a fourth-place finisher in the tourney.

Sweeney reported that in the 48-27 victory over Scituate last week, five Cohasset wrestlers recorded pins including Jeff Thompson at 112 pounds; Brian Duffy at 119 pounds; 125-pound Freeman; Brandon DeVoe at 145 pounds, and 152-pound Scott Theriault.

Cohasset was slated to meet Carver High School on the mats this week, with a tournament scheduled Saturday against Sharon and Foxboro.

Wrestling offered at Community Center

Instructor Peter Buckley will offer wrestling for grades 4-6 beginning Thursday, Jan. 27, at the Community Center, 3 North Main St., Cohasset. In this five-week course participants will learn the basic take-down moves, the three starting positions and live wrestle. Call 383-0088 for more information.

sands amazingly warm. You can pick up a pair (or five) at your local hardware store.

When Bill Rodgers set the American Record in the 1979 Boston Marathon, he wore a thick wool cap and painters gloves. It was the only protection he had against the 40-degree weather and spitting rain. Yet, Rodgers was comfortable the entire way. His only real problem was the fact that he had a pressing need to "relieve" himself the last 10 miles.

When running in snow, remember to slow down and be careful of your footing. You're not going to be able to run your normal pace anyway so why try and force the issue. Slow down even more when taking sharp corners to avoid slick ice that may be covered by snow.

You can also get in some great resistance running during the winter by running in deep snow. One of the best places on the South Shore for this type of workout is on the various Hingham High School fields.

The deep snow forces you to lift your knees higher. Run a bit harder during these runs and concentrate on form.

A great workout in these conditions is "Master Blasters." I was first introduced to this workout by former Bridgewater State cross country coach John Laverty during my freshman year in 1983. We would do a 30-minute warm-up and then start right in running one minute hard and two minutes easy. The workout would end with an easy 30 minute cool-down jog.

The "Master Blasters" served in preparing a runner to handle the surges and erratic pacing that goes hand-in-hand with cross country racing. The workout could also be modified to fit the shape a runner was in at the time. For example, a novice might run hard for 30 seconds with a 1—1/2 minute rest. Bridgewater's best runner at the time worked his way up to 90 seconds hard, 90 seconds easy. Believe me, it was a lot tougher than it sounded. I was in the best shape of my life, but could only do three at that pace before going back to the more sane, one minute/two minute drill.

It's important not to become frustrated with your winter training. The work you put in now will pay off in the spring when the roads clear, the temperature rises and the road race and outdoor track seasons swing into full gear.

First a mother from Texas plots to "rub out" a high school cheerleader so her daughter will be picked for the team. Then No. 1 ranked tennis player Monica Seles gets a knife in the back because some nut bag decides Steffi Graf should be queen of the courts.

And now we have lunatic number three beat figure skater Nancy Kerrigan's knee with a tire iron, the day before the short program in the U.S. Figure Skating Championships. The top-two finishers qualify for the Olympics in February.

What can be done about these animals? More security can be added to protect the competitors, but the truth of the matter is a person cannot possibly be completely safe from someone who wants to get at them. It's a sad commentary when two fierce competitors like Seles and Kerrigan will now be looking over their shoulders in fear of who may be lurking behind them.

I received a phone call last week from an individual involved in the Hanover Youth Hockey Association who, along with others from Hanover, was upset with my feature on the Sharks hockey team.

He said I was "irresponsible" with some of the quotes I used, particularly with Sharks head coach Greg Coady's comment, "Town hockey works at a political level. It's all BS."

The caller then went on to say I was "manipulated" by the coaches and didn't get the other side of the story from the town coaches.

Since when do I have to get the other side of a feature story? The article was not a compare and contrast of the Sharks and local squads. It was a feature article on the Sharks. And I don't necessarily agree with quotes I write down in my notebook.

Coady did not specifically refer to Hanover when he made his comment, which by the way, he had every right to make, whether people agreed with him or not.

And it's not exactly a secret that, to a certain extent, politics are alive and well in all youth sports, including hockey, baseball and basketball. They were when I was playing Little League baseball in the mid-70's and they still are. But for someone to actually have the guts enough to comment on it in the newspaper is a different story all together. You can do it, but you can't talk about it? Sounds pretty hypocritical.

The individual I spoke with said the parents and coaches sacrifice a lot and he pointed out it's a huge commitment and very time consuming. I completely agree. I always have and always will. I also believe much of the "politics" that goes on in youth sports is simply a result of parents wanting the best for their kids; to see them play a fair amount of time and have fun in the process. Hey, I'll probably be the same way when I become a parent and my son or daughter plays youth sports, if he or she doesn't decide to take up the trombone instead.

What this all boils down to is that the caller said he was in the process of persuading people to cancel their subscriptions to the Hanover Mariner and for coaches to stop sending in game results. And this, supposedly, is all my fault.

Of course, it's the kids who won't have the clips to look back on; a hattrick here, a game-winning goal there. And for what? A coach making a few comments that ruffled some feathers?

Parents have every right to disagree and be angry with an article or feature. The best way to vent that anger is through a letter to the editor or a direct call to me. Curse me out, but to stop contributing game results only hurts the kids and nobody else.

New 'Step' workout schedule

The new schedule for Step classes at the Cohasset Town Hall are set.

The "Fatburner"/Intro (beginners to intermediate) will be held Monday and Wednesday nights from 5 to 6 p.m., and the "Fatburner"/Power Step (intermediate to advanced) classes are scheduled for Tuesday and Thursday nights from 6:30 to 7:45 p.m.

Special pricing is available for monthly sign-ups or 10-session cards. Drop-ins are welcome. Please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791 for more information.

Bowling clinics set

The Community Center is offering a 10-week bowling clinic for grades K-3 Tuesdays, Wednesdays or Thursdays and a clinic for grades four and five Fridays, beginning the week of Jan. 10. Team participation is encouraged. Trophies are awarded at the last "pizza party" session. Call 383-0088 for more information.

Floor hockey leagues offered

Winter floor hockey leagues in Hingham are available for teams in men's divisions, men's 30 and over, women's, junior (18 and under), cadet (16 and under). For more information and application, please call Ted Carroll at (617) 740-1105.

Athletic scholarships available

More than 100,000 collegiate athletic scholarships are available each year to male and female high school and junior college student athletes. Contrary to popular belief, students don't have to be all-star to qualify. Much of this money goes unused. A new publication with forms, sample letters and tables of factual information is available for student athletes. It takes them step by step through the important process of getting an athletic scholarship, and includes college and conference listings.

For information on how to get a collegiate athletic scholarship, send a #10 self-addressed, stamped envelope to the National Sports Foundation, 611A Willow Drive, P.O. Box 940, Oakhurst, N.J. 07755.

Jr. Voices change venue

Junior Voices will hold registration Tuesday Jan. 18 at St. John's Church, 172 Main St. (corner of Water St.), Hingham. Children in grades 2 and 3 will meet from 3:45 to 4:45 p.m. and those in grades 4, 5 and 6 will meet from 4:15 to 5:30 p.m.

Each hour's activities include games, songs, exercises and drills to improve music reading and singing.

Separate levels for beginning younger children and older and returning singers are scheduled with an overlapping full group time .

The children will be performing as a chorus several times, so a serious commitment to the weekly rehearsal/class is required. No audition is necessary, but children considering enrollment should have a strong love of singing, good attention span and ability to match pitches accurately. Highlights of the grade 4 through 6 schedule include:

April 5 — Sing and Pizza Party in Hingham with PALS chorus of Brookline;

April 20 through 24 — tour to Mercer Island, Wash.;

May 6 — Joint Concert with The Broad Cove Chorale, a women's chorus.

For information call Margo Euler, director at 749-6561.

Community gardeners meet

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will meet at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday, Jan. 25 at St. Stephen's Parish. Coffee will be served at 9 a.m.

Nursery school signups

The Cohasset Community Center Nursery School starts registration for the 1994-1995 school year Monday, Jan. 24. Registration will take place at the Community Center in the lower Senior Function Room.

There is a $75 non-refundable fee to be paid at the time of registration. Parents registering their child in the three-year-old program should bring the child's birth certificate, or a copy of such, to ensure proper placement of students in the program.

Scholarship applications and Nursery School handbooks will be available during registration.

Classroom slots are filled as applicants are registered; spaces are filled on a first-come basis.

The dates and times of registration are as follows:

Current C.C.C. Nursery School students continuing with the program: Monday, Jan. 24 – Enrichment, 9:15-9:45 a.m.; Pre-K, 9:45-11:15 a.m.

Siblings of C.C.C. Nursery School students: Tuesday, Jan. 25 – 9:15-10:45 a.m.

Children of current C.C.C. members (as of Dec. 31, 1993): Wednesday, Jan. 26 – 9:15-11:15 a.m.; 12:45-2:45 p.m.

General public: Thursday, Jan. 27 – 12:45-2:45 p.m.

The school offers three levels of programs to meet the needs of three- to five-year-olds. Programs run from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:30 to 3 p.m.

The Nursery program is for children who will be three years of age by Oct. 15. The Pre-Kindergarten program is for children who will be four years old by Oct. 15. The Enrichment program is offered to older four-year-olds and five-year-olds who have attended pre-school programs but are ineligible for Kindergarten. It is the intention of this program to provide a rich curriculum, to allow children to experience success, and to build self-esteem so that they may enter Kindergarten with self confidence.

The Nursery School is dedicated to fostering the development of the whole child; physically, socially, emotionally and intellectually.

Questions regarding placement may be answered by the director, Lynne Sheridan. Parent observations are welcome.

The Cohasset Community Center Nursery School is licensed by the Massachusetts Office for Children.

School budget hearings

The Cohasset School Committee continues to hold budget presentations on the schools' proposed FY'95 budget starting at 8:30 p.m. tonight (Jan. 13) and 8 p.m. Jan. 20 at Cohasset High School. In these sessions the school board will grapple with budgets for Deer Hill and Cohasset High School. The Osgood budget was discussed last Thursday.

School Committee Chairman Nancy Sandell said the public is encouraged to attend. For more information, please call Supt. Stephen Hart's office at 383-6111.

Parenting workshops set

Evening parenting workshops are being held from 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 19 and Tuesday, Feb. 1, 1994 at the First Parish House, 23 North Main St.

These are the same assertive discipline workshops that were so well attended in the fall. The format consists of presentation, video, discussion and real home work to help participants develop and implement an effective behavior management plan.

Frank Fitzgerald, school adjustment counselor at the Osgood and Deer Hill schools, will lead this two-part workshop. Mr. Fitzgerald is a certified adjustment counselor and school psychologist. He has worked with parents in both public and private settings.

The deadline for sign-up is Tuesday, Jan. 18, 1994.

Call Frank at 383-6115 or 6117 to reserve your space.

Greenbush towns gang up on Hingham

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Historical commission Chairman Alexander Macmillan braved freezing temperatures and black ice to face a tough crowd and a tough sell on the Hingham's tunnel options. Representatives from towns along the Old Colony Greenbush line gathered in Scituate Tuesday night to put the train project back on a fast track. The meeting drew about 50 town officials and South Shore residents.

Representatives of Cohasset, Norwell, Marshfield and Duxbury selectmen agreed to sign a letter asking Governor William Weld to support restoration of

A neighborhood dispute about closing a dead-end street to through traffic turned into a legal debate over ancient land rights Monday as a local attorney squared off with angry residents.

Residents of the part of James Lane south of Cushing Street complained to selectmen that their tiny, narrow lane has turned into a thoroughfare. In a signed petition, they asked the board to have a barrier erected at the end of the dead-end lane to prevent any through traffic.

So corralling the Cohasset resident into an interview about himself is no easy task. Tinory is quick to turn the tables and be the one to ask the questions.

Skipper hoopsters surge to first-place tie

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

It was bitter cold and gloomy, with no end to the deep freeze in sight. And that was inside Carver's gym.

The Cohasset High basketball team played as though it was waiting for the frostbite to thaw in the first half.

Before they popped the cork on the champagne bottle, the Crusaders should have thought deep and hard about the Skippers' furious comeback from a 20-4 deficit to fall just short of Norwell by two points in its previous game.

Led by Joe Slotnick's 23 points, Cohasset once again melted away its frozen legs and mounted a second-half surge. Unlike the Norwell game, though, the Skippers took it one step further by serving up Carver its first loss of the season, a runaway 72-58 victory.

The win knotted Cohasset and the Crusaders atop the South Shore League standings at 4-1.

"These kids just don't quit," said Cohasset head coach Ron Ford. "For all intensive purposes it was over, and they just came back huge."

Carver smoked out to a 17-7 lead right from the get-go. The Skippers managed to work their way back to within five (33-28) by the half.

During the half-time break, Ford emphasized to the Meeting on landfill sought

John K. McNabb, Jr. of Cohasset wrote to state Secretary Trudy Cox at the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs in Boston requesting she hold an informational hearing on the Final Environmental Impact Report (FEIR) on the proposed expansion of Cohasset Heights Landfill.

McNabb, who is opposed to the project, said that the Secretary noted in her Certificates on two prior environmental studies that this project has elicited a large amount of public comment from citizens and town boards.

The deadline for the public comment period on the FEIR is Feb. 9. McNabb requested the hearing be held before the deadline in order that the oral comments and written testimony received be considered by the Secretary in making her determination.

"This project is very controversial and deserves the greates amount of public input and comment," he said.

Property overvalued?

The Cohasset Assessors Office is accepting overvaluation applications.

Anyone interested in filing must submit an application to the assessors' office no later than 4:30 p.m., Jan. 31. Applications may be picked up at the town hall. Office hours are from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Wedensday; 8:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. Thursday; and from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., Friday.

Printing bids are awarded

Selectmen awarded bids to Fairmount Printing Inc. of Rockland which was the low bidder at $15.85 per page for printing the town report and to Wm. R. Brown Printing Co. of Providence, R.I. at $27.50 per page for printing the town warrant at their board meeting Monday.

MBTA to hold meeting

The Citizens Advisory Council will hold a meeting on a MBTA feasibility study on transportation alternatives in the Greenbush Corridor Feb. 17 at Cohasset Town Hall. The meeting is the next in a series of monthly meetings in area towns on the study which looks at environmental impacts of six transportation alternatives including restoration of the Old Colony railroad line to Greenbush.

Legal bills are paid

Selectmen authorized payment of $847.23 and $2,257.64 to sewer counsel Goodwin, Procter & Hoar for professional services provided the town in October and November.

Hassan Sign hangs around Cohasset for 22 years

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

Cohasset residents know the work of local artist David Hassan, but they may not realize it.

For more than 20 years, Hassan has helped create the image for businesses in town and across the country with his original wood-carved signs. More recently, Hassan has created designs for truck lettering for businesses from plumbing services to catering companies.

With five employees in an 1800-square-foot barn workshop on Rt. 3A, Hassan serves clients such as Dauphinee Auto Body, Thompson Optometrist, Bergson's, Kimball's By The Sea and dozens of Harbor shops.

Right now, he is working on aesthetically-correct entrance and exit signs for the town hall parking lot, plus a job for a church in New Jersey, a restaurant chain in California, and others.

"I can go pretty much anywhere in the country and see something that I've done," he said.

Hassan's national recognition is growing by more than word of mouth. He was featured in the January issue of SignCraft Magazine, a trade publication, and in 1992, he won first place for design in the Gerber Scientific Products international competition.

The computer-sign equipment company sponsors the annual contest and rewards winners with cash and equipment. The rise of computers in the lettering and sign industry revolutionized Hassan's business, he said.

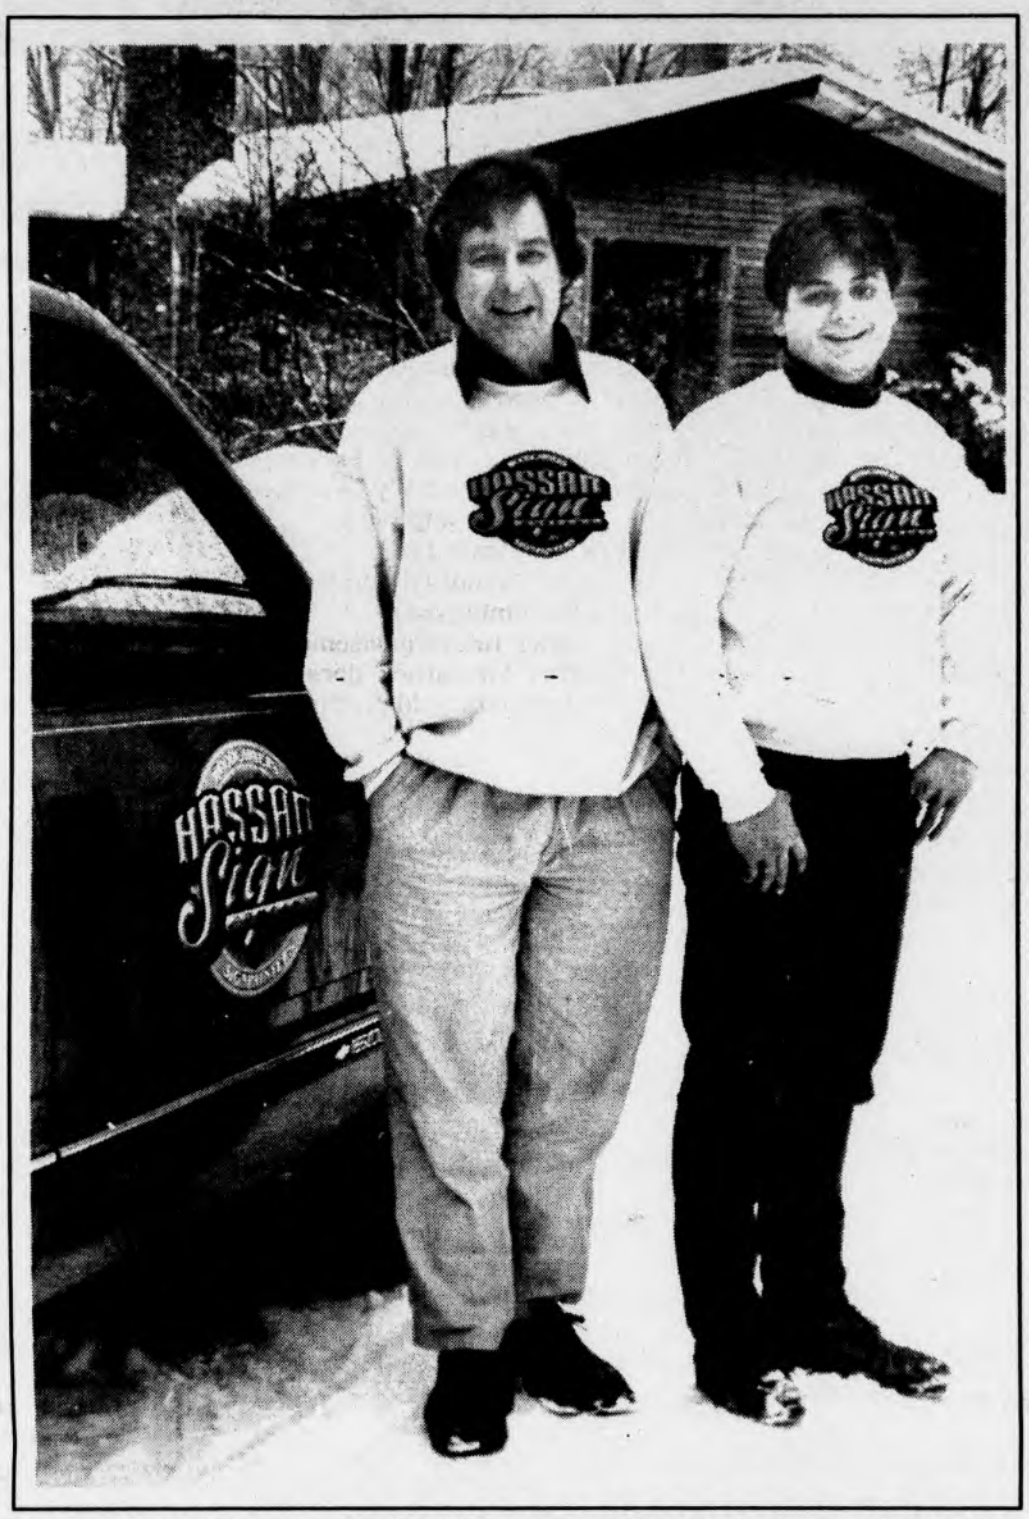
"The whole computer thing has got a lot more people in the sign business," he said. However, without design, the lettering won't look professional.

"I see more ugly signs with perfect letters in them," he said.

But Hassan is set free in front of a computer terminal, able to create new designs with different color schemes with a few keystrokes. He sometimes plays with his computer for hours each night.

"It's tough if you get six carpenters who all want their own identity," he said. "You just have to feel people out. I hear what they have to say."

The more he creates different designs, the easier it gets, he said. Forging out new identities for companies is a combination of craftsmanship and artistic talent.



Hassan Sign Company owner David Hassan and his son, Joshua, work together in the 22-year-old business on Route 3A. Although he still enjoys woodworking, David spends the bulk of his time designing truck lettering.

"But everybody is different," continued Hassan. "Carving letters is a skill — carving a portrait is an art," he said. "To be a good carver you really have to be able to draw."

Throughout his career, Hassan has received carving commissions as complicated as a relief carving of a Bruins game. One commission depicted the faces of a Scituate woman's eight children. The project took about 120 hours of work, he said.

"I was nervous about it because these are people's kids. But she burst into tears when she saw it. 'That's my Timmy,' she said."

In various ways through the years, Hassan has tried to pass along some of his carving knowledge.

He taught a carving class for 12 years, and he brought carving tools into Cohasset classrooms to show grade school children how his craft was done.

He started giving demonstrations in the Osgood and Deer Hill schools when his son Joshua was a student there.

Lately, Joshua, now 23, has been working for his father on mill work and sign painting.

"It's sometimes harder having my son work for me than some guy off the street," Hassan noted.

While Hassan said he has high expectations of his son's work, Joshua enjoys learning carving skills.

"He didn't have a teacher," said son Josh. "I have him to learn from. I might not be as good an artist as (he is) but I like carving. I'll find I carve a few letters and the time flies."

But Joshua isn't sure he wants to follow in his father's footsteps.

"When I was really young I was always drawing houses. I wanted to be an architect."

Working alongside the Hassans are Bob Giallongo, who has worked with Hassan for about five years, and John Bellefontaine, who has been with Hassan sign for 16 years.

"John started by coming here after school," David Hassan said. Dee James paints signs with Hassan part-time.

Finding work for the small carving shop has grown more difficult during the past several years, but Hassan said he rose to the challenge.

"I'll never get rich doing this, but I have a home and I golf once in a while — all in all I really enjoy the sign business. I still look forward to it every day."

senting the Fitzpatricks who own the property at 60-68 Pleasant St. which backs on to James Lane, argued selectmen have no legal right to take the Fitzpatricks' access away.

Although the Fitzpatricks' property has two driveways on Pleasant St., the family also uses James Lane to reach their home.

The traffic problem on James Lane intensified after the Fitzpatricks' son and the son's roommate became tenants in the two-family home in September and have since had lots of visitors.

Humphreys argued that despite current town maps showing a small triangle of land owned by a third party at the end of James Lane, "ancient land rights" dating back to at least 1903 prove that 60-68 Pleasant St. adjoins the end of James Lane giving the property legal access.

Pauline Keating of James Lane pleaded with selectmen to get the focus of the debate back on safety and good manners.

"We would not be here if the traffic didn't increase," she said. Keating also complained about noise from the house late at night which has kept her up.

Edward Fitzpatrick said he was determined to find out what his legal rights are.

'It's been Grand Central Station, I'll admit it.'

— Joseph Fitzpatrick of Pleasant St.

"I've been told I have an illegal driveway and I want that resolved." He disputed that noise was a problem noting that he and his wife would surely have been awakened by excessive noise and haven't been.

Fitzpatrick — who noted that none of the James Lane residents had called him personally to address the traffic problem — said he spoke with his son about asking his visitors not to use James Lane.

"It's been Grand Central Station, I'll admit it," he said about his sons' friends coming over.

Selectmen took the matter under advisement in order to investigate whether Fitzpatrick does have legal access to James Lane which would preclude the town from erecting a barrier there.

Noonan submits articles

Police Chief Brian W. Noonan will ask town meeting for $16,000 to cover overtime costs for the remainder of this fiscal year. The FY'94 overtime budget is in the red due to training two new recruits at the police academy; an increase in sick days partially because an officer was out for an extended period with a heart problem; and vacation coverage.

The town pays the new recruits' salaries while they undergo training at the police academy, Noonan explained. In the past the town has re-hired officers and therefore did not have to cover this expense. The town did request a rehire list from Civil Service this time around but there were no interested applicants for the Cohasset posts.

The police department is also requesting $38,174 for a new communications system which will set the stage for E911 service expected next year. The system includes a base station radio, five mobile radios with sirens ,and 20 portable radios and accessories.

The base station radio will have a 99-channel capacity and will permit Cohasset police to hop onto other area channels in case of a power loss, Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon explained.

Burning season opens

Residents can burn brush, cane, and driftwood between the hours of 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. through May 1.

Anyone planning to burn should call the fire department's business number at 383-0616 each day and leave their name and address.

Burning of grass, leaves, and hay is not allowed because they cause too much smoke, Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said.

World-class award recipient

Rik Tinory's life's work is music to our ears

The world-renown rock group Aerosmith has come to Tinory for preproduction work on their Grammy-award winning album "Pump."

Tinory also records and produces innumerable TV commercials and has been producer and arranger for greats like Frank Sinatra and Bobby Darin among others.

3M, which produces digital, audio and video tape, recently recognized Rik Tinory Productions' contribution to the continuing growth and advancement of the recording industry by awarding Tinory the prestigious '3M Visionary Award.'

The only recipient in New England, Tinory was in famous company. Other recipients included Harry Conick Jr., Prince, Mariah Carey, Michael Bolton, Dolly Parton, Bobby McFerrin, Hammer, Natalie Cole, Lou Reed, Randy Travis, Bonnie Raitt and Michael Jackson.

Tinory's story began when as an 11-year old jazz drummer, he started his own band. He later performed on the Dick Clark Show "American Bandstand," a hit in the 50s and 60s.

And over the years the grandfather of three wove his way through the music business singing, composing, and producing hundreds of songs.

A highlight of his career was recording Pope John Paul II's visit to Boston Common when the Pope spoke to a crowd of 850,000 people.

"It was the largest recording date in the world," Tinory recalls with a smile.

Tinory is the singer and producer on the local Boat, Home and Trailer Show commercials — the longest running TV and radio commercials in New England. Aerosmith recorded the audio tracks for their famous appearance on "The Simpsons" while working on "Get a Grip" at Rik Tinory Productions here in Cohasset.

Cohasset's Rik Tinory, at right, accepts the '3M Visionary Award' from John Heyden, senior executive with 3M. Tinory was the only recipient of the prestigious award in New England.

A lecturer on the music business at Emerson, Curry, and Harvard, Tinory hopes aspiring musicians will seek him out for advice.

"I'm very interested in hearing new artists and helping young musicians," he says. "A lot (of new artists) learn the instrument but know nothing about he business, which is very involved."

Tinory said it was by chance he came to Cohasset.

"I had just gotten married and I saw an ad for a house here," he recalls.

And he hasn't looked back.

"All four of our children have grown up here," he says. "It's a great town. I can't think of a better place."

RTF permits are available

Permits for residential use of the Cedar Street recycling transfer facility must be purchased no later than Monday Jan. 31. Vehicles without a current permit attached will not be allowed to enter the facility.

The fee is $65 for the year. Permits for two vehicles per household may be obtained at the same time for $65, provided both registrations with the same address are shown at the time of application. Any RTF permit application made for a second vehicle at a different time will require an additional payment of $25. No exceptions will be made. A rate of $33 has been set for persons who live alone.

Permits are sold in the supervisor's building at the RTF and at the board of health office. Payment can be made in cash or check payable to the Town of Cohasset.

the Greenbush branch of the Old Colony railroad line. According to Scituate selectmen chairman Kevin Kinsella, Hull, Weymouth, Braintree have written or called expressing their willingness to sign on to the effort. The signatories plan to hand deliver the letter to the governor as soon as possible.

Macmillan came to voice Hingham's interests, but said he lacked authority to sign the letter on behalf of Hingham. He also expressed a hope the letter could be rephrased to include support for the tunnel authority to make it possible for Hingham officials to join in the effort.

Kinsella stymied Macmillan's attempts to discuss Hingham's concerns.

"We are not here to discuss the merits because there is overwhelming support for the project by consituents," Kinsella told Macmillan. "We have heard your concerns. We don't want to know how to, we want to know when."

Scituate, Marshfield, Duxbury, Cohasset, and Norwell citizens reiterated their strong desire to have rail service restored. The Greenbush line was abandoned in 1959. They argued the economic well-being of the region relied on improved mass transit facilities.

After showing maps of the existing MBTA lines radiating likes spokes from the hub of Boston, Scituate selectmen chairman Kevin Kinsella said it was clear residents along the South Shore were underserved, at best.

Scituate selectmen called the joint meeting, hoping it would send a clear message to Weld. During his gubernatorial campaign, Weld was quoted as saying the Greenbush line would not be restored if a majority of the residents opposed it. The only significant opposition to restoration has come from Hingham.

"Eighty-eight percent of the residents of Marshfield voted in favor of restoration," Marshfield selectman William "Bud" Francis Jr. said. He added if a vote were taken today, given the gridlock on Routes 3 and 3A, "You could have gotten the other 12 percent.

"Route 3 has been strangling the South Shore for many years because it is inadequate to the needs," he continued.

Richard Prone, Duxbury's representative on the project's Citizen Advisory Committee, echoed those sentiments.

"For anyone who commutes, it is very evident the commute has gotten worse in the last couple of years," Prone said. "I frequently hear people say the South Shore is a nice place, but they wouldn't want to live here because of inadequate transportation.

"As long as we are locked out of the Boston job market because of inadequate transportation, the economy of the region is going to suffer," he continued. Prone was sent to represent Duxbury's selectmen.

In addition to commuters and shoppers from Duxbury to Weymouth, the project also has been endorsed by the American Automobile Association, Greenpeace, the Massachusetts Audubon Society and The Sierra Club, Kinsella said.

One note of caution was delivered by Macmillan. According to Macmillan, Hingham would not be able to support the project unless it included a tunnel under Hingham's historical district. He called on other towns to "balance your interests with our legitimate needs" and consider whether their were other feasible and prudent alternatives.

Scituate selectman Richard Blake said commuter boats only made sense for residents living within a few miles of the boat yard and working within the financial district.

"If you do not work along Atlantic Avenue or the financial district, you have upwards of another 20 minutes to a half hour of commuting time," he explained.

Macmillan also emphasized the unique impacts that will be felt by Hingham residents and historical buildings.

LeClair said residents of Grove Street and Old Oaken Bucket Road deal with a steady flow of commuter traffic from Scituate and Marshfield passing through their rural streets on their way to the Route 3 access ramps. Norwell, he said wholeheartedly endorses the restoration of the Greenbush line because it will end the onslaught of commuter traffic from Scituate and Marshfield.

Francis argued the restoration could have longlasting impacts on Marshfield. By making the town more accessible, areas of the town will be opened to residential and commercial development.

"We did this willingly and deliberately," he said of the unanimous vote to support restoration. "You cannot stop progress. Marshfield supports this and knows it is with costs to us."

Prone compared Hingham's feelings about the Greenbush line to sentiment in Duxbury when Route 3 was being planned. Many residents spoke in opposition to the highway because of the impact it would have on wildlife and the wetlands through which it passed.

"If Duxbury opposed and stopped Route 3, then everybody in the towns below would have suffered one way or another by not having access," he argued. "You can not make life better for the majority without including all of the region."

Scituate selectman Donald Brown had stronger words.

"What we seem to be facing here is obstructionism by one town," he said. He went on to describe the tunnel option as a red herring that will kill the project.

Richard Bowen came to Macmillan's defense.

"I do not think we should treat Mr. Macmillan and the other Hingham representatives like ants at a picnic," he said. He said MacMillan was attempting to watch out for his town's best interests.

According to the MBTA, the tunnel options could add as much as another $180 million to the cost of the project.

State sen. Brian McDonald, D-Weymouth, and state rep. Frank Hynes, D-Marshfield, also turned out for the meeting.

Both agreed South Shore residents needed to put pressure on Weld and the MBTA if they wanted the Greenbush line restored.

Hynes told the group in addition to hand delivering their letter, they needed to appoint a small group to "bird-dog" the project on behalf of the nine communities that will be served by the Greenbush line.

❑ Had a note from Keith Knowles, the new Chamber of Commerce president for the next two years. They have great objectives in mind for 1994 – 1. to promote additional opportunities for businesses with the existing base of tourism; 2. to promote Cohasset as a place to live and do business; 3. to expand cooperative activities with other area chambers and business groups; 4. to work with other community groups in developing a coordinated approach to holiday celebrations, and 5. to develop a strategy for attracting business to Cohasset. "You can count on the chamber to continue its proactive position as an advocate for Cohasset."

Aren't we lucky to have such an organization?

After a three-year playing career at UMass Boston, Amanda continues her career at UMass Boston as a graduate assistant coach.

Amanda is fulfilling her degree criteria by completing her student teaching requirements. She is doing her student teaching in the Newton School System.

At UMass she led the team in scoring with 14.4 points, and rebounding with 8.7 boards, as a senior, earning Little East All-Conference honors. She was also the team's leading rebounder as a junior, averaging 8.0 boards per game. Amanda finished her playing career with 701 points and 529 rebounds. She was named the 1993 recipient of the William Puerto Award, bestowed on a graduating senior who displayed an exemplary level of sportsmanship and leadership and made an overall contribution to the UMass Boston athletic department and respective athletic program.

Amanda is a 1989 graduate of CHS. She played four years of basketball at CHS, earning two varsity letters and helping her team to 24-1 record and Division III State Championship as a junior! She also earned four varsity letters in tennis at CHS.

O the beautiful snow

O the snow, the beautiful snow,
Filling the sky and the earth below.
Over the housetops, over the street,
Over the heads of the people you meet,
Dancing,
Flirting,
Skimming along,
Beautiful snow, it can do nothing wrong.
John Whittaker Watson (1869)

You may not feel much like dancing or flirting or skimming along after being buffeted and buried in some three feet of snow over the past couple of weeks.

But look at the bright side.

You won't have to tell the kids anymore what it was like in the Blizzard of '78. They have a pretty good idea right now.

You won't have to go all the way to Sugarbush or even the Blue Hills for recreation. The skiing is probably just as good a couple of streets over.

You've already had an excuse to stay home and curl up with a good book and a glass of fine wine or get reacquainted with the family — What? Janie's a senior already!

And, best of all, the whole thing will melt, certainly by April although there are those who would hold out for June the way things are going now.

Then the memories will be of nothing but "o the snow, the beautiful snow, it can do no wrong."

Increased dump fees hurt honest folk

(Ed. note: The following letter was sent to the Cohasset Board of Health with a copy to the Mariner for publication.)

To William E. Baird
Chairman Cohasset Board of Health

I read with great interest the short article in the Friday, Dec. 24, edition of the Quincy Patriot Ledger, "Cohasset Increases Dump Fee." My question? WHY?? Later in the article you answered, "the board sets the fee to cover 50 percent of the estimated cost of transporting the town's trash..."

In 1991 the fee was $52 per household, second sticker free. Allegedly some residents were providing stickers to non-residents. The solution! Raise 1992 fees to $75 for one vehicle, $25 for a second sticker. It was easier to raise the fee than have someone on site validate stickers versus license plate numbers. A decal-type sticker system was initiated for 1993. After much debate the fee was lowered to $55, but still $25 for a second sticker. Now we are to begin 1994 with an increase to $65.

One can go to the transfer station on any given weekend and see vehicles with no valid decal. Mentioning this to those who have the authority to do something elicits either a lack of concern or treatment as an irritant not worth addressing. I would suggest to you that instead of raising fees, put someone in charge, and hold them accountable, for ensuring no one uses the transfer facility without a valid decal. Don't put the burden of higher fees on people who abide by the rules. Instead, identify those who choose not to pay their share and deny them access to the transfer facility until they obtain the proper decal.

I don't know if what I have outlined above is enough to cause you to rethink raising the fee for 1994 but I will close with this. By raising the fee to $65 for 1994 the increase comes out to 25 percent over 1991. That, sir, is pretty steep.

Response to landfill plans sought

To the Editor:

I am writing to alert my fellow citizens of a very important issue now pending in the town of Cohasset. This issue is the Feb. 9 deadline for public comment regarding the proposed expansion of the privately owned, for-profit landfill, Cohasset Heights Ltd.

It is imperative that citizens know what is about to happen to our town. If this privately owned, for-profit landfill gets its way, it will be allowed to double in size! It will again be taking general refuse (garbage), causing more odor and leachate...something it had been forced to stop accepting back in 1988. The expansion would also increase the number of trucks dumping here to more than 700 (that's correct, 7 x 100) per day, six days a week!

For any citizen who has ever had a concern about this facility (even at its current size)...be it odor, ground water contamination, pollution of Lily Pond, etc., now is the time to speak up and be heard! Believe me, Cohasset Heights Ltd. would like nothing better than for you to complacently let it have its way.

Please exercise your civic responsibility and communicate your concerns to the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs. Don't let the important date of Feb. 9 be a date the town of Cohasset lives to regret. Comments should be sent to Secretary Trudy Coxe, Executive Office of Environmental Affairs, 100 Cambridge Street - 20th Floor, Boston, MA 02202 Att: MEPA Unit, EOEA File No. 7223, Doug Vigneau.

Thanks to all for holiday party

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Council on Aging would like to express its thanks to all those who worked hard to make our 1993 Holiday Party such a big success.

We would like to thank in particular, Buttonwood Books and Toys, Charlotte's Hair Salon, the Chart House, Kimball's By-The-Sea, The Red Lion Inn, and Stop & Shop for the generous donations of gift certificates. The gifts were raffled off during the festivities and the proceeds will go towards meeting the needs of our seniors this winter.

We would also like to acknowledge Arthur Roebuck, caterer from Hingham, for preparing a delicious chicken and rice dinner, and to Anna Abbruzzese who served the dinner. Helping Anna in the kitchen were Linda McCarthy and her daughter Stephanie, Nancy Anderson, Eileen Foster, Margaret Bates and Lindsay Guild. Their gracious and efficient effort was much appreciated.

We would like to thank Ann Leonard who, with Marie Parencello and Virginia Anderson, did a beautiful job decorating the room, and special, special thanks to Bob Davenport of Elena Sestito Florist for donating the wreaths that hung in the windows. Once again this year we thank Lou and June Simeone for preparing and serving their delicious punch along with the cheese and crackers before dinner. We thoroughly enjoyed the holiday music of Bill Winter conducting the great sounds of the Vagabond Band throughout

New plays are coming to Cohasset High

A varied evening of theatre will be featured at Cohasset High School on the evening of Jan. 27 and 29. A visiting playwright, the first CHS student/faculty/alumni production, and a modern adaptation of a comedy classic are all on the bill for both nights.

Coming from Missouri to see the first full staging of her play "Dancing with Strangers" is novelist/playwright Sandra Fenichel Asher. The author of many published works, Asher's writing is based in an honesty missing from so many authors who try to speak to, for, and with adolescents. She says, "There don't seem to be enough words in the world to illuminate that murky tunnel. To reach adulthood, a child must become more like his or parents. To establish an individual identity, that child must become less like his or her parents."

In "Dancing with Strangers," Asher explores three relationships. In the first part of the work, "Blind Dating," a teenage girl (played at CHS by Grace Deveney) faces her dependency on her mother (Karen Kristiansen) and feelings of betrayal after her parents' divorce. Rounding out the cast at CHS is Jennifer Vanderpool as the girl's best friend. In the second section, "Perfect," a high school senior (Diane Saldi) has a secret she believes will heal her lifelong loneliness. Bob Gentile as her father, Jennifer Vanderpool as her mother, and Nick Welz, as another senior complete the cast. The final section of "Dancing with Strangers" is as physically demanding as the others are emotionally, for the whole play takes place during an aerobic dance class for college freshman. Rick (Kevin O'Donnell), the only male enrolled, tries, in vain, to impress one of his classmates (Melissa van der Werf, who also choreographed the scene). The voice of the offstage instructor is that of Jen Vanderpool

"Dancing with Strangers" is being directed by Ron Emmons, who performed the same task for a developmental workshop presentation of the show at Choate Rosemary Hall last summer. Asher will join him in a discussion of the play after both performances. The set for the show has been designed by the director and constructed by Amy Silvia, Mark Whitman, Paul Snow, Eric Snow, Anthony Green, and cast members O'Donnell, Gentile, and Welz. The Drama Workshop will also perform "Dancing with Strangers" as its entry in the Massachusetts High School Drama Festival. The play will then be published in the spring.

The other new play on the bill is "Harold" by Gary Corseri. This work was also developed at Choate Summer Theatre School and will be directed by Cohasset alumna Erin McAllister, who was an intern there while it was being prepared. Unique to this Drama Workshop production is the fact that the cast is made up primarily of junior high students with two staff members, one high school sophomore, and the director performing the supporting adult roles

Rummaging through his attic, Steve (Alternative School director Jack Buckley) discovers a forgotten memento of his lost friendship with a blind boy named Harold (Bill Kearney). In the flashbacks that make up the larger part of the play Steve as a child is played by Ron Nicynski, Harold's mother by English teacher Jody Wood, the swimming instructor by Ali Ritts, and the adult Steve's wife by McAllister. Alia Afshar, Meredith O'Hare, Dawn Massa-Williams, and Leigh Atherton are Harold and Steve's friends.

What do Aerosmith, roller blades, '50s rock, Valley girls, rap music, and William Shakespeare have in common? Find out In the third production of the evening, "What You Will!," an adaptation by Ron Emmons of Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night."

A state finalist in Drama Festivals in Vermont, New Hampshire, and Massachusetts, this spirited update of Shakespeare's most diverse comedy is written in a story theatre style that should appeal to both young and adult audiences no matter what their attitude toward the Bard may be. The new settings for songs from Shakespeare's original play emphasize the freewheeling nature of the work: Orsino woos Olivia in '50's rock a la Elvis, and the closing song from "Twelfth Night" takes on a James Taylor quality. In addition, the play opens with a prologue written as a rap song.

Members of the cast include Jen and Rob Vanderpool as the twins, Viola and Sebastian, whose similar appearance leads to much of the confusion in the piece after Viola disguises herself as a man and goes off to act as a servant to Count Orsino, played by Andrew Henry. Viola soon finds herself attracted to Orsino but sent to carry the count's love letters to Olivia (Ali Ritts), who, fooled by the masculine disguise falls for the messenger. This is only the beginning of the events that make the play so much fun.

Other cast members include Karen Kristiansen as the madcap maid Maria, Nick Welz as the partying Sir Toby Belch, Jason Piersall as the foolish Sir Andrew Aguecheek, Kevin O'Donnell as the puritanical Malvolio, Mary Ellen Rayment as Sebastian's rescuer, Bob Gentile as a policeman, and Dean Volungis as the captain who rescues Viola. A chorus of narrators made up of Jessica Hurley, Grace Deveney, Megan McNamara and Melissa van der Werf complete the cast.

Playwright/director Ron Emmons has received much positive feedback from around the country since "What You Will!" was published. One young man who had played Orsino said, "We had so much fun with your work that we still want to perform it. I've never wanted to 'keep a play alive' for as long as I want this one to last. I could not have had a better ending to my senior year than ending with your play." Another performer wrote, "I thank you for making Malvolio the best role I've ever had and the most fun doing." A girl who had played Maria said, "Yours was the first play I read in its entirety without having to put it down and start again later. It was the most hilarious play I have ever read, and Maria was the most fun I've ever had."

"What You Will!, Harold," and "Dancing with Strangers" will be presented on Thursday, Jan. 27, and Saturday, Jan. 29, at 7 p.m. in the Cohasset High School auditorium with a $5 admission fee for all. There will be no Friday performance because two cast members are also on the cheer leading squad and will be performing in the gym instead of on stage that evening.

Parent workshop, Jan. 26

The Carriage House Nursery School will host a parent workshop Wednesday, Jan. 26 from 7 to 9 p.m. in Trueblood Hall of First Unitarian Parish House, 23 North Main St.

The topic of this seminar will be, "Communication in the Early Childhood Environment." This seminar will help parents to gain an understanding of preschool speech and language and will present activities that can be done at home to enhance their child's communication skills.

The seminar will be presented by Susan Turgiss M.Ed. C.C.C. Sp/L.

Susan earned her Masters Degree in education and speech pathology from Northeastern University and holds a certificate of competence from the American Speech and Hearing Association.

The workshop is open to the public. Coffee and dessert will be served. A $3 donation will be requested at the door. For more information call the Carriage House Nursery School at 383-9785.

Coffee with Ms. Gallagher

Parents of seventh and eighth grade students are invited to have their second cup of coffee with Ms. Gallagher, principal of the Jr./Sr. High Friday, Jan. 28, at 9:15 a.m. The meeting, which will be held in the AV room near the main office has two purposes. First is to provide a vehicle for general communication. The second is to give parents an opportunity to offer ideas for goals for the school improvement plan.

School budget hearing

The Cohasset School Committee holds a budget presentation on the schools' proposed FY'95 budget starting at 8 p.m. tonight (Jan. 20) at Cohasset High School. School Committee Chairman Nancy Sandell said the public is encouraged to attend. For more information, please call Supt. Stephen Hart's office at 383-6111.

Hettstrom, Pratt lead Skippers into showdown

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Cohasset heads into Wednesday's gymnastics meet against Scituate High in a can't lose situation. And while that may sit well with most coaches, Skipper coach Ruthann Sargent said on Monday she'd like to see Cohasset make it two in a row over the second-place Sailor squad.

"I think we're getting more excited about a second win," said Sargent, whose Skipper team dealt Scituate its first Pilgrim Conference League loss since 1982, earlier in the season.

"We had the attitude earlier in the week that it doesn't matter if we win or lose."

At 7-0 and in first-place as of Jan. 16, Cohasset is guarantied a co-championship and trip to the South Sectionals if they happen to lose. However, a win would more than likely secure first-place, flat out, along with place in the tournament.

Scituate is currently second in the PCL at 3-1, followed by Duxbury (3-2), Norwell (3-4), Carver (1-3) and Hanover (0-3).

So far, Cohasset boasts two of the best gymnasts in the league, and they have the scores to back them up. Erica Hettstrom has the league-leading performance in the All-Around at 31.45, while Megan Pratt has proven to be the best on the Beam with a high score of 7.5.

Both Hettstrom and Pratt took first in their premier events in Cohasset's 117.7—92.1 rout of Hanover and 118.9—109.65 victory over Norwell.

Hettstrom edged out Hanover freshman phenom Renee George (30.1) and Pratt (29.9) for the win. The Skippers went on to sweep the Bars (Pratt, Hettstrom and Jodi Colwill) and Beam (Hettstrom, Pratt and Colwill). Colwill and Tara Hettstrom finished in front of George in the Vault, and Erica Hettsrom and Pratt sealed up the first two places in the Floor Exercise. George settled for third.

Sargent wanted to work on "cleaning up form" in the Norwell meet after a hard practice the previous evening.

Cohasset had no problem handling the Clippers. Along with the All-Around, Hettstrom won the Beam (8.2) and Floor Exercise (8.2), leading a sweep of the latter with Tara Hettstrom and Pratt putting up identical 7.7 scores.

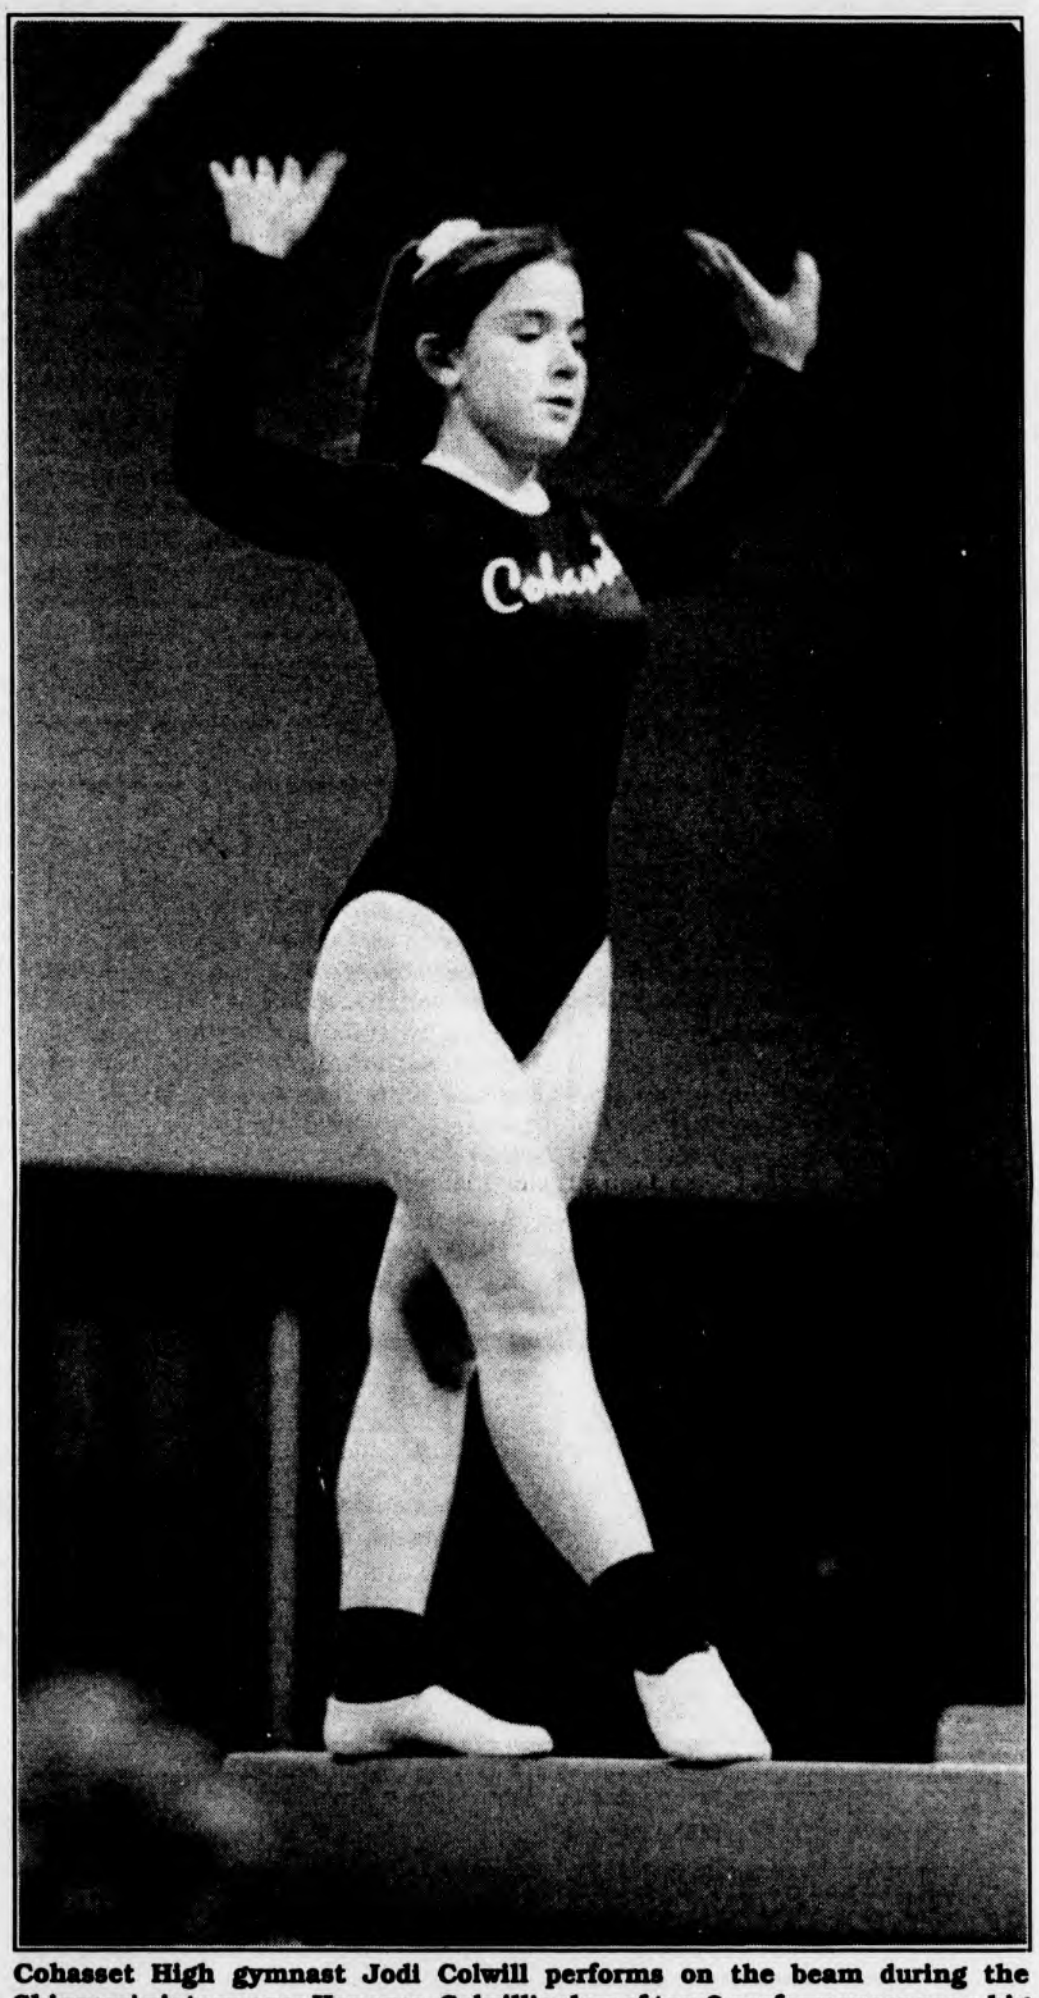
Pratt set her league standard with her first in the Uneven Bars, while Colwill recorded a personal best of 7.2 to edge Erica Hettstrom (7.1) for second.

Colwill went on to win the Vault (7.9), just in front of Tara Hettstrom's 7.8.

Sargent believes the key to a strong Cohasset performance against Scituate are more solid scores early in the meet.

"I just hope we start out well, because I think we have a problem at halftime leading into the last two events," she said.

"I'm trying to think of it as Scituate having more pressure on them if they lose. We're still in, regardless."



Cohasset High gymnast Jodi Colwill performs on the beam during the Skippers' victory over Hanover. Colwill's slew of top-3 performances are a big reason the Skippers are undefeated in the Pilgrim Conference with a 7-0 record.

Wrestlers on pace for .500 record

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

The Cohasset High wrestling team is on track to reach its season goal of a .500 record, and came close to two huge upsets in a tri-meet last week.

Andy Church scored a 5-2 win at 189-pounds to clinch a huge, 36-33 win over Foxboro after four of his teammates won their individual matches by pin.

"As long as we can stay close to that mark we'll be doing all right," said Cohasset head coach Torin Sweeney.

Skippers Jeff Thompson (112), Ryan Freeman (125), Brandon Devoe (152) and Scott Theriault (160) all won by pin, and Kevin Duffy took the victory at 103-pounds.

Cohasset, however, went into the meet at a definite disadvantage with Devoe and Dan Silvia nursing injuries. Devoe was suffering from a slight shoulder separation and Silvia had a sprained right thumb. Both were able to wrestle in the Foxboro meet, but Sweeney didn't want to risk further injury by letting them compete against Sharon.

Sweeney could only imagine the results if the pair had competed at full strength.

"If those two were able to wrestle," he said, "we definitely would have beat Sharon. Foxboro was an upset."

The Skippers wound up on the tail end of 45-27 score against Sharon. Chris Stevens (135), Theriault and Church all pinned their opponents, while Sweeney bumped Freeman up to the 130-pound

Stoneham's Nancy Kerrigan is not the only local skater heading for the Olympics this year. Pembroke's Eric Flaim has been overlooked in all the hoopla surrounding "Tonya-Gate."

Flaim, who won a Silver Medal in the '88 Games in speed skating, will be heading for his third straight Olympics.

Like Kerrigan, Flaim is from a small town and sacrificed a lot of his youth to become one of the world's best athletes.

And like Kerrigan, Flaim had his own brush with Olympic heartbreak.

At the '92 Games in Albertville, France, Flaim was considered one of the favorites for speed skating gold.

However, the night before his race, he ate some fish at the Olympic Village.

Soon thereafter he became ill from food poisoning and was sick the whole night.

He was considerably less than 100 percent for his race in the morning and finished way out of the money.

His Olympic dreams were ruined by tainted fish.

However, there was no video of Flaim lying on the ground screaming "Why me! Why me!" as he hurled in a trash barrel.

There was also no special consideration given to Flaim.

He had to race that morning no matter what.

And there was hardly a peep of protest out of skating officials and media types who have killed thousands of trees to print stories about the fate of poor Nancy and her sore knee.

Tough luck Eric, next time order the veal was the message in the '92 Olympics.

But that is not the case this year.

Nancy is on the cover of Newsweek, Tonya is on Sixty Minutes and the news media is devoting way too much time to this movie of the week story.

It is time that people put this story into perspective.

There have been many more important news developments over the past week than "Tonya-Gate."

Consider that:

A) The three surviving Beatles are getting back together to record.

And

B) Scientists have found skeletal remains of a whale species that walked on land. The find is considered the "missing link" between land and sea creatures.

Those items are really big news.

However, until the Winter Olympics are mercifully over or Tonya Harding is put into jail this story will not go away.

My only hope is that both Tonya and Nancy compete in the Olympics and skate so badly that no one even wants to talk to them.

I would rather see an unknown skater from the Ukraine win the gold before either Tonya or Nancy.

And the best way to keep Nancy and Tonya from skating their best is two words:

Tainted fish.

Just ask Eric Flaim.

First-place tie for Skippers

Skippers they had no other choice but to bear down as hard as they had all season to get back into the game, or at least make it close.

But it was Carver who drained the first six points, apparently taking with them the Skippers' opportunity to move into a tie for first.

Cohasset finally warmed up and worked their patented fast-break offense, catching the Crusaders on their heals.

Slotnick and guard Jim Magner (13 points) both made the most of their free throws in the closing minutes, dropping 6-of-7 to help turn what looked to be a Crusader blowout into a decisive victory for Cohasset.

Matt Pierce, the Skippers' sixth man finished with 19 points and remained the team's leading scorer with 16 points per game. It was Pierce who headed Cohasset's run at Norwell with a team-high 29 points.

What made the victory all the more impressive was the fact that the Skippers had lost two days of practice heading into the game and weren't able to dictate the pace until much later than they have become accustomed to.

"It has been a crazy week," said Ford. "The team hasn't had any continuity at all (because of the cancellations).

Ford said he has had two games cancelled in his years coaching at Cohasset. In the week prior to the Carver game Ford evened that mark with two white outs.

With the "huge win" behind them, Ford said the Skippers must look ahead to the scheduled games in front of the squad. Teams such as Scituate and Hanover cannot be overlooked by the streaking Cohasset squad.

"They're both doing pretty well," he said. "It's a big week for us. Neither one (game) is going to be a walk."

The Skippers hope the pace will be a little quicker than a walk. They've made it interesing, but it has worked for them so far.

The Skippers lost to Taunton, a Division I school, 3-1 January 12. Chris McKenna scored the Cohasset goal while his brother, Kevin, played a solid game in the net. The defensive unit was led by Co-captain Charlie Andris, who was paired with Anthony Wigmore. David Noble, Jarred Graves and Adam Donovan all played well on defense. Head coach Dennis Walsh's forward lines consisted of Kevin Bunstein centering "Bubba" Kinchla and co-captain Mike Riley, Pat Reynolds centering Chris McKenna and Brian Riley, Matt Lewis centering Kevin Smith and Mike Shields, and Ed Hamilton and Nate Cotter.

The Skippers then lost to Randolph 3-0. Cohasset played an outstanding game. They played well on both ends of the ice. The Randolph goalie earned his shutout by making numerous saves, including two breakaways.

division, where his top wrestler (13-2) outscored Sharon's undefeated wrestler, 5-0, for the win.

Earlier in the week Cohasset was toasted by defending Division 2 State Champion Carver, 48-6. The Crusaders, who will compete in Division 3 this season, swept every weight class, save for 125-pounds, where Freeman won by pin.

Sweeney, who predicted Carver will take the Division 3 State title, said he was "happy with what the future holds," as the Cohasset JV squad split its matches 7-7 against the Crusaders.

During my vacation I got into a debate with a friend over the assault on figure skater Nancy Kerrigan. My friend, who follows figure skating pretty closely, has no doubt in her mind that Tonja Harding and her on-again, off-again husband were involved in the plot to knock Kerrigan out of the Winter Olympics.

I disagreed. My feeling is that Harding, unfortunately, made the mistake of surrounding herself with a group of greedy dummies, who are trying to make a quick buck off her superb talents on the ice. From that Moby Dick of a bodyguard of hers, who allegedly planned the attack, right on down to the slimy husband, Harding has a cast of characters trying to exploit her.

Harding has the "reputation" of being a tough, street-wise loner, who doesn't have many close friends within the figure-skating circuit. But one has to admire her fiery competitiveness and the stories of returning cans to pay for ice time. Her past, I believe, is one of the reasons she is so tough on the ice and wants a piece of Kerrigan — on the ice, in the Olympics. This is one girl who wasn't born with a silver spoon in her mouth.

It may turn out that Harding, is in fact involved, as her bodyguard told authorities. But either way, she can say goodbye to any endorsements she may have been offered with a strong showing in the Olympics. Kerrigan is the one who is going to come out of this mess as America's Darling on Skates, even if Harding beats her. And if it turns out Harding is involved, there'll be no tears shed here.

A trio of local players are making noise for the UMass-Boston hockey team. Left-winger Tom Maguire of Hanover, one of the Beacons' tri-captains, is tied for second in team scoring, just two points behind the lead, with four goals and six assists. Sophomores Mike Brennan of Hingham and Pembroke's Tom Dunphy have also played well for the squad's defensive corp. The Beacons are 2-7 overall, but remain in the thick of the ECAC East playoff pack with their 2-3 mark.

Hingham's media darling, Scott Wahle, is back on the stage, this time in the play "I Do, I Do." Rumor has it the Channel 4 sportscaster will step out of his boy-next-door character when he portrays Al Pacino's right-hand man, Manny, in the theatrical presentation of Brian DePalma's "Scarface." Wahle will be introduced to Pacino's cocaine connections throughout the play with the line "Say 'ello to my little friend." Scotty'll have to brush up on his Cuban accent for this gig.

I would like to apologize to Silver Lake basketball star Amy King for messing up on a story about her scholarship to Assumption College last week.

Due to an error in the production of the paper, the jump on her story did not run in the Pembroke Mariner.

It is not the first or last mistake I have ever made but I will try to correct the situation by running the complete story this week.

I'm also glad that Amy has a sense of humor about things.

At Friday night's win over Quincy, a game where she scored 22 points, King said to me, "Gee, are you guys doing a mini-series on me or something?"

No we aren't. But if you keep playing like you did Friday night, I'll see what I can do.

Snowflake tournament

The South Shore Eagle Mite "C" Team took a giant step forward in their team development with advancing to the championship game of the Snowflake Tournament.

The Eagles entered the tournament, held during the Christmas school vacation, with a deceiving 3-7-2 record. Included in the same division were teams from Hingham, Brockton and Taunton. The winner advanced to the championship game.

The first game paired the Eagles against Hingham. The game started with a scoreless first period. Scoring began shortly into the second with Hingham striking first. The young Eagle team then went to work. With 1:19 remaining in the period the Eagles scored. Sean Kelleher picked up a pass from Owen Collins to even the score. During the first shift of the third period the Eagles took the lead. Kevin Manchini put the puck past the Hingham goalie from the right wing. Play continued back and forth for the remainder of the game. Hingham not only tied the game but took the lead. However, the Eagles never gave up. With 1:39 left in the contest, Sean Kelleher scored again with assists going to Owen Collins and Ryan Cerriani for a 3-3 final.

The next opponent for the Eagles was the team from Brockton. The Eagles started quickly at 6:29 of the opening period when Collins got the first goal. Kelleher followed assisted by Cerriani. Brockton came back and tied the game at 23 until Josh Stevens scored the game winner, assisted by Steve Dionne and Eric Deschamps. The Eagles were on their way, 3-2.

The final game within their division matched the Eagles against the Taunton Brewins. The Eagles had to defeat Taunton to advance – and they did.

Both teams had great chances and both goalies stopped everything in the first period. However, things changed in the second. The Eagles scored first. Billy Dares skated in on his left wing and got an unassisted goal. That opened the door. Once again, the hot-scoring line of Collins, Kelleher and Cerriani scored, giving the Eagles a 2-0 lead. Taunton cut the lead in half before the period ended. As the third period began, the young eagles came out flying, scoring three times to put the game away. Kelleher, assisted by Cerriani, Stevens unassisted and Collins assisted by Kelleher and Cerriani, sealed the 5-3 final.

On to the Championship!

The Eagles winners of their division were pitted against a strong Duxbury team which had won all three games within their division. Duxbury scored the first two goals of the game. That must have woke up the Eagles because from that point on, it was a different eagles team. Before the first period ended the Eagles got on the board with Kelleher assisted by Cerriani. The second period was again up and down the ice with Eagles' goalie Chris Garofalo coming up big, making save after save. It was then Josh Stevens' turn. Josh broke into the Duxbury zone and listed a perfect shot over the Duxbury goalie, knotting the game at two. It was now anyone's game. With just 50 seconds left in the game Duxbury scored the game winner, 3-2. Final Duxbury 3 and Eagles 2.

The Mite "C" Eagles team did prove to themselves and to their fans that they mean business.

Reidy named to All-American team

Williams senior forward Jim Reidy of Cohasset has been named to the Division 3 Umbro/NSCAA All-American second team. Reidy is the 17th Eph voted to an All-America team in head coach Mike Russo's 15-year reign at Williams.

Reidy scored five goals and assisted on four others as the Ephmen rolled to a 12-0-1 regular season mark, the first undefeated regular season under Russo, and qualified for the NCAA tournament. Appearing in its first NCAA Division III tourney, the Ephs won their first four encounters before losing in the finals to UC San Diego at home, 1-0. Williams finished at 16-1-1.

"Jimmy's selection is proof that team players can be recognized at the highest levels," said Russo. "Jimmy was solid all season. There was not a time when you can say he had an off day. I'm pleased to have another player named All-American and Jimmy is most deserving."

Reidy was previously accorded first team All-New England honors by Umbro/NSCAA.

Icemen tie Scituate

By Kevin Lewis
Special to the Mariner

The Skippers played their best game of the season, tying arch-rival Scituate, 2-2. Nevin Bunstein and Pat Reynolds each had a goal. Kevin McKenna played a solid game between the pipes. The defensive unit of Dave Noble, Anthony Wigmore, Jared Graves and Charlie Andris played well in front of McKenna.

Earlier in the week, the Skippers lost to Abington 9-6 despite Bunstein's three goals and two assists. This was Bunstein's first career hat trick! Other goal scorers were Mike Riley, Brenden Kinchla and Reynolds.

The Sharks are back

By Bob Hatch
Special to the Mariner

The Bay State Sharks squirt minor team started the second half of the season recently with a win over the Middlesex Island at the Belmont Hill School. The Sharks had recently hosted the second annual Bay State Sharks Holiday Tournament over Christmas vacation at Milton Academy, It was an exciting event for players, parents and coaches with the top four Metro teams going head-to-head. The Sharks looked great in each of the four games, defeating the Hobomock USA Chiefs, 3-2 and last year's NAAHA Champions the South Shore Kings, 6-2, then tying last year's Metro league champs the Minuteman Flames, 3-3.

Their undefeated record earned the Sharks a spot in the trophy round against Hobomock. This game had it all. Both teams displayed their skating, passing and play-making abilities. The goaltending was superb, as it was throughout the tournament. The forwards demonstrated what backchecking is all about, while the defensemen carried at their coaches' instructions flawlessly.

Both teams aggressively played the body. As a matter of fact, the hitting was such, in this game, one parent said it was looking more like a squirt football game than a squirt minor hockey game. No problem, the kids had a ball. The outcome was in doubt until the final buzzer with Hobomock winning, 2-1. All of us with the Sharks congratulate the Chiefs for a well-played game and tournament.

The Middlesex Islanders game was totally different from any of the tournament games. The skating, passing and play making was there, but this was a one-sided, high-scoring affair, in which the Sharks' lethal scoring machine was in high gear. The machine was being operated for this game by the Sharks white line of Nick Dunn (Marston Mills), Bobby Noonan (Marshfield), and Chris Coady (Hanover). Look at these stats — Nick Dunn (5 assists), Bobby Noonan (2 goals, 1 assist) and then Chris Coady with four big goals as well as an assist. We've heard that Bobby's uncle, Brian Noonan of the Chicago Blackhawks, has called Bobby for a couple of pointers recently.

The white line wasn't the only offensive weapon the Sharks used. The Hingham red line was also productive. Brian Boyle (2 goals), Dave Saggese (1 goal, 2 assists) and Pat Devine fought for assists. Greg Osborne (Stoughton) and Scotty McGinn (Hingham) each banged in a goal for the Sharks' blue line while their linemate Brian Lewis (Cohasset), assisted on both goals. The Sharks' defensive corps played anothe air-tight game. John Tewksbury (Marshfield) and Garret Daigler (Hingham) made some great point-to-point passes, Scotty Sparks (Norwell) and Matt Bourassa (Somerset) worked the break-out play all afternoon and Ryan Hatch (Hanover) made two diving plays at the blue line to keep Shark scoring threats alive. As was the case with John Lynch (Hingham) during the tournament, Gabe Winer's (Stoughton) goaltending performance was brilliant. The netminder turned away a number of difficult shots to preserve the 11-0 shutout.

The Sharks next travel to Holy Cross College and UMass Lowell. The Sharks next home game is Jan. 23 at 9:10 a.m. at Pilgrim Arena against the Springfield Jr. Olympics.

Self-defense workshop

Model Mugging of Boston will be at the community center, 3 North Main St. from 7 to 10 p.m. Tuesday Jan. 25 presenting the program "Street Smarts."

This is a workshop to teach basic skills and self-defense methods to reduce chances of being assaulted. Through a series of demonstrations, drills, role play and partner exercises, this step-by-step training builds some basic and effective physical self-defense techniques. Sgt. James Hussey, self-defense instructor at the Boston Police Academy says of the program, "This is the only short-term course I have seen that truly gives students an idea of how to defend themselves in situations as close to reality as possible."The fee is $25.

Call the center at 383-0088 for information and to register.

Newcomers list events

Grab your jeans and your boots (or whatever) and come to the Newcomers' Tex-Mex Pot Luck. The big event will be Saturday, Jan. 29, at 7 p.m. at the First Parish Unitarian Church Parish Hall on the Common in Cohasset.

The next general meeting will be Tuesday, Feb. 1, 9:30 a.m. at The Little Harbor Bookstore, 39-A South Main Street, Cohasset Village. Joan Call, owner of Little Harbor Bookstore, will share her insights on "Starting and Running Your Own Business." Babysitting is available for $2 per child per hour.

Super subs for sale

The Appalachia Service Project is selling submarine sandwiches, chili, and salad for Super Bowl Sunday as a fundraiser to help support our work week in central Appalachia in June. Order forms are available at the local churches or you can call in your order to Ami Argus at 383-9325/0345. We have an assortment of subs available (turkey, roast beef, chicken salad, etc.) along with the other choices, all for $4 each. Please order your Super Bowl food as soon as possible (order deadline Thursday, Jan. 27).

In other Appalachia Service Project news, we will be having a formal registration meeting at the Second Congregational Church Sunday, Jan. 23, from 5 to 6:30 p.m. If you are interested in volunteering (student or adult advisor), please plan on attending this meeting. Call Ami Argus if you have any questions (383-9325).

In addition to our monthly meetings and special parties the club offers members a variety of social activities including book, bridge, gourmet dinner, Sip 'n' Stitch, lunch bunch and tot's play groups.

All new residents of Scituate and Cohasset or residents experiencing a change in life style are invited to join.

For more information, please call Bonnie at 383-0643 or drop us a line at P.O. Box 623, Cohasset 02025.

Community gardeners meet

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will [illegible] at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday, Jan. 25 at St. Stephen's Pa[illegible] Coffee will be served at 9 a.m.

The guest speaker will be landscape designer, Margaret Conners who will discuss her design of the landscape at the lighthouse keeper's cottage on Government Island. She will also offer suggestions for home gardens.

Mammography screening

The Cohasset Social Service League is sponsoring the Mobile Diagnostics, Inc. (MDI) mobile mammography service. from 9:15 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday, Jan. 22 at the town hall parking lot. This service is accredited by the American College of Radiology.

The total cost with Mobile Diagnostics, Inc. is $107, which is billed to your insurance company. You also have the option of taking advantage of MDI's discounted fee of $85, payable on the day of the exam only, by cash, check, Mastercard or Visa.

To schedule your appointment or for more information, please call the Cohasset Social Service League at 383-0771.

State will hold hearing on CHL expansion plans

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Expansion plans for Cohasset Heights Landfill on Crocker Lane off Rte. 3A could move to the next step if the state accepts the final environmental impact report (FEIR) on the proposed project.

But the state Executive Office of Environmental Affairs (EOEA) won't act on the report before it holds an informational public hearing on the FEIR at 8 p.m., Monday, Feb. 7 at the Cohasset High School auditorium.

Members of S.A.F.E., a grass-roots organization opposed to the landfill, heard from state Sen. Brian McDonald's office Tuesday that state Secretary Trudy Cox had elected to hold the hearing.

S.A.F.E. member John K. McNabb, Jr. of Pond St. wrote to Cox requesting the hearing two weeks ago.

Members of S.A.F.E, town boards, and dozens of local citizens are again lining up to oppose expansion of the landfill by commenting on the FEIR, a copy of which is available at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The deadline for public comment on the report is Feb. 9.

The filing of environmental impact report(s) is a state requirement for large projects. The secretary essen-

Car dealership franchise sold

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Spensley Chevrolet, a Chevrolet franchise dealership in Cohasset for more than 20 years, has been sold to its landlord, Donald Staszko.

Staszko will change the name of the dealership to South Shore Chevrolet-Geo Inc. to be managed by Daniel Leahy of Forest Ave.

The name change is the latest chapter for the Rte. 3A car dealership formerly owned Lloyd and Geoffrey Spensley.

Spensley Chevrolet re-grouped last summer after Staszko bought the land housing the dealership, body shop and car service operations for $1.3 million and leased the dealership site back to the Spensleys. The brothers held a 15-year lease with an option to pur-

Annual drug, alcohol free weekend targeted to all ages

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

After years of hearing the ill effects of drug and alcohol abuse in the classroom, Cohasset students, residents and their families will take the important message to the streets this weekend for the third year in a row.

This year's Alcohol-Free Weekend is designed to create awareness; organizers of the event shun the idea that this is to show high school students that there are ways to have fun without drinking.

Rather, this weekend is meant to show everyone in town that drug and alcohol abuse is a problem in Cohasset, like any other community — and every part of the population is equally at risk.

Senior citizens with umpteen prescriptions who accidently become addicted to their medication are just as much at risk as the eight-year-old children of alcoholics or the pre-teenagers who already have an abuse problem.

"We seemed to be focusing on the young people and that wasn't what we were set up to do. The senior community was as much at risk as the rest of the community," said Drug and Alcohol Committee member Keith Knowles. "It's a touchy area to work in; consequently you have to be very careful when it comes to seniors." The Drug and Alcohol Committee, about to enter its fifth year, was initiated by Selectmen and reports on drug and alcohol abuse problems in Cohasset. Their efforts helped to kick off the original Alcohol-Free Weekend three years ago.

Kathy Bryanton of the Senior Center runs several programs throughout the year to teach seniors how to manage their own health care.

Property taxes are due Tuesday

Treasurer/Collector Elizabeth Ripley reminds residents that their third quarterly property tax payments are due Tuesday, Feb. 1. The collector's office will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on the due date. Payments received after that day will be subject to interest. The collector's office will not accept postmark dates.

"The payment must be in our hands by Feb. 1," Ripley said.

Cohasset's week

Special fund set up

A special fund has been set up to cover the $1,000 insurance deductible to replace items stolen from the Johansen residence on King St.

Last Thursday afternoon, thieves who forced their way into the house took about $4,000 of computer equipment and software, a video camera, and stereo equipment, while Pamela Johansen and her daughter Kara were at a doctor's appointment.

Kara, who is a student at Deer Hill, has cerebral palsy and her computer had special software to help her with her homework.

Although Cohasset police have no suspects, they are pursuing some leads. There were two breaks in Marshfield and police in both towns are seeing if the robberies are related.

Police also have some fingerprints taken from the scene and have a description of the vehicle from a neighbor.

Anyone wishing to donate money to help cover the insurance deductible can send a check made out to the PSO/Kara Johansen, c/o Ann Whiteley, 35 Pond St., Cohasset 02025. Checks may also be brought to the Osgood and Deer Hill School offices.

Northstar program

Through a new federal program, Cohasset could obtain either a generator, boat, and flat-bed truck or possibly all three – for free.

Project Northstar, administered by the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency, will give municipalities excess military equipment which must be made available for logistical support for counter-drug operations and programs at the state and local level if needed.

Equipment available includes dump trucks, pickup trucks, ambulances, trailers, a water tanker, a personnel carrier, computers, generators, and communication equipment.

"It seems like a vehicle to get rid of the excess equipment they have," Selectman Merle S. Brown said about the program which selectmen voted to enter into at their board meeting Monday.

Executive Secretary Gregory A. Doyon explained in a telephone interview that there is a great deal of excess military equipment due to the recent base closings.

It's not clear how great the demand for the excess equipment is and if Cohasset's prioritized request will match what is available, he said.

Town hall use approved

The Montessori Community School will use Cohasset Town Hall for a student performance March 18, which is the culmination of the school's Festival of Arts week.

Selectmen approved the school's request Monday but said the town could not supply the sound system as requested. They said the school should also contact the Cohasset Dramatic Club about use of the stage lighting equipment.The lighting system is the property of the dramatic club.

The Montessori school, which is in Scituate, expects 250 people to attend the performance.

New Papa's manager

Mark Cimino is the new manager at Papa Gino's in Cushing Plaza. Cimino, who replaces John McNulty, has had four years experience with Papa Gino's three as a shift leader and once as a store general manager. Selectmen approved the change of manager at their board meeting Monday. The state Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission (ABCC) requires that any change of manager listed on the alcoholic beverages license be approved by the local licensing board. The manager listed on the license is the one responsible for seeing that the liquor laws are enforced.

Cimino said one of his priorities as the new manager is to review the pizza delivery area at the restaurant. The subject came up when Selectman Jane Goedecke said her home is currently just outside the delivery area.

Bill payment approved

Selectmen approved payment of $491.50 to Brewster W. Fuller & Associates for services provided the town in December regarding preparation of preliminary plans for a new town cemetery.

Name change wanted

The Handicapped Commission will ask town meeting voters to approve changing its name to the Cohasset Commission on Disabilities. The commission's proposed FY'95 budget is $125 for mailing and educational materials. Selectmen agreed to recommend approval of the board's budget and name change at the annual town meeting.

Gjesteby is on the slate

Selectmen Chairman Martha K. Gjesteby has been recommended as secretary on the slate of officers to the Massachusetts Selectmen's Association Statewide Town Meeting, Jan. 28.

If the slate is approved, Gjesteby will join counterparts from Eastham, Needham, Natick, and Easton in governance of the MSA town meeting to take place at the Boston Marriott/Copley Place.

RTF permit deadline looms

Permits for residential use of the Cedar Street recycling transfer facility must be purchased no later than Monday Jan. 31. Vehicles without a current permit attached will not be allowed to enter the facility.

The fee is $65 for the year. Permits for two vehicles per household may be obtained at the same time for $65, provided both registrations with the same address are shown at the time of application. Any RTF permit application made for a second vehicle at a different time will require an additional payment of $25. No exceptions will be made. A rate of $33 has been set for persons who live alone.

Permits are sold in the supervisor's building at the RTF and at the board of health office. Payment can be made in cash or check payable to the Town of Cohasset.

Burning season here

Residents can burn brush, cane, and driftwood between the hours of 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. through May 1.

Anyone planning to burn should call the fire department's business number at 383-0616 each day and leave their name and address.

Burning of grass, leaves, and hay is not allowed because they cause too much smoke, Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said.

Annual drug, alcohol free weekend targeted to all ages

"Society is much more complex today. It's mind-boggling with all the different prescriptions — as their health deteriorates they are dependant on more and more physicians," she said.

Through her efforts and help from the Cohasset Fire Department, the Senior Center educates seniors — 20 percent of the town's population — on how to manage their own health care.

"You have to advocate for that," she said.

The Alcohol-Free Weekend is an ideal time to get word out to seniors and others that there are resources in the community for those in need. At the same time, it gives students a chance to show their parents what they have learned while letting parents take part in a valuable lesson.

Cohasset health teacher Michael Gill said the message must extend beyond the school walls.

"Schools are being asked more and more to straighten out society's problems. The schools are not necessarily the place to be fighting the battle. Every time parents drink, there's a message. They can't erase those messages in one weekend," he said.

Instead, parents need to model responsible behavior in the home to help combat the media images which barrage children with dozens of conflicting messages, he said.

Students at the Deer Hill School will show their view of Cohasset's drug abuse problem in their own words through a poster contest held this week. The images on these posters ring an eerie truthfulness as they adorn the walls of the High School gymnasium at the start of the kickoff weekend basketball game, said organizer Paula Knowles.

"It's amazing to see how they feel. Some of these kids at the sixth grade level already have problems of their own," said Paula.

Sixth graders who make a poster or who participate in a free-throw contest automatically win free admission to the High School basketball game to kick off the weekend.

This is a first chance for some sixth graders to mix with the high school crowd on a Friday night.

"They're so proud to be able to get in," Paula said.

On Saturday, information and face-painting will be available at Recreation League Basketball at the Deer Hill School, followed by a four-town wrestling meet.

On Sunday, the brunch will be followed by a performance by Acorn the Clown, a sing-a-long, and a breathalyzer demonstration by the Cohasset Police Department.

The weekend will be more streamlined than ever before, Paula said.

Fourth grader Dean Cassiani made this poster to support Cohasset's Drug and Alcohol-Free Weekend, which will kick off this Friday night. Posters from Deer Hill students will decorate the High School Gymnasium during a basketball game, the first of many events throughout the weekend intended for residents of all ages to enjoy.

"There's not any sense in doing things just to look good on paper," she said. "We've fine-tuned it a little more and we tried not to have anything superfluous."

For example, because the High School is the focal point for so many events, the committee dropped the screening of The Beauty Queen, a movie shot in Cohasset in the early 1900s, in favor of more sports events.

One of the most popular events, the police breathalyzer and illicit drug display, will be at the Sunday Brunch. "Kids and parents love it," she said.

The concept for the drug and alcohol-free weekend came from Belmont. A member of the Drug and Alcohol Committee saw a flyer advertising the event and ripped it down to show the other committee members.

"We took the idea and completely changed it," Paula said.

NEW CORPORATE SPONSORSHIP

Although the weekend runs on a tight budget, relying on donated food, favors and entertainment, this year Drug and Alcohol-Free got corporate sponsorship.

"We actually solicited this year," said Paula, who ran a letter campaign to major companies active in Cohasset.

The total price tag for the event is $2,000, collected from corporations, plus gifts from the Chamber of Commerce and the Cohasset Police Dept. A $500 gift from Coca-Cola funded the Kaleidoscope Players performance at the Deer Hill School on Friday.

As a member of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, Paula said she realized how local businesses are constantly asked to support local charities. "I realize how people are getting hit up," she said.

The committee has not asked the three liquor stores in town to stop selling during the weekend "and we're not going to," she explained.

"It's not a temperance weekend. It's an education weekend. As much as we can we would like the education to go through families."

If you are storing your silver after the holidays, please remember to empty your silver salt & pepper shakers so they don't pit. Keep in mind all your silver should be cleaned with a good silver polish making sure never to use a twisting motion when cleaning pieces that are jointed, like candle sticks, compotes, and salt and peppers. This can crimp the silver and damage the joints. After drying thoroughly, store your silver in tarnish preventative bags. Never use plastic wrap which can trap in moisture and damage your silver.

S.A.F.E. group wants landfill expansion plans dumped

By Sean P. Sweeney
Mariner correspondent

S.A.F.E., a grass-roots group opposed to any further expansion of Cohasset Heights Landfill, met at the Unitarian Parish House, Tuesday (Jan. 25) to discuss the status of the expansion of the privately owned landfill.

They also instructed concerned citizens about how to comment on the Final Environmental Impact Report (FEIR) currently before the state Executive Office of Environmental Affairs (EOEA).

The proposed expansion would increase the size of the landfill from the current 22.75 acres to 36.95 acres. According to SAFE, the final height of the expansion would be 200 feet above mean sea level. What this means to Cohasset is that the new expanded landfill will be clearly visible from Rte. 3A.

As a result of the expansion, the landfill would increase its total capacity form 800,000 tons of mixed solid waste to upwards of 2 million tons of mixed solid waste, including food waste. Presently the landfill only accepts construction and demolition debris.

The expansion would also increase the operating hours by two hours each day, while also adding an additional day of operation. The expanded landfill that is proposed would result in a dramatic increase in the amount of truck traffic in the area, SAFE asserts. During peak hours, the landfill could service about 103 trucks.

In order to expand, CHL must receive the approval of Trudy Cox, state secretary of environmental affairs. In order to receive such approval, landfill owners have filed a final Environmental Impact Report outlining the expected environmental effects of the proposed expansion. A copy of the report is available at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Bill Ryan of Sen. Brian McDonald's office relayed the news that the EOEA had agreed to conduct a public hearing at 8 p.m., Feb. 7, at the high school auditorium.

The purpose of the meeting is to solicit testimony from residents for consideration by Cox prior to making her decision on the FEIR. The public comment period for the FEIR ends Feb. 9.

Ryan, along with SAFE members Kevin O'Donnell and John McNabb, Jr. urged all interested citizens to send letters to Cox's office at 100 Cambridge St., 20th Floor, Boston 02202.

Letters should refer directly to the FEIR for Cohasset Heights and should identify what issues are of concern to the writer, SAFE members explained. According to McNabb some of the biggest areas of concern include the threat of contamination to Lily Pond, odor and air emissions, traffic impacts, and aesthetics.

State will hold hearing on CHL

tially told CHL to redo the draft environmental impact reports it filed in 1991 and 1992. CHL's Second Supplemental Draft Environmental Impact Report (SSDEIR) was accepted by the Secretary last March as properly complying with the Massachusetts Environmental Policy Act which set the stage for CHL to submit the final report.

Paul Barry, owner of CHL Ltd., is seeking approval for a 14.2 acre expansion of the existing landfill and approval to accept maximum refuse of 500 tons per day.

For Barry, it's a business decision.

Although he declined to comment on the FEIR, Barry did acknowledge he needs more space.

Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik explained that the current landfill is in its final phase and could be full in a year or two depending on the amount of tonnage that comes in.

The current landfill can accept only construction and demolition debris. Barry hopes the expansion will also be able to accept municipal solid waste (general refuse).

"It makes a big difference in the business," Barry said.

However, there's a town by-law on the books which prevents the current landfill from accepting general refuse without a special permit from the zoning board.

It's unclear if the state Solid Waste Management Act of 1987 — which was enacted after the town by-law and doesn't allow municipalities to make rules against the siting of landfills — will preclude the town from requiring zoning approval for use in the proposed expansion.

If the FEIR is accepted, the next step is a determination of site suitability for a landfill which would be made jointly by the state Departments of Environmental Protection and Public Health, Godzik explained. If the departments decide the site meets the suitability requirements, CHL would then file an application to the Cohasset Board of Health for a site assignment. If the BOH assigns the landfill then the permitting process begins, Godzik said.

CHL also proposes to construct a Materials Recycling Facility (MRF), which would include balers, a shredder, and a baling and storage area, as part of the expansion project and a Materials Processing Operation (MPO), to separate and process materials such as bricks, reducing the waste being landfilled. The MPO also provides recovered materials for reuse in construction and landscaping, according to the FEIR.

"The expanded landfill will, during the next several years, while Massachusetts phases out landfills and phases in recycling/reprocessing programs, provide much needed capacity for the environmentally safe disposal of materials not amenable to recycling and of the residuals from materials recovery process," CHL states in the FEIR.

But the thought of more garbage sends shock waves through S.A.F.E., town boards, and many citizens who fear the leachate — liquid garbage released through the ground — could contaminate Lily Pond, the town's water supply, and sensitive wetlands in the area.

Landfill opponents also warn of increased traffic along Rte. 3A from trucks accessing the landfill and foul odors from the garbage, among other concerns.

L[illegible]s going on!

The Friends of the Library wish to thank all those who have contributed to the Friends Membership Drive. Your continued support for the library insures improved services as well as innovative programming in the library.

The Hingham Historical Commission has donated a handsomely illustrated book to the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The book, Not All Has Changed, by Lorena and Francis Hart, chronicles the history of Hingham with beautiful photographs, artwork and maps. The book is presently available for circulation.

Black history is the focus of the book collection in the lobby. There are over 100 books represented in the selection.

Storyhour is ongoing at the library. Presently both sessions are full.

"Saltwater and Cobblestones," a collection of watercolors by JoAnne Chittick, remains on display in the Reading Room for one more week.

Winter library hours

Hours at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library are: Monday and Tuesday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; closed Wednesday; Thursday and Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Sunday, 2-5 p.m.

Pierson to Person

Wigmore Pierson will host guests discussing Project Quest, a cooperative drug education program involving the Massachusetts National Guard, the Governor's Alliance Against Drugs and other national and state agencies from 8 to 9 p.m. Thursday Jan. 27.

around town

by Sallyann Chatterton

❑ How about that Allison Ludlow? Allison was not able to play soccer this year, but she sure did herself proud by making a 3.5 in her grades.

Oh, Allison, we are proud of you, keep up the great work!

❑ Hurray Pop! Pop Fone that is! He recently celebrated his 89th birthday and of course had a grand time doing so!

Here's to many more healthy happy years for you Pop, everyone loves you!

❑ Lynn Palmiter called with exciting news! Her beautiful spring collection of Carlisle clothing will be here in February, and it is exquisite! Carlisle offers over 250 items, and is home shopping at its best, whatever article of clothing or accessory you may need, Lynn will help. You select the things that you want, and they are delivered to your door. What a great way to choose your spring wardrobe or to find the right touch for a special piece, with a great selection! If you are interested in seeing this beautiful spring collection from Feb. 18 to 24 in Cohasset, call Lynn at 383-1454.

❑ And, Paula Knowles wants you all to know about the buy of the year ... breakfast, all you can eat, for 94¢!

Pancakes, eggs, home fries, bagels, pizza, juice and coffee will be served from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the high school cafeteria Jan. 30, make your plans now!

Winterfest '94, all a part of the drug-free weekend — be sure you watch for more details it will be great.

❑ Oh, do we hope that Burt Pratt is feeling better as he reads this. Burt is such a big part of the doings in Cohasset, from all the various boards he has served on to the historical Society, and is so loved by family and friends! Get well, Burt!

❑ Saw Mary Shyne Tait recently, and although the circumstances were not pleasant (her brother, Frank, passed away) she looks wonderful. Mary is living in Maine and very happily doing so ... I'm not so sure I'd love Maine this year, it must be sooo cold.

❑ It's time to thank Martha again (Gjesteby we are talking about!). Martha has been reappointed as Cohasset selectmen's representative on the Metropolitan Area Planning Council. It involves so many projects, how does one find the time to do it all? Guess its the same story," ask a busy person ..."

❑ We had the pleasure of meeting Whitney Page and Wesley Autum Swain, the twin girls of Norman and Carolyn Swain, last week.

Once the weather gets better, they are sure to be spotted around town. Oh, are they precious and beautiful — and Norman and Carolyn are so pleased and proud!

Hurry up spring, so that everyone can meet them!

❑ Kelsie Litchfield is proud to announce that she held a birthday party for her three cats (their first) at the home of the Chattertons.

All of the friends were there, and the cake and food she helped prepare were delicious. The cats, Benny and the Jets, received many gifts that they are having a grand time playing with; and, when was the last time you used the tune of Happy Birthday by using only meows?

Nice way to break up a COLD winter!

❑ All of you parents of seniors at CHS, it is not too late to put a parent ad in the yearbook. When you read it five years or so from now, you will be so glad that you did! So will your senior.

Please send one in, or call the main office of the high school at 383-6100.

❑ Allison Kornet, the daughter of John and Diana Kornet, was cited for outstanding work in a course in philosophy at Dartmouth College. Members of the Dartmouth faculty are invited to submit only citation reports when a student's work is sufficiently distinguished to merit special recognition. Such citations are rare; typically, only a few undergraduates receive citations each term.

Congrats Allison, everyone is proud of your good work!

❑ Sunday, Jan. 16, at Brown University, in the 10th annual indoor championships, Ellery Clark of Cohasset and Boston A.A. reached a career total to date of 105 Gold medals in Track and Field. His six golds in this meet enabled him to reach of grand total (to date) of 105 wins, 23 seconds, and 23 thirds.

Combined, his late father's 75 career wins, plus his 105, boosts father and son's total to 180 for a new national record.

When you see Ellery, be sure to congratulate him, he is great!

❑ We extend our sympathies to Pam and Jack DeLorenzo at the death of her father. What a hard thing that is to deal with; give each of them a huge hug when you see them; it means a lot!

❑ And, let's all say a prayer for Burt Pratt, who is in South Shore Hospital as this is being written. He is a wonderful man who has done so much for this town and his family and friends.

❑ Happy birthday (although belated) to "Pop" Fone, who celebrated his 89th recently. Pop has another reason to celebrate this week, he is a new great-grandfather! His grandson, Scott and wife Nanette, had a brand new baby boy Jan. 22, his name is Zachary Stewart Fone, and from all reports he is handsome! Wonder if he will be running with his father by spring (probably).

Of course you know that Ken and Sue Fone are beside themselves with pleasure, and cannot wait to get to Maine to see Zachary; get well soon, Sue, so that you can make the trip! Delaney misses you too!

❑ We all wish David LaVange a speedy recovery, he is soon to be released from South Shore Hospital and by the time he reads this he should be much better.

obituaries

Annie Louise Porter

A funeral service was held Jan. 13, for Annie Louise (Litchfield) Porter who died Jan. 10 at her home in Hen[illegible]a, New York, where she had lived for many years.

Mrs. Porter was born in Cohasset and was the daughter of the late Walter and Flora Litchfield. She was a graduate of Cohasset schools and the New England Baptist School of Nursing.

She served as a flight nurse with the rank of lieutenant in the US Air Force during the Korean conflict. She worked at South Shore Hospital for several years before moving to New York where she continued her nursing at Strong Memorial Hospital in Rochester for 27 years.

Mrs. Porter leaves two sons, Leo and David; three daughters, Peggy Porter, Susan Tribunella and Kathy Shafer, and two grandsons, Sam Tribunella and Shane Shafer.

Memorial contributions may be made in her name to PAWS, P.O. Box 244, Albion, NY 14411 or St. Peter's Episcopal Church, 3835 E. Henrietta Road, Henrietta, NY 14467.

Ruthven Walsh

Ruthven E. (Parker) Walsh of Cohasset, a former employee of the Liberty Mutual Insurance Co. and a homemaker, died Jan. 12 at home.

Mrs. Walsh was a member and past president of the Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset and was a member of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset and the Waquoit Bay Watch Club.

While at Liberty Mutual she helped implement some of the early computer systems.

After she graduated from high school, she and her mother ran the Yellow Lantern Tea Room in Gloucester for several summers.

Born in Burlington, Vt., Mrs. Walsh was raised in Somerville and graduated from Somerville High School where she was in the Phi Alpha sorority.

She leaves her husband, Richard J. Walsh; a daughter, Patricia Walsh of Lincoln, and three grandchildren. She was the mother of the late Phyllis Walsh Crocker.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Jan. 15 in St. Anthony's Church. Burial will be in Oak Grove Cemetery, West Medford.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., handled the arrangements.

Memorial donations may be made to Mount Holyoke College Development Office, Mary Wolley Hall, South Hadley 01075.

Cecilia M. Malley

Cecilia M. (McNeil) Malley, 86, of Cohasset, a homemaker, died Jan. 13 at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth.

Born in Dominion, Nova Scotia, Canada, she lived in Cohasset for 60 years.

Mrs. Malley was a volunteer for South Shore Hospital for many years. She was also a member of the Sixty Plus Club.

She leaves her husband, E. Parker Malley; a son, William P. Malley of Cohasset; two daughters, Constance Callahan of Cohasset and Pauline Byrnes of Myrtle Beach, S.C.; seven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was held Jan. 19 at St. Anthony's Church. Burial will be in Woodside Cemetery.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., handled the arrangements.

Filling a niche

We know sometimes you're darn mad at us, while other times you love us.

In this business, we're used to getting a pat on the back and a blow right across the nose in the same week. Being warm and fuzzy and hard-hitting at the same time isn't always easy. We've come to accept both accolades, anger, and everything in between — they go with the territory.

This week I chatted with a new Hingham resident who is a secretary at Cohasset High. We compared notes about newspapers while trying to track down the Student of the Month for a photograph.

She and her family moved to Hingham recently from New Jersey. We had something in common in that my family moved here from Illinois five years ago.

In New Jersey, her local weekly paper covered about 11 towns in one edition. In my town in Illinois, we were a little bit luckier, ours included coverage of a five-town area.

As I recall we could expect a front page story on Lake Zurich about every third or fourth week. We didn't complain because we didn't know anything different.

The secretary and I both noted that Cohasseters, Hinghamites and residents of many other Massachusetts and New England towns don't realize how lucky they are to have local newspapers solely dedicated to their particular town.

Just imagine for a moment if the Cohasset Mariner was called the Cohasset, Scituate & Hingham Mariner? What if your school, sports, and Around Town coverage had to vie for space with other towns?

Thursday when the paper comes out — one frequent criticism we hear from Cohasseters is 'Why is that Hingham happening in our paper?' After the Hingham Journal & Mariner debuted in October we even heard complaints from long-time Journal readers that they didn't like the out-of-town ads now appearing in their paper.

Advertising is the life's blood of the newspaper business. We wouldn't be here without it. Support from local businesses is critical to the very survival of local newspapers.

There's no doubt that The Mariner Newspapers have found a niche in Cohasset. You depend on us to find out what's happening and you're quick to let us know what you think is important and to question us if an item doesn't make it in the paper or is shortened for space reasons.

We don't mind your complaints. We love being needed.

Your input is always welcome and most importantly, so is your support.

And sometimes it's good to remember that a truly local paper — one you can call your own — is a luxury in this day and time.

Tunnel Vision

(Tune: "Sweet Betsy from Pike")

Now, Hingham's a prim place, as everyone knows,
Its pride in its hist'ry is something that shows.
But some folks, I think, may be going too far
The ones that I mean are A.M. and J.R.
Oh, how they do fidget and cudgel their brains
Doing their darndest to derail the trains!
What is their reason, and what's their lament?
Why, "Hingham's historic — one hundred percent!"

A mention of rail sets J.R. in a rage
His letters to papers take up the whole page!
He sifts through his archives in search of the facts:
"A Civil War soldier once tripped on the tracks!"
J.R.'s no commuter, so what does he care
How the drivers to Boston might happen to fare?
He derided the plans, but we knew what he meant:
That "Hingham's historic — two hundred percent!"

When it comes to our hist'ry, A.M. has no peers;
He's guided selectmen for so many years.
When asking our leaders to finance his aims
It's your and my taxes that finance his games.
"Best listen to me, folks, 'cause I know what's best;
I'll threaten court action, and you know the rest;
My mind is made up, I will brook no dissent:
For Hingham's historic — three hundred percent!"

Remember last week, how it snowed and it snowed?
Commuters all skidding or stuck in the road.
Routes 3 and 3-A were both full to the gunwales,
Yet Hingham still stonewalls, insisting on tunnels.
No problem with venting, or stairways, or ramps:
They'll blend in so well with the Square's new/olde lamps.
So what if those mill-i-ons more must be spent?
Old Hingham's historic — four hundred percent!

A sense of proportion is what we have lost;
No tunnel through Hingham could be worth the cost!
The trains run by Greenfield, and Williamsburg, too;
A track on the surface could take the trains through.
How much will taxpayers be pressured to spend
If A.M. and J.R. hold out to the end?
Give them a wide berth; let them sulk in their tent:
Our Hingham needs Greenbush — five hundred percent!

William J. Grimes
207 South Street
Hingham

(Ed.'s note: The initials "A.M." and "J.R." are those of two of Hingham's vocal opponents to restoration of surface rail through Hingham.)

Hinghamite challenges all to debate Greenbush railroad

letters

To the Editor:

I recently attended the meeting at Scituate where, according to the Hingham Journal and Mariner, Greenbush Line towns ganged up on Hingham in an effort calculated to move Gov. Weld to support the proposed Greenbush Line construction. In effect the towns appeared to say that they don't care how the railroad line is built — they just want it now. I have a few observations and comments.

Mr. Grimes, a Hingham resident and railroad proponent, characterized the Hingham opponents as a small local group who have managed to manipulate events relative to the holding up of the railroad construction through Hingham. In concert with Mr. Grimes was Scituate Selectman Donald Brown. He added little to the debate except a rather repulsive display of ignorance. He stood up, raised his arms up and down like a hen does, declaring, more or less, that Hingham's Lincoln Historic District was a red herring.

Both Mr. Grimes and Selectman Brown are ignorant of the historic facts. They both have blinders on that restrict vision to a narrow line. Hingham did not invent the historic architectural preservation issue to stop the train. I was involved in the historic district concept from the beginning. The idea germinated and found nourishment at an antiquarian book store (The Hingham Book House). A group of residents gathered there on Friday evenings to play chess and/or to discuss local and regional events. The book store was owned and operated by Hingham Town Historian Mason A. Foley (1903-1968). Gradually, from about 1952 Hingham's wonderful survival of contiguous old buildings was often discussed.

Slowly there emerged a concept that the architectural heritage should be defined and, if possible, conserved as both a local and a regional resource. From 1957 to 1959 the concept really took whole among the book shop group. Using a map and photographs of the old buildings a plan began to emerge. Mason Foley wondered out loud that perhaps he should run for selectman where he could influence both natural and historic resource conservation. We all rallied him on and in 1960 he became a selectman. Foley and others moved things forward so that on March 25, 1963, 30 years ago, and before anyone ever heard of a Greenbush Line reconstruction, (the railroad was still running at the time) the people of Hingham voted with foresight to establish a Historic Survey Committee.

Hinghamite challenges all to debate Greenbush

The first report of that committee, issued in 1964, underscored the concept that Hingham should have "some form of architectural preservation through some provision of law. The committee recommended that a historic district committee should be appointed. This was done in 1964.

In 1965 the Historic Districts Study Committee concluded that, "Few, if any, New England towns contain a better representation of homes and other buildings of architectural merit from historic periods than does Hingham...Such a quantity, and quality, of houses and churches from historic periods deserve special consideration and concern. They constitute an irreplaceable legacy to be safeguarded not only for present enjoyment but for future generations...We believe that there is far more to protect in Hingham than in most other communities."

All this had taken place prior to 1965 and before trains had ceased to run on the Greenbush Line. The historic architecture preservation movement was supported at all levels of government and by the people of Hingham. I will not write the entire history here.

I just desire that Mr. Grimes and Scituate Selectman Brown understand the facts before they speak. Hingham's sensitivity to the train slicing through the town's soul is similar to what Cohasset might feel if the Greenbush Line was to slice through their historic New England Common or down through the center of the superlative Jerusalem Road/Atlantic Avenue shore drive.

It is similar to what Scituate might feel if the Greenbush Line was proposed to slice between the First Parish Church and the Lawson Tower thence close by the Cudworth House across several street junctions and the large common with its elephant motif fountain, or perhaps the railroad might be placed along the side line of Duxbury's distinctive Washington Street architectural district.

I challenge Mr. Grimes and Selectman Brown to debate the issue with me in the local Mariner newspapers.

Another big point made at the recent Scituate meeting was that all the towns in the Greenbush corridor, except Hingham, had voted to restore the Greenbush Line; that Hingham alone was now blocking progress, the proclaimed will of the majority of the regions people and this was a selfish and dastardly act.

The fact is that the vote in other towns but Hingham was an uniformed vote without discussion or other pertinent input; an uninformed vote put to the masses by politicians.

In Hingham the vote revolved about local and regional resource issues and the potential impact a railroad might have upon the resources and the environment in general. Hingham voters were informed. The vote reflected relative values with vision to the future. My view is that you may get "the masses" to vote for anything you want if you put horse blinders on them and limit the dispersion of knowledge.

In 1973 I wrote to Greenbush Line towns and such organizations such as the South Shore Chamber of Commerce suggesting that Hingham's architectural resource was, in actuality, an important regional resource that might have positive economic ramifications if the resource was utilized in a professional plan initiated to attract tourist income.

I also wrote that Cohasset's Common, Scituate sites, the North River shipyard archaeological potential, the Cohasset shore drive, Duxbury's Washington Street, etc. were all significant resources that could along with Plymouth and Quincy sites, be utilized in a regional master plan to attract tourism. It was my feeling then, as now, that major resources could be damaged or destroyed if there was no regional interest to define and conserve significant regional resources such as Hingham's Lincoln Historic District.

Not a single town or organization so much as answered my letter. I'll say it again now.

The Lincoln Historic District in Hingham that abuts both sides of the Greenbush Line is a significant national, regional and local non-renewable resource that is also an undeveloped regional economic resource that will grow increasingly important as the nation ages. As the ancient towns in England, Ireland, Germany, France, etc. attract tourists from through out the world, so the superlative survival of the contiguous village architecture in Hingham's Lincoln Historic District attract tourism.

There is a well founded fear that the at grade reconstruction of the Greenbush Line through the center of the historic residential and business district will cause irreversible negative impacts that will result in the deterioration of a major regional economic and cultural resource. I challenge all regional political representatives, town officers, regional organizations and any citizens to debate this issue in the columns of the Mariner newspapers. If, in the name of "progress" we cripple or destroy significant regional (South Shore) resources, economic or otherwise, what have we gained?

Thanks to a caring community

To the Editor:

I'm writing to you to say "thank you" to the ladies who stopped last Wednesday, Feb. 19, at the car accident on Pond St.

So many people stopped and offered to get my children, to call my husband, take Amy to the orthodontist and to put supper on the table.

A very special thank you to Mrs. Karen Vanderwerf and her daughter, Charlotte. She took Amy to the orthodontist in Marshfield, picked up Amelia Catherine, and made sure they were safe and sound at home with Angela.

Thank you to "Erica" in the red car who went to the high school to find Amy. Thank you to the woman who called Wayne Robbins, to Mrs. Watts, to the school vans who called.

Thank you to my dear friend, Lindsay Guild, who called and made sure everyone was home safe and calling the hospital. Thanks to my neighbor, Rose Kahn, for reassurance.

Most of all thank you to Cliff Jones, Lisa Matos, Brian Cogill, paramedic Brad, and most of all, Bob P. in the ambulance.

Cohasset should be proud that everyone is very caring. When there is a crisis, the residents show up on your doorstep. I'm so glad my family will be here for another 200 years.

political notes

Anne Bowdoin to run

Anne Bowdoin of 131 Nichols Rd., Cohasset, is announcing her candidacy for the position of trustee at Paul Pratt Library for a three-year term.

Anne lives with her husband and two daughters in Cohasset and has been active as a board member of the Friends of the Library for many years.

She received a MLS from Simmons Graduate School of Library and Information Science in 1988.

For the past four years Anne has been employed at Plymouth Public Library as head of the circulation department and part time reference librarian. During those years she supervised her staff in the transition from a manual system to the online system which Cohasset Library presently uses.

She is concerned with the issues facing small libraries, particularly those in the Old Colony Library Network.

Super 'GOP' Bowl Sunday

Who will be the most valuable player and lead the GOP to victory in November will be as intense at the South Shore Country Club, Sunday, Jan. 30, as the battle between the Dallas Cowboys and the Buffalo Bills chairman Polly Logan announced and urged all to come between noon and 2 p.m.

Carrying the ball for U.S. Senate will include Janet Jeghelian of Westwood, Dr. Mildred Jefferson of Boston, John Lakian of Woods Hole, Mitt Romney of Belmont and Gary Todd of Fitchburg and for Attorney General Janis Berry of Saugus and Guy A. Carbone of Belmont.

Referee for this PRE SUPERBOWL GAME will be Hingham Town Moderator Thomas L. P. O'Donnell.

To insure good seats out of the cold Logan added that the following will be accepting reservations Carl Harris of Hingham 749-7115, Julie Guild and Doug Peck of Cohasset 383-6443 and John Clarkson of Scituate 545-2503. The public is invited and only the brunch requires reservations.

Historical Society reorganizes

The Cohasset Historical Society recently chose its officers and directors for 1994.

Elected president was Mary C. Hartshorne,; 1st vice president, David Pottenger; 2nd vice president, Martha Hurtig; treasurer Ernest J. Grassey, and secretary Susan H. McVeigh, all of Cohasset.

Elected to the society's board of directors are Amy DeWeir-Golden, Ernest J. Grassey, John F. Hartshorne, Mary C. Hartshorne, Joseph McElroy, Susan H. McVeigh, William Malone, Patricia Murphy, John O'Toole, Glenn Pratt and Burtram J. Pratt, all of Cohasset. They join directors Charles B.M. Douglas, Penelope Redfield, Annette Sawchuk and Joyce M. Steel, also serving on the society's board of directors. Incoming society president Mary C. Hartshorne is a second generation member of the Cohasset society; her father, Prescott T. Cumner, was an active member for many years, serving as president from 1962 to 1965, and as vice president from 1966 to 1970.

The Cohasset Historical Society, founded in 1928, maintains two summer museums in Cohasset Village: the Capt. John Wilson House and the Maritime Museum, and a headquarters house, the Caleb Lothrop House at 14 Summer St., Cohasset, where an extensive library and archive of local and area history is maintained. The society pursues an active program of activities related to local and area history, and has extensive collections displayed at its museums. Its membership totals nearly 400 residents of Cohasset and others having an interest in the history of this New England town. Anyone wishing to become a member of the Cohasset Historical Society may do so by calling the society at 383-1434.

Cohasset town cemetery proposed off Red Fox Lane

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Cohasset could have a new cemetery paid for through the sale of graves, officials say.

At town meeting voters will be asked to authorize borrowing for up to $150,000 to develop the new cemetery on proposed on about 10 acres of town-owned land off Rte. 3A.

But proceeds from the sale of graves could pay for the debt service, said Glenn Pratt of the cemetery study committee.

The entrance to the cemetery is proposed off Red Fox Lane, a three-lot subdivision currently under construction off Rte. 3A. Voters will also be asked to give the town authority to obtain an easement over 150 feet of the subdivision road. The cemetery road off Red Fox Lane will be 450 feet from the nearest house in the development, Pratt explained.

Cemetery planners rejected an entrance off Rte. 3A because the access road would have to cross 70 feet of wetlands.

The town cemetery would provide 800 double graves in Phase I. The town charges $500 for each grave with $200 of that amount going into the perpetual care account. The balance of the sale of graves could be used to pay off the debt service, Pratt said.

Hazardous waste day

The Board of Health will ask town meeting voters for $10,000 to conduct a hazardous waste collection day later this year. The event costs about $12,000-$13,000 to run but board Chairman William Baird said the health board had some money left from prior hazardous waste days to cover the balance.

Dump canopy sought

The health board would like $50,000 to construct a roof over the recycling bins at the RTF.

Chairman William Baird said the roof will prevent magazines and papers from getting wet and because the town pays for those items to be hauled off by the ton — the roof could save in tonnage costs. The roof would also provide shelter for workers and citizens, and help increase employee safety by keeping the bottles dry. Baird said wet bottles are difficult to handle especially when the workers are trying to cut the metal rings off some empties.

Baird said the roof would look something like a service station canopy. At the suggestion of Selectman Merle Brown, the health board will try to come up with a drawing of the proposed roof to show town meeting voters.

chase.

Leahy, who appeared before selectmen Monday for approval to sell new and used cars at the site, said the approval of the sale of the franchise was to be processed through bankruptcy court at 11 a.m. Tuesday (Jan. 25).

He said the Spensleys "are effectively selling the business."

Lloyd Spensley, a Scituate resident, could not be reached for comment.

Prior to Staszko's buying the land last summer, Spensley Chevrolet had a bank debt of $1.7 million.

The $1.3 million purchase price for the land and $400,000 raised from the sale of the Spensley-owned Handy Dodge in Weymouth were used to pay of the debt enabling Spensley to stay in business.

At one point in the 1980s, the Spensley brothers owned six car dealerships along the South Shore.

Workshop on diversity set

The Cohasset PSO is sponsoring the National Coalition Building Institute's presentation and workshop "Understanding Diversity," at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday Feb. 2 in the high school cafeteria.

The goal of the workshop is to empower parents, teachers, students and leaders of the community to better understand and communicate to our children the skills to work together with people of diverse

The Deer Hill faculty attended a workshop given by Gerald DiMatteo, a social worker with Atlantic Counseling in Norwell, who discussed building self esteem in children. Mr. DiMatteo reviewed with the teachers the current research on this subject and his own philosophy on this important subject. Much of the workshop time was spent brainstorming the specific ways the staff can immediately build self image for the students in this school.

Coffee with Ms. Gallagher

Parents of seventh and eighth grade students are invited to have their second cup of coffee with Ms. Gallagher, principal of the Jr./Sr. High Friday, Jan. 28, at 9:15 a.m. The meeting, which will be held in the AV room near the main office has two purposes. First is to provide a vehicle for general communication. The second is to give parents an opportunity to offer ideas for goals for the school improvement plan.

Early release is today

Thursday Jan. 27 is early release day for Deer Hill and Joseph Osgood schools. Lunch will be served in all schools. Buses will leave Deer Hill at 12:25 p.m. and Joseph Osgood at 12:55 p.m.

Register for College Gate

Applications for College Academy and College Gate programs are available at Cohasset schools or by writing to College Academy/Gate, Box 382, Stoughton 02072-0832.

College Gate is a three-week program for bright children in kindergarten through grade 3 It is a special fast-paced program offering courses not usually found in traditional schools. College Gate will be held at the Benn the Plymouth River School, Hingham July 5 through 22.

College Academy is a similar three-week program for students in grades 4 through 8. It will be held at Stonehill College in Easton July 5 through 22.

Last summer, several Cohasset children attended College Academy and College Gate. Bus transportation is available to College Academy.

Early dismissal news

The Joseph Osgood School faculty used this release day, Jan. 13, to work on their professional development goals. This process will be ongoing throughout the year, culminating in individual research projects presented to the whole faculty in May. This innovative approach to In-Service time has teachers pursuing a wide variety of topics on Early Release Days.

For example, all first grade and some third grade teachers worked on developing science lessons to provide more hands on experiences for students and to integrate science through the curriculum. The regular education teachers in inclusion classrooms met with special education specialists. These teachers are researching and writing the booklet of teaching strategies to better meet the needs of all students in inclusion classrooms. Other teachers used this time to develop specific curriculum projects in writing, math and student assessment.

At 4:30 in the morning, frightening wake up call

By Barbara Murray Coleman
Special to the Mariner

(Ed.'s note: A former Braintree resident, Barbara Coleman is an independent computer programmer specializing in business applications. She is the mother of Cohasset resident Matthew M. Drohan.)

We are all safe and not so sound after the unbelievable quake that hit this area. I feel so lucky and thank God that m y daughter, Maureen, and her children live in Redondo Beach right next door to me, so I knew they were OK.

We got a very frightening morning wakeup call at 4:30 on Monday, Jan. 17.

I thought at first that it was just a small shaker because for about a week we had quite a few small ones off the coast of Santa Monica. We felt those tremors here since it is only a short distance and we live right on the Pacific coast.

But after a second — and believe me that's all the time it took to realize this was no small one — I was aware very quickly that it was time for me to get out of bed.

When you are terrified you think you cannot move, but your body takes over for you and your mind shuts off for just a few moments.

As I quickly got up and walked through the hall, banging back and forth against the walls, all I was thinking was "God, make the shaking stop."

That's all you can do — wait for the shaking to stop. You feel completely out of control. You have absolutely no control over what is going on.

Although an earthquake usually lasts only about 15 seconds, it feels like hours

'I knew as I tried to get to my living room that this was a really bad and very close quake. I have felt many quakes in the 20 or so years I have lived in Southern California. All of them terrified me, but never like this. It was so close and so much more violent than anything I had ever experienced.'

before the horrible shaking stops and then usually it starts up again for another few seconds. Moreover, when it happens you do not know if the second jolt is going to be bigger or not. This uncertainty is all part of the fear that you feel.

I knew as I tried to get to my living room that this was a really bad and very close quake. I have felt many quakes in the 20 or so years I have lived in Southern California. All of them terrified me, but never like this. It was so close and so much more violent than anything I had ever experienced.

I finally hit the couch, embracing it like a security blanket — a stupid reaction because the roof could fall in. But I didn't think about that. All I cared about was lying down and not rolling all over the place.

As I lay there in limbo, my 14-year-old grandson Jeff knocked on the door. I got up and let him in. By this time — only about one minute or so after the initial shock — the shaking and rolling had stopped.

Jeff was angry with me because I was not standing under a door frame — the recommended procedure. But I told him the couch was about as far as my legs would carry me. It did not even occur to me to get out of my house even though the horrible shaking had stopped.

Now, of course, I went with Jeff to my daughter's home. Maureen and 12-year-old Mandy were scared to death, so I had to pull myself together quickly. It's surprising how strong you can become even when you think resuming a normal emotional condition isn't possible.

But that's exactly what we all tried to do. We began checking around outside the two houses and, of course, shut off the gas. There's was no damage we could see so we went back inside. By then television had come on and we learned, finally, where the quake had hit — very very close to home, just north of us in the San Fernando Valley.

Thursday was the first day since the big one I did not feel any aftershocks. But that's not to say there weren't any. Many are just too small.

Back in 1969 I was living in Biloxi, Mississippi, Hurricane Camille hit the Gulf Coast. It was the most devastating natural horror I had every experienced.

Until now.

The difference is preparation. We were warned that the hurricane was coming. We had hours to prepare for the worse storm ever to hit the Gulf. We made our house safe for the kids, boarding up windows and putting the children to sleep in the hall to keep them from getting hit by any breaking glass. Many area residents just laughed and stayed on the beach — the biggest horror of all, as they paid a heavy price for their foolishness.

But no one warns you an earthquake is about to happen. You have no opportunity to get ready. It just comes.

Of all the ways nature can destroy and ravage lands and people, earthquakes are without doubt the worse horror. You have no warning. No time to prepare for what is coming. The quake hits with a terrifying quickness. All you can do is wait for it to end.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

RENT HOME OUT OR SELL?

QUESTION: I plan to buy a larger home. Do you have any advice on the merits of selling versus renting out our present home?

ANSWER: I would strongly consider selling over renting. To keep the house rented, you'll have to pay advertising costs or fees to a broker. Maintenance costs take a bite out of rental income. Each time there is a turnover the house will have to be cleaned and redecorated. A vacancy can result in a loss that could take years to recover. A deadbeat tenant could take up to six months to evict plus legal costs. You're better off selling a single-family home and using the money to move up to a bigger and better home.

Grapplers remain smooth and steady

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Considering the fact Cohasset High lost eight wrestlers from last year, two of whom were All-Scholastics, the Skippers' 4-4 record (2-1 in the South Shore League) is far from disappointing.

Throw a .500 record alongside a squad that has racked up its share of individual victories and Skipper wrestling enthusiasts have an exciting option to the cold and snow that has ravaged New England this winter.

Take Dan Silvia's victory at 171 pounds in last Wednesday's 41-27 win over Norwell, the first meet of a two-win week for Cohasset. Silvia trailed 7-5 as the final 20 seconds ticked down and it looked as though he was going to wind up on the losing end of the match.

However, Silvia had different plans as to how the match would end. He made a quick, five-point move off his back with 15 seconds to go, and held on for the 10-7 victory.

Silvia's win was just one the Skippers' seven over Norwell. Brandon DeVoe (145 pounds) also registered a win, while the lineup of brothers Kevin and Brian Duffy (103 and 119), Scott Theriault (152) and Andy Church (189) all won by pin. Jeff Thmpson (112) won his match on a technical fall.

All told, Cohasset took the first four matches and four of the top six.

The Skippers picked up five more pin victories in Saturday's 42-30 decision over King Phillip.

All-Scholastic Ryan Freeman (125 pounds), DeVoe, Theriault, Silvia and Church nailed their opponents' shoulders to the mat in clinching the win for Cohasset.

Head coach Torin Sweeney said DeVoe, Theriault and Church are the three variables who must be on if the Skippers are to have a good day.

"Those guys have to win for us to win," Sweeney said.

The Skippers ran into a roadblock known as the Marshfield Rams on Saturday. Cohasset got wins from the Duffys', Freeman, DeVoe and freshman Larry Adams, but the Rams' crew of veterans was too much for the Skippers and they cruised to a 48-22 win.

"They caught us up top," said Sweeney. "On our best day they're still a little better than us. They have a little more depth and experience."

Sweeney was particularly impressed by two JV wrestlers, 100-pound eighth-grader Tucker Gledhill and 118-pound freshman Brett Leahy. Gledhill has a 10-2 record on the season and Leay has also performed steadily.

"We'll be looking at them next year as we turn over the seniors," Sweeney said.

The next three meets "are all up in the air," according to Sweeney. Cohasset was scheduled to go against Canton on Jan. 26, and both Hingham and Somerset on Jan. 29.

"They should all be a one or two-match difference," Sweeney said.

Hoopsters going right at rest of SSL

By Joe Reardon

Cohasset High's boys basketball team is giving its fan two deals for the price of one. And everyone loves a deal, especially when your home school is sitting pretty atop the South Shore League pack with an 8-1 record (9-1 overall).

Not only are the Skippers playing the part of the team to beat in the SSL but they have also taken on the role as spoilers — a job usually regulated to those teams on the fringe, but not quite good enough to qualify for the post-season.

After Matt Pierce and Brian Patison combined for 27 points (15 and 12 respectively) for an easy 70-49 decision over Hull last Tuesday night, the Skippers avenged the two losses Norton dealt them a winter ago, edging the Lancers 57-54.

The victory not only gave Cohasset a perfect 2-0 record versus Norton this season, but Skipper players could also savor the knowledge that they halted the Lancers' recent win streak at four.

"It's starting to come, no question," said head coach Ron Ford of the team's playmaking on the court, and its ability to work together smoother.

"It's starting to gell a little bit. We'll make our mistakes, but the fact that we're coming out and winning the tight

The fun is back for Cohasset girl hoopsters

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Something strange has been happening within the Cohasset High School gymnasium this winter. For the first time in as long as anyone can remember, girls basketball is fun again.

Players no longer go running to the scorebook to see the amount of points they have scored. Inevitable losses are a thing of the past.

"I think they're having fun for the first time, this year," said first-year coach Cori Hughes.

Of course, winning is one variable that has put smiles on the players' faces.

The Skippers (2-9) broke a 3—1/2 year losing skid by dropping Hanover, 43-36. They then proceeded tc shutdown the league-leading scorer, Kate Murphy, to win their next game, 50-43, over Carver.

Obviously, the wins were a breath of fresh air for a club that has stumbled for more winters than Mrs. Fletcher on a flight of stairs. Suddenly, Cohasset no longer looks at itself as the doormat of the South Shore League, but rather a team on the rise.

"I came into a program that people told me was terrible," said Hughes, "but the girls have the talent. All they were lacking were the basic fundamentals and confidence.

"We have great athletes and kids willing to play good defense. Now all of a sudden they see the light.

Hughes, who coached last winter at Millis High School after playing for Boston University, said the Skippers have been competitive in practically all their games, but didn't know what it felt like to win.

"I didn't know too much about the (other) teams. There are fewer teams that are outright better than us. It doesn't matter if I think they can win, but the thing is the girls think they can win."

With the second half of the season already underway, Hughes is confident Cohasset can improve on its record, or at least make the scores from the first half all the closer.

In their first game against Norton, the Skippers were easy prey, falling to the Lancers by 23 points. The second time around wasn't nearly as easy for Norton as the SSL squad helf off Cohasset by a mere five points.

Even when the team has played poorly, it still has been competitive among the league, giving Hughes reason to believe the Skippers can go out and beat the other teams, 2-9 or not.

Cohasset played its "worst game of the season" against second-place Hull High, Hughes said, but the Pirates still won by just 10 points.

The Skippers' strength is that the majority of the scoring does not fall on the shoulders of one athlete. Erin Murphy leads Cohasset with an 11-point average, as well as pulling down six or seven rebounds each game. Meghan Rhodes is second in team scoring with nine-points.

Hughes likes the shared scoring rather than having one main point scorer, "and I thank God for that," she said with a laugh.

Rhodes and Kate Carroll shook up the Carver squad by containing Murphy throughout the game. And although she scored 19 points, they didn't come easy.

"She earned every point she got," Hughes said. "Every shot she took, there was someone in her face."

Hughes is so confident in her squad, she believes the Skippers can beat both Scituate and Norwell, the two squads she considers the best in the SSL. "But we have to play very well. They have so many weapons."

No matter how the season turns out for Cohasset, the worst is behind the squad. With only one player graduating, Hughes already envisions a strong team next season.

"Watch out," she said. "They'll all be back."

Happy days are back again.

Swimmers are small, but big in talent

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

They have the smallest coed swim team in Southeastern Mass., but few teams in the Pilgrim Conference dare to look at Cohasset High as a miniscule squad.

The Skippers have a 3-1 PC record and already have five swimmers qualfied for the South Sectionals, which will be held Feb. 11 at the Lincoln-Hancock Pool in Quincy.

Cohasset's only loss was to a tough Duxbury team. The loss included two close finishes "that I wouldn't want to have called," said head coach Linda Henderson, as well as a relay disqualification that occurred when a Skipper swimmer moved just before the gun.

Even with the three factors working against them, the Skippers lost by just 19 points, 101—82.

"We really felt it was a victory of sorts for us because of the competition," said Henderson. "They had been beating other teams by 40 and 50 points."

Henderson is looking forward to the PC Championships because the scores are always close and the competition is fierce among Duxbury, North Quincy, Taunton, Middleboro, Sandwich and Cohasset, she believes it to be one of the more interesting meets of the season.

"All of the schools have swimmers who are really good in one event or another," she said.

Among those who will toe the starting line at the South Sectionals are Dave Leahy, Becky Golden, Lauren DeVito, Greg Bilton and Jamey Kondrat. Seventh-grader Brendan Boyle, a diver with a gymnastics background, scored 138 points against Blue Hills. A score of 140 will earn him a spot at the sectionals.

Tim Brister is only a couple 100ths of a second from qualifying in the 50-Yard Freestyle and ninth-grader Doug Cameron also has a shot after winning the 500-Yard Freestyle against Taunton and Blue Hills.

Junior Tom Greco has provided depth in the Freestyle, Breast Stroke and Butterfly, as has Derek Bugley, Ted Reardon, Pat Leahy, Maren Cameron, Ashley Brister, Emily Henderson, Sue Gill, Renee Fagot, Kelly Tufts and Sara Belson.

It is this group that has provided the critical second-, third-, fourth- and fifth-place points, which have made Cohasset's season a success.

games shows we have a lot of poise."

While Cohasset was able to get the ball inside at will in the win over the smaller, less experienced Hull Pirates, Norton proved to be a major challenge.

The Skippers' lead stretched from eight to a high of 14 points. But the Lancers slowly whittled it away until they eventually cut the deficit to one with 40 seconds remaining.

Cohasset wasn't about to let this one slip away though, as 6-foot-5 Joe Slotnick (15 points) sank two big free throws to put the Skippers up by three. Dorian Bryant (13 points) preserved the win when he blocked a 3-point attempt as time ran out.

Jim Magner chipped in with nine points and two 3-pointers, and was instrumental in Cohasset's stubborn defense throughout the game.

With the Skippers showing improvement in shooting percentage and shot selection, along with a major drop in turnovers, their outside game has complemented the strong, physical play that has been the key to success on the court.

Cohasset has added another arsenal to its list of weapons. And the SSL is the enemy.

Bunsteins lead the way

By Kevin Lewis
Special to the Mariner

The hockey team won its first game of the season Friday, defeating South Boston 4-3. Sophomore Nevin Bunstein scored two goals while his seventh-grade brother, Kyle, made 29 saves to backbone the victory. David Noble and Mike Riley scored the other Cohasset goals.

The players protected a one-goal lead the entire third period. Outstanding defensive efforts were displayed by the entire team, including a block shot by Kevin Smith, key penalty killing and face-offs by Pat Reynolds and numerous key saves by Kyle Bunstein to preserve the victory. Charlie Endris anchored the defensive unit of David Noble, Anthony Wigmore, Adam Donovan, Matt O'Connor and Jared Graves, who played his finest game of the season. Forwards contributing to the victory were Brian Riley, Chris McKenna, "Bubba" Kinchla, Mike Shields, Pat Reynolds, Mike Riley, Nevin Bunstein, Kevin Smith and Matt Lewis.

Congratulations to head coach Dennis Walsh, and his staff of volunteer coaches — Richie Evans, Donny O'Neil and Eric Caldwell.

Earlier in the week, league leading Hanover defeated Cohasset. Eighth-grader Matt Lewis scored the lone Cohasset goal assisted by Kevin Smith. Kevin McKenna and Jeff Tosi split the goaltending duties.

Chi Kung event set

Visiting Tai Chi and Chi Kung master Wei Lun Huang has been scheduled for a return visit to the Wah Lum Kung Fu Academy of Cohasset to teach a workshop focusing on Chi Kung (internal energy practice). The Chi Kung workshop, for which no previous experience is necessary, will be held Friday, Jan. 28, from 7 to 9 p.m. Cost will be $50. This workshop is beginner level and open to the public.

For further information, call John Loupos at WLKFA in Cohasset, 383-6822.

indoor track team on Dec. 7 and gave an informative lecture on Jan. 18. Meyer appeared a trifle bit shocked by the amount of runners and walkers he has seen since moving to Hingham last fall.

The town has one of the most scenic Main Streets in all of New England, with sidewalks, well-back from the busy traffic. For those runners who prefer to get off the roads and onto the trails, World's End is arguably the best location on the South Shore. I've run as many as 12 miles through the spacious nature preserve, rarely having to double back. And there is one mammoth hill in the middle of the park that could put the fittest of runners into oxygen debt.

And don't forget Wompatuck State Park. The many fire roads make great running routes, as well as perfect thruways for bikers and roller-bladers.

The grounds around Hingham High School are an excellent location for off-road speed workouts, not to mention the school's track, one of the best in Eastern Mass.

Running is one sport where you can start and end a workout from your front door. But believe me, a drive to Hingham to train is well worth it.

-Joe Reardon

I was so thrilled when I read that Nancy Kerrigan is beginning her jumps during practice. Enough is enough! I can sympathize with Kerrigan, who was the victim of a malicious crime, but I don't want to read about how every workout turns out for the '92 bronze medalist. At this point, the only events that will interest me are if: A) Harding is arrested, which would prove me wrong in believing she was innocent, but instead, surrounded by a gang of dangerous morons. B) Harding is voted out of the Olympics; a strong possibility by the looks of things. C) Both Kerrigan and Harding compete against each other in the Olympics.

Of course, the far more intriguing question is who will portray the two skaters in the inevitable movie (movies?) of the week. For Kerrigan, I can picture Alexandra Paul ("Baywatch"), Helen Hunt ("Mad About You") and Nancy McKeon ("Facts of Life"). The Tonya Harding character should be a cat fight — literally — between Shannen Doherty (Beverly Hills 90210"), Allisa Milano ("Who's the Boss"), Juliette Lewis ("Cape Fear") or my personal favorite, Drew Barrymore ("Poison Ivy"). Of course, Barrymore may not be able to take the part because the latest is that she'll be replacing Doherty on what the production dept. here at the Mariner calls "the zip code show. That'll leave Doherty the heavy favorite because anyone beating her out for the part knows the next move is to get a restraining order when Shannen comes a 'callin.

Sharks attack

By Bob Hatch
Special to the Mariner

The Bay State Sharks squirt minor team continued its winning ways with victories over the Worcester Crusaders, Lowell Jr. Chiefs and Springfield Jr. Olympics.

John Lynch (Hingham) handled the goaltending duties in the 5-1 victory at Holy Cross College, while Gabe Winer (Stoughton) had net duty in the Sharks' 7-1 victory at Tully Forum, home of the U.Mass-Lowell Chiefs. As the scores indicate, both boys did a great job.

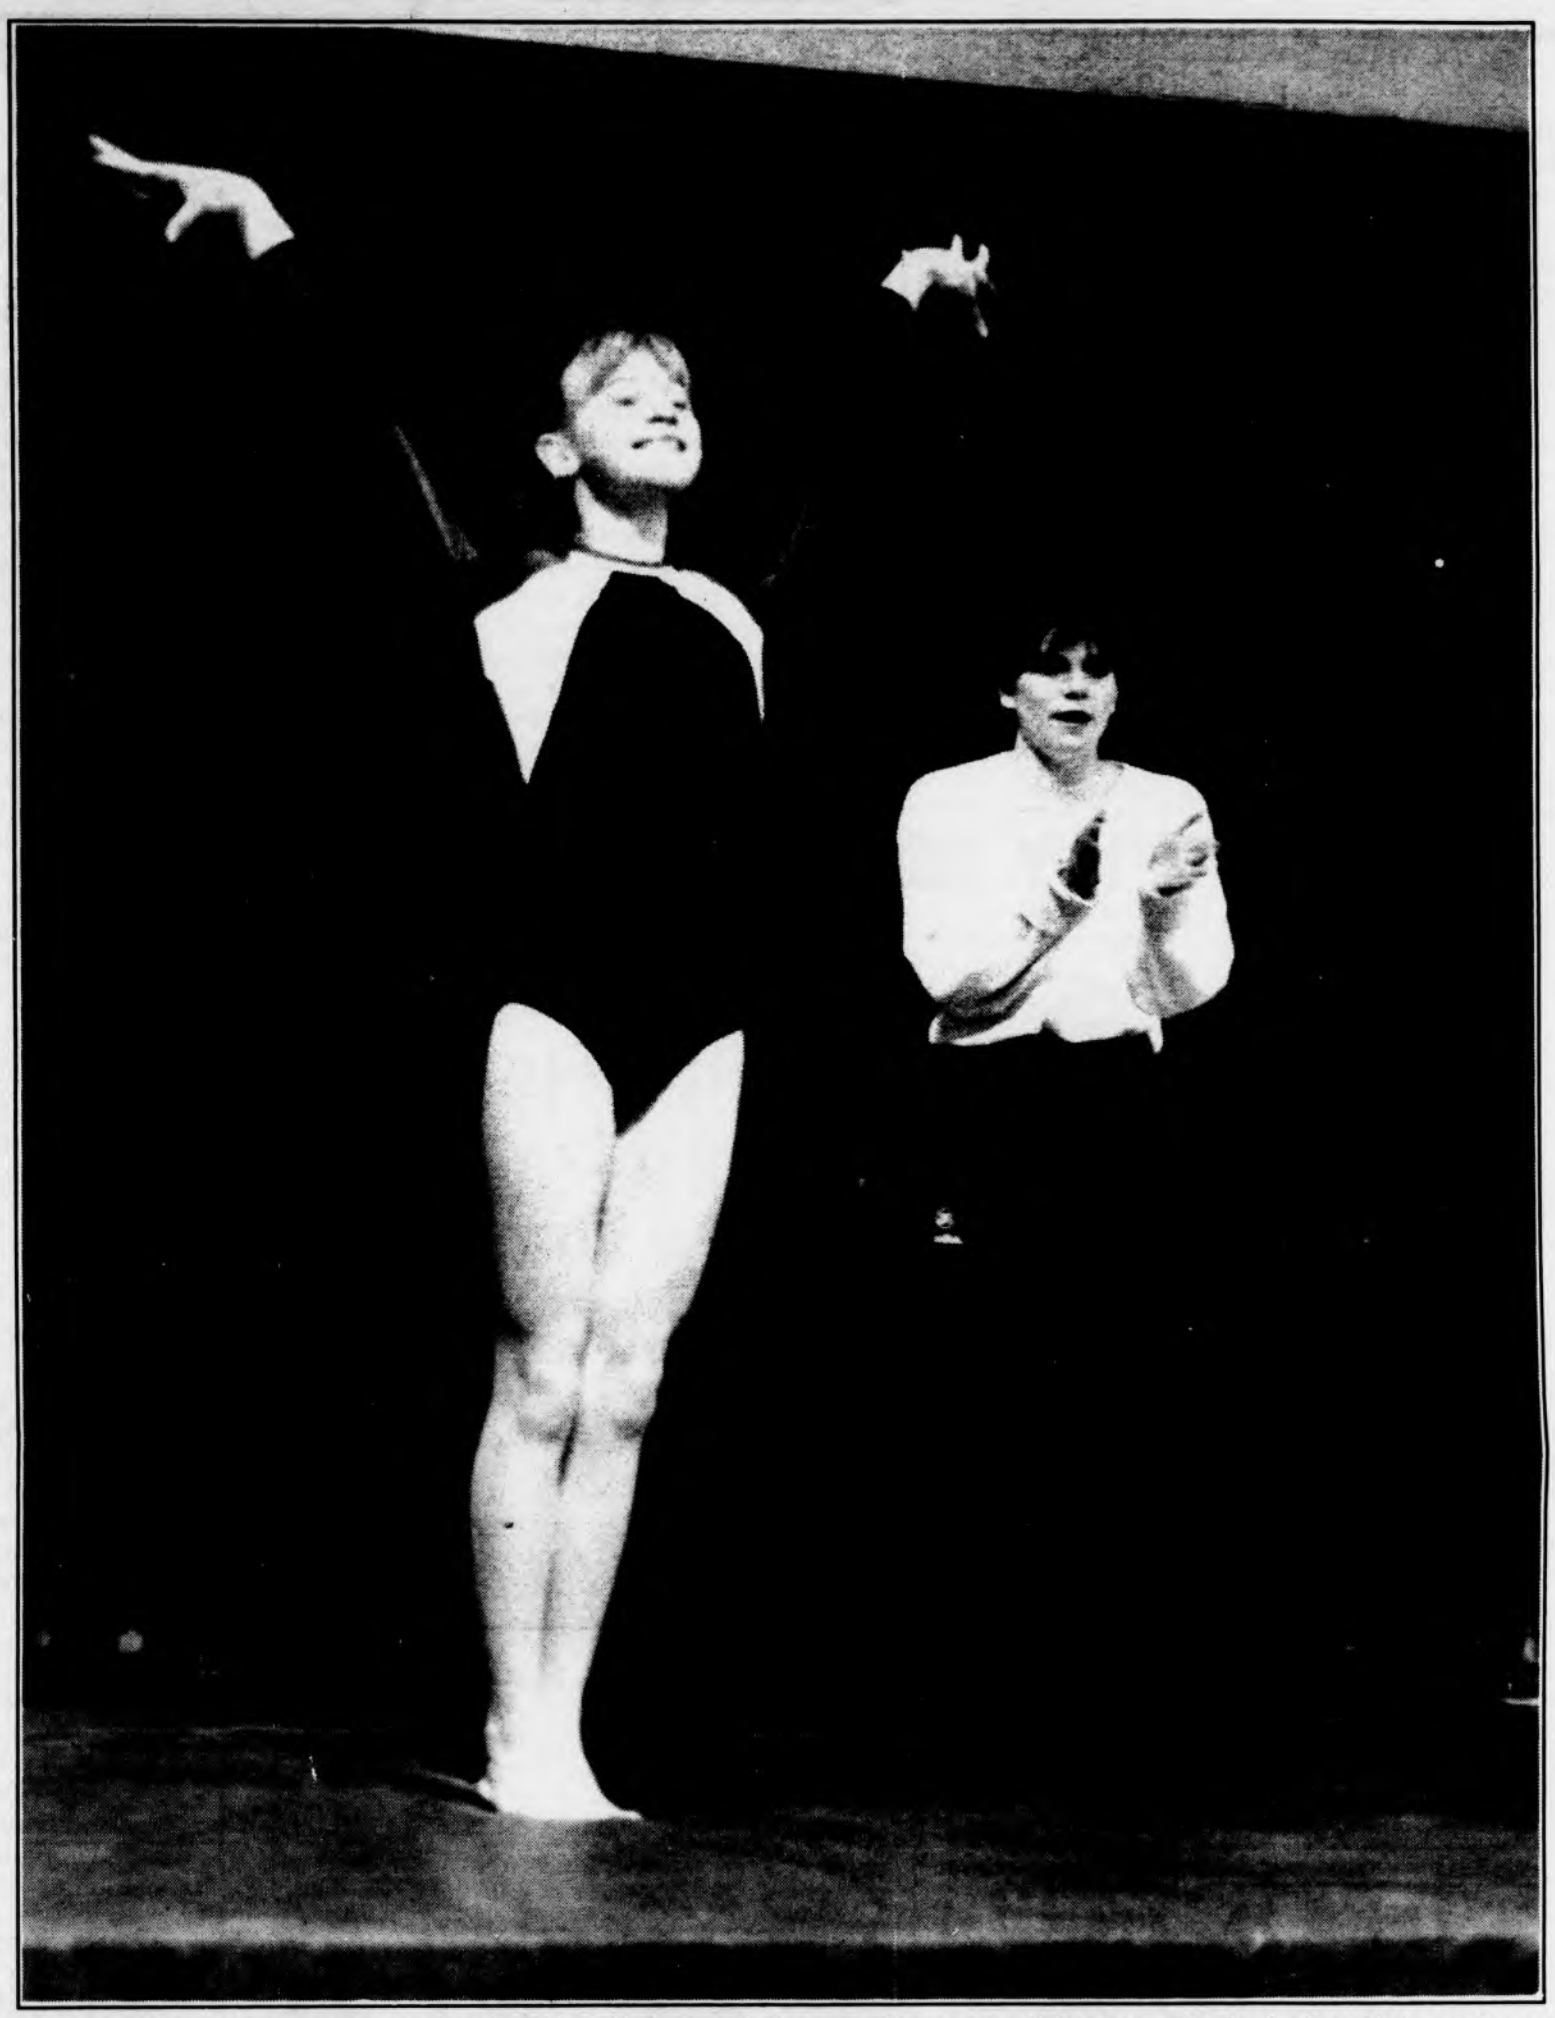
The Lowell game featured a Sharks bodychecking clinic led by Ryan Hatch (Hanover). Ryan had a number of big bangs and was joined in the hit parade by teammates Garret Daigler (Hingham), Pat Devine (Hingham), Nick Dunn (Marstons Mills) and Bobby Noonan (Marshfield). Playing the body the way they did allowed the Sharks to control the corners and play along the boards, which led to numerous scoring opportunities.

Next up was Springfield. The Junior Olympics are a very good team and after making the long ride from Western Mass., they were determined to make the trip worthwhile. The Pics scored 24 seconds into the game and again later in the first period to make it 2-0. With Sharks' defenseman Kenny Roche (So. Boston) and center Brian Boyle (Hingham) out of the lineup it was starting to look ugly. The Sharks couldn't buy a goal. Brian Lewis (Cohasset) and Scotty McGinn (Hingham) each had great chances but were robbed. Chris Coady (Hanover) and Dave Saggese (Hingham) both worked hard and had some good shots on goal but couldn't connect. The Sharks had slightly outplayed the Pics but had nothing to show for it. Then Matt Bourassa (Somerset) working hard behind his own net pushed the puck to Noonan, who cleared the blue line. Once over the blue line, Bobby threaded a needle and sent Devine in for the Sharks' first goal of the game. Later in the second period with the Sharks applying pressure, John Tewksbury (Marshfield), made a point-to-point pass to Scotty Sparks (Norwood). Scotty hit Greg Osborne (Stoughton) in front with the pass. Thumper shot, save, a mad scramble in front of the net, shot, save, now the Sharks were crashing the net, shot save, with the goalie sprawled in the crease. Ray Ortiz (Charlestown) caught the top corner and it was tied 2-2. Midway through the third period, Coady fired a pass to Osborne. Greg had a full head of steam as he crossed the Pics' blue line and worked through the defense. He managed to get off a backhander which was blocked, but Noonan grabbed the rebound for the go-ahead goal. The Sharks' defense and goaltending shut down the Olympics the rest of the way and the kids hung on for the 3-2 victory.

Sharks upcoming home games:

Saturday, Jan. 29, 12:05 p.m. vs. St. Moritz Devils at Hobomock Arena.

Sunday, Feb. 6, 9:10 a.m. vs. Minuteman Flames at Pilgrim Arena.



A Cohasset High School gymnast is all smiles after completing a routine against Hanover. The first-place Skippers have a busy schedule coming up with meets against Scituate (Jan. 27) and three home competions, beginning with Notre Dame (Jan. 28), Hanover (Feb. 1) and Carver (Feb. 2).

Baseball registration Feb. 16 and 23

Wednesday, Feb. 16 and 23, registration for participation in the 1994 Cohasset Little League program will be held at the Deer Hill School Cafeteria from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Each registrant should be prepared to complete the registration form, to pay the registration fee and to furnish a non-returnable copy of his or her birth certificate. These will be the only registration sessions and all parents are urged to register their children on one of these dates. All those whose birth dates are between August 1, 1976 and July 31, 1988 are required to register in order to participate in the various baseball programs for 1994.

Meyer highlights Boosters' schedule

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Sporting a deep tan after returning home to Hingham from Florida, 1983 Boston Marathon winner Greg Meyer shared his secret of winter running to 60 people who listened to Meyer speak at the Hingham Public Library on Jan. 18.

"I recommend everybody get on a plane and go to Florida," Meyer said jokingly. "This (cold weather) stinks."

Meyer's laid-back talk to members of the Hingham All Track Booster Club, and other runners from along the South Shore, was filled with several quips and helpful hints about training, preventing injuries and nutrition.

In Meyer, the boosters hit the jackpot in securing a speaker who knows what running at the world-class level is all about. His winning time of 2:09 is the third fastest ever run by an American. Meyer is also the last American to win the prestigious marathon.

Prior to the race, he was the hottest road runner in the country. Meyer won the Chicago Marathon in the Fall of '82 and the Cherry Blossom 10-miler in Washington, D.C. in a scintillating 46:13. At the Orange Bowl 10K that winter, he finished second to Alberto Salazar's American Record of 28:02 with a 28:13 clocking, two seconds in front of four-time Boston and New York City Marathon winner, Bill Rodgers.

Ironically, the Boston win — his biggest ever — marked the beginning of the end of Meyer's competitive career at the pinnacle of road racing.

"When I went to the marathon it was the end of my career," said Meyer, who looks much the way he did 11 years ago when he surged away from '80 Olympian Benji Durden and cruised through the Newton Hills to victory.

"The marathon doesn't create runners, it ruins them. Very few people are marathoners.

"Salazar wasn't a marathoner. It ruined his body just like mine."

Meyer told the attentive audience that his training philosophy is based on preparing himself both physically and mentally to what he expects to face on race day, thus, eliminating the element of surprise."

A frequent training partner and close friend of Rodgers, Meyer often put in 120-140 mile training weeks. But he has cut back in recent years and is currently running 40-miles per week.

He said anyone who wants to stay in shape can run as little as 30 minutes a day, three days a week, but emphasized the importance of getting the heart-rate up, in the process. As the runner trains on a more consistent basis he will eventually learn which workouts build both conditioning and confidence.

Meyer suggested hill workouts, tempo and Fartlek (pick-ups) runs as excellent training methods.

One favorite workout Meyer described

(See page 18)

Mariner Sports

was a training session he used to do with Rodgers and a group of several others on a steep hill, located off Route 128 in Weston. Meyer said the group would run seven repeats and try for the record on the eighth.

There was a catch, however. The runners weren't allowed to conserve themselves for an assault on the final repeat, but instead had to average a certain time on the run up the hill in order for a new record to count.

"You need to find out what works for you," Meyer said. "I believe in being totally prepared and that requires hard work."

He joked that he preferred putting in an intense workout with Rodgers than with Olympic gold medalist Joan Benoit Samuelson.

"I'd rather run a hard workout with Bill Rodgers than Joan Benoit (Samuelson)," Meyer said. "It was easier. Joanie liked to make you hurt. She enjoyed it."

As for winter running, Meyer said it can be an enjoyable experience, provided you are dressed accordingly. He recommended runners wear layers of clothing and be flexible enough to take a day off in dangerous conditions when roads are icy and visibility is poor.

"Be smart out there," Meyer said. "It's no different than going into a race. Be prepared."

Nutritionally, Meyer said runners should eat a well-balanced diet, avoiding fats and consuming too much food 3-4 hours before a workout. He said a few Saltine crackers and water are excellent in replenishing the body when it hits that low-energy point late in the afternoon.

He also pointed out that Hingham is a great running community — better even than Boston.

"It really is amazing how many people run and walk in Hingham," Meyer said.

St. Moritz hosts two hockey games

Sunday, Jan. 16, the St. Moritz Devils' Squirt minor hockey team hosted the North Shore Raiders for its third match of the season. As usual when these teams meet, the action was fast. The Devils really wanted a win and played their hardest. The game was very physical with both teams checking aggressively. The Devils had many shots on goal but were unable to score. The Devils showed good teamwork by passing and covering for each other. Defenseman Robbie Johnson of Duxbury attempted a breakaway. Devil goalie Kevin Regan of South Boston made many great saves for his team. Luck was with the Raiders as they scored three goals and won 3-0. Raiders Tomasi and Callahan scored the three goals (two for Tomasi and one for Callahan).

The Devils' hockey playing was not over for the week as they hosted the first-place South Shore Kings Tuesday night. The Kings are formidable opponents and the Devils arose to the occasion. The Kings quickly scored three goals during the first period. Devil Mike Aylward of Milton, assisted by Pat Balaconis of South Boston, put the Devils on the scoreboard near the end of the first period.

Devil John Segalla of Quincy, assisted by Nick Sarno of Milton, quickly scored in the second period. The Devils kept pounding away at the goal and also kept the Kings from scoring again until the end of the second period. The tide turned again toward the Kings as they scored three more times in the third period. Devil Steve Segalla of Quincy scored the last Devil goal to bring the score to 7-3, Kings.

Baseball camp set

Instructor Steve Ferrolli will offer early bird baseball camp for ages eight to 12 February 21 to 25, from 3:30 to 5:50 p.m. The goal is to enable boys and girls to improve their skills in a positive recreational atmosphere. Smith College club meets

Sunday, Jan. 30, at 2 p.m. author Roberta Grimes will discuss and sign her new book, My Thomas, a novel of Martha Jefferson's life, at the Little Harbor Bookstore, 39 South Main Street, Cohasset. The talk is sponsored by the South Shore Smith College Club, and it is free and open to the public. My Thomas, written in the style of a journal, is a portrait of the world of Thomas and Martha Jefferson from Martha's viewpoint. Roberta Grimes spent three years doing background research for the novel, including several trips to Monticello, the Jeffersons' home in Virginia. My Thomas was a recent Book of the Month Club selection.

Russian tale is topic

Russell van der Werf, son of Dr. and Mrs. Ray van der Werf, Lothrop Lane, has been a Mormon missionary for the last two years in the Ukraine.

He will speak on his experiences there at 10 a.m. Sunday Jan. 30 at The church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Hingham. He will be returning to Brigham Young University for the spring semester.

Two selectmen jump off the Greenbush train

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

There will be a little more room on Greenbush railroad cars for the governor to hop on board because one Cohasset selectman bailed out this week and another is hanging on by his fingernails.

Just two weeks ago, Cohasset selectmen agreed to give their Scituate counterparts unanimous support in sending a letter to Gov. Weld urging him to focus his efforts to get the Greenbush Line on track.

But Monday night, Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle said he did not agree to support restoration of the Old Colony Railroad which would go through Cohasset. He said he only agreed that the issue should be resolved once and for all.

Selectman Merle S. Brown also said he did not support restoration of the railroad but wanted the governor to support transportation alternatives.

"(I agreed) to go to Weld to push something not the train," Brown said.

Scituate Selectman Kevin Kinsella made a special trip to the Cohasset selectmen's meeting to obtain the board's signatures on the letter to Weld imploring him to act "with great speed an alacrity to get this (railroad restoration) off dead center."

Selectmen Jane Goedecke, Michael H. Sullivan, Martha Gjesteby and Brown signed the letter. Laugelle did not.

In a 1991 referendum on the train, 64 percent of the Cohasset citizens who voted were in favor of the railroad restoration. The percentage across Greenbush Corridor towns averaged 73 percent.

Kinsella, who visited Weymouth selectmen to obtain their signatures prior to coming to Cohasset's selectmen's meeting, seemed undaunted by the division on Cohasset's board.

He said no date had been set yet to present the letter "with all the attendant media attention" to Weld.

Kinsella said he thinks Weld will be sympathetic to the rail restoration effort in an election year. Cohasset selectmen couldn't attend the Jan. 18 Scituate meeting to discuss the letter to push for restoration of the railroad because of a conflict with their own meeting that night.

They've achieved a No. 5 ranking in Division 3 by playing tough in the low post and utilizing a stingy defense. Even when the Cohasset High basketball team falls into a funk, it always seems to be able to put together devastating scoring runs that wear the competition to the bone.

Mormon mission in Ukraine is a first

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

What's so unusual about a 21-year-old man from Arizona, living in the Ukraine, speaking fluent Russian, working as a missionary in his church and giving injections at a Ukrainian hospital for a community service project?

Nothing, according to Russell van der Werf.

Russell's family has lived in Cohasset for the past two years while he was on a mission with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (Mormon.)

Dr. Ray van der Werf, D.D.S., Russell's father, has been studying root canal work at Boston University. Russell's sisters, Melissa and Charlotte, have attended Cohasset Schools for the past two years.

As he returned last week, Russell admitted that it should have struck him as odd, to be living a lifestyle so foreign to anything he'd known.

"I thought about it; this should seem weird to me. This is not normal," he said. "I think it should inspire some awe in us, but it didn't," he said. "I really enjoyed what I was doing," he said.

The Mormon Church, which has more than 300 missions around the world, had been in the former Soviet Union only three years. In several cities, Russell

Cohasset's week

1994 RTF permits required after Feb. 1

Cohasset residents are req' .ed to have a current permit for the recycling transfer facility no later than Tuesday Feb. 1. No one will be allowed to use the facility without a current permit affixed to the vehicle in the proper location.

Town census mailed

The town census for 1994 has been mailed to each household . The local census is primarily used to maintain voting and jury lists, but it also aids in school enrollment projections, public safety and senior citizens' needs. The local census also establishes proof of residency which is often needed for certain privileges, such as transfer station stickers and cemetery rights, some veterans' benefits and reduced tuition rates at state colleges and universities.

Dog forms were enclosed with the census forms. The licenses are valid from Jan. 1 through Dec. 31. Forms are available at the town clerk's office for anyone not receiving one in the mail. They should be completed and returned before Monday Feb. 7.

Youth Center gets nod

Thanks to the efforts of Cohasset Youth Resources, Inc., the town could soon have a youth center.

Selectmen agreed Monday to lease the Independence Building in Cohasset Village to the non-profit group for $1 a year.

Keith Knowles, the organization president, said the next step is to get the town's youth involved with the project.

Tradesmen in town have offered to donate their labor for the building renovations, Youth Resources member Bill Adams told the board.

"Once this is approved, we can move very quickly," Adams said.

Member Bill Baird said the group had tried very hard and "hopes this endeavor will be a success for a long period of time for our youth."

The Independence Building once housed the police department and was used by the Historical Society. The former Teen Depot had previously used space owned by the Community Center on Depot Court.

Landfill letter faulted

John K. McNabb, Jr. took a tongue lashing Monday night for a letter he wrote demanding selectmen take affirmative steps to oppose the proposed Cohasset Heights Landfill expansion.

In the letter, McNabb who is a member of S.A.F.E, (Stop Any Further Expansion) called on selectmen to fire the town's special counsel to the board of health, Michael Leon, for allegedly advising town officials that the issuing of the Final Environmental Impact Report (FEIR) was not the time to fight the proposed landfill expansion.

He also criticized selectmen for not sending a letter requesting a hearing with state officials on the FEIR after saying they would. State Sen. Brian McDonald made arrangements for the hearing "with no help from town officials," McNabb said.

Monday, selectmen worked on wording for their comments on the FEIR and changed their meeting to Tuesday next week so they can attend the 8 p.m. hearing on the environmental report on the landfill expansion at Cohasset High School Monday (Feb. 7). Selectman Michael H. Sullivan apologized on behalf of the board for being late in getting the letter requesting the hearing out.

But selectmen were clearly perturbed by McNabb's letter which was copied to other town boards and four newspapers.

Selectman Michael H. Sullivan said McNabb had taken Leon's remarks out of context and that was not fair.

He said McNabb was off the mark by "creating an environment of infighting in this town" about the landfill issue.

Crime on S. Main St.

Sunday afternoon (Jan. 30) a breaking and ente.'.g was reported on S. Main St., police said.

Taken from the home at 217 S. Main were one pistol, a 22 caliber rifle, and two air rifles, Sgt. Robert Jackson said.

Fingerprints and photographs were taken at the scene by Plymouth County Basic Crime Investigative unit, Jackson said.

Det. Richard Grassie is investigating the burglary.

Pizza parlor to open

Village Fare, a restaurant featuring pizza and subs, could be open in about 10 days on S. Main St.

Selectmen approved issuing the establishment owned by Harold S. Boyden a common victualler license pending the appropriate sign offs from town departments and inspectors.

The restaurant will be open from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. seven days a week, Boyden told selectmen, and will occupy the former Aegean Fare space.

Library needs repairs

In two separate articles, library trustees will ask Town Meeting voters to appropriate money to repair the roof, gutters, and ceiling and repair and waterproof the exterior masonry at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Preliminary estimates put the total cost of repairs at about $21,000.

Trustee Sheila Evans explained that interest from the library's endowment goes toward the operating budget at the library. The Friends of the Paul Pratt Library plan to provide funds to repair the children's bathroom.

"The philosophy of the library is that the library is a town treasure and the taxpayers should want to repair it," Evans said. Her remarks followed questioning from Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle about how much money the library could contribute to repairs.

School board grapples with budget

By Sean P. Sweeney
Mariner correspondent

The Cohasset School Committee met Thursday, Jan. 27, in order to continue its discussions regarding the proposed budget for fiscal year 1995. The meeting was marked by substantial dialogue among committee members, school administrators and parents regarding the need for various staff and equipment additions.

The committee will meet again Thursday, Feb. 3, in order to further discuss the proposed budget. The committee is scheduled to meet with the Advisory Committee Tuesday, Feb. 8, in order to discuss the final budget proposal.

While many of the committee meetings of the past have been sparsely attended by Cohasset citizens, the new emphasis on school based management and the formation of school councils under the Education Reform Act have had the effect of increasing attendance and participation of parents and other residents.

School Supt. Stephen Hart gave some preliminary information regarding school funding and the continuing effects of Proposition 2 1/2. According to Hart, the town expects that between property tax hikes, new growth tax revenue, interest on the town holdings and excise tax revenue, the expected increase in available town funds will be approximately 3 percent. With this in mind, the town would like all departments to limit their budget increases to three percent, Hart said.

Hart explained that the School Committee is now struggling with the task of submitting a proposed budget of anywhere between a 4.7 percent and 8.2 percent increase. According to Hart, a 3.7 percent increase would be roughly equivalent to maintaining present services. In addition, Hart pointed out that the effect of the Education Reform Act with regard to the level of state educational funding will be minimal. He stated that the Act provides for a certain level of increased funding based on something known as a municipal growth factor. In addition, the Act also will provide for an additional $27,000 in state aid. The actual financial effect of the Education Reform Act will translate to only about a 3 percent increase in state funding. Hart emphasized that this is not enough to solve the funding problems that exist.

"People need to understand that the Education Reform Act has not really changed the fundamental problem, namely, Proposition 2 1/2 and the reliance on property tax revenues for funding. We are still operating within restraints created by the state."

Committee Chairwoman Nancy Sandell suggested that the committee view the proposed budget with an eye towards reaching a proposed budget increase of approximately 5 percent or 5 1/2 percent for submission to the Advisory Committee. Committee Vice Chairman Ralph Kidder opposed budget review based upon a predetermined percentage, instead suggesting that the committee consider its priorities and see what percentage increase they translate to.

One of the immediate needs that all committee members were in agreement on was the addition of a first grade section at the Osgood School. Committee members felt that the projected increase of 40 to 50 students in the system mandated the addition of a first grade section in order to continue the system's commitment to small class sizes.

The proposed budget also called for the addition of a bus driver. The committee decided to remove the proposed position from the budget, but not before devoting significant time and discussion to the problem of bus crowding.

"It is important that the people of Cohasset realize that busses are crowded," Wilcox explained.

While the committee believes that it can maintain the same level of bus service for one more year, it determined that the issue will have to be revisited next year.

In addition to the addition of the one staff member necessary to add a first grade section, the committee also decided to include the positions of kindergarten aide, elementary school recess aide and a technology aide. The committee decided to exclude the proposed upgrade of the library aide position at the Osgood School to a full time position.

One of the evening's most discussed budget items was the proposed addition of a language arts curriculum coordinator. The position is geared at providing cohesion between various grades at the elementary level and preventing teachers from spending half the school year reviewing topics taught during the previous year. Another expected benefit of adding the position would be equity within the grade levels as it pertains to language arts.

Despite a compelling argument for the position's inclusion in the budget by Osgood School Principal Linda Whitney, and the support of various concerned parents, the committee decided to table the discussion of the budget and his companions were the first American missionaries ever to visit the area.

"I don't know that we really comprehended that we were the first. To us it was just like going to Idaho, or Japan," he said. Many Mormons, spend two years on a mission anywhere in the United States or around the world in an effort to grow the church.

The community service work is only a portion of the two-year commitment, but it was hard to find work in a socialist country, he said.

"The system is set up there that everyone has a job. When we went to the hospital, they wanted us to sit and talk. They were very loving people, but as far as the service went, we couldn't do very much.

"We could teach English, or we would go to hospitals. We were thinking, we could play with little kids. They had us giving people shots."

Although it doesn't include any medical training, preparation for the trip was rigorous. At 19, Russell sat through an eight-month intensive training program. For 12 hours each day, he was trained in Russian language and other aspects of missionary work. However, he rose to the challenge.

"For me it was something I prepared for all my life," he said. While prospective missionaries have no say in where they will be sent, Russell always wanted to go to Russia. "Because it was new," he said.

In order to get sent on a mission, the application process is similar to college. The main church office in Salt Lake City, Utah, processes all applications for the program, and matches missionaries, called Elders after they are trained, with countries or areas.

Missionaries pay $350 per month to the church for all their expenses. Scholarships are available for church members who can't afford it.

Upon arriving in the Ukraine, Russell and his seven fellow missionaries had a variety of tasks.

For the first several weeks, he would stand out on the streets of Ukrainian cities stopping passers by to initiate discussions about the church.

The Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints was difficult to explain to the Ukrainian people, Russell said.

"They would ask, 'Are you Baptist? Are you Catholic? Are you Russian Orthodox?' It was hard to explain."

"About one in five of those discussions went on," he said. Next was to find a meeting place and set up a church. They would lead services and discussions.

"Most meeting places are in schools, movie theaters or community centers. The reason we went to movie theaters is that the TV system has gotten to the point where they now have brand new movies on TV. Theaters are expensive, so no one really goes to them anymore," Russell explained.

It was rare that they were rejected because they were a religious group. "If we couldn't get a building, it was usually because it was too expensive," he said.

Although he was functioning in a leadership role, he said he never felt older than his years.

"In a way, they were like children. (Religion) was foreign to them because they weren't allowed to learn about it. Anytime you're in the middle of something it doesn't seem like any big deal," he said.

Later, Russell tried the same strategy in cities around the Ukraine. His path was driven by local politics: almost halfway through his mission, a law was about to be passed forbidding missionaries from going to new cities uninvited.

Mormon mission in Ukraine is a first

"Right before the law was to pass, we tried to open up six new cities," he said.

Another part of Russell's assignment was to interpret for the president of the Russian Mission during meetings with the country's religious leaders. "That wasn't my job, it was sort of out of convenience," Russell explained.

While he traveled around the Ukraine Russell gained a perspective on the depressed economy.

"As far as the economy goes, they're really struggling," he said. But the weakness is in technology, not in lack of food, as reported in the media.

"We ate potatoes, eggs, rice, cheese and bread," he said. He avoided meat, which merchants identified in the open-air 'Rinok' markets by mounting the head of the carcass above the meat to be sold.

"It just didn't taste very good. Maybe we didn't know how to cook it right."

Ukrainians had fruits and vegetables during the summer, and many canned some of their private harvests from their gardens, he said.

"Once wither hit, it was just good-bye to all the fruits and vegetables," Russell said.

There was hardly an acre of ground that was not cultivated, but when it came time to harvest or preserve the food, a lot of it rotted in the ground.

"They don't need the people to give them the food. It's such a fertile country, if they could just learn to grow it and harvest it," he said.

In fact he's so inspired by the possibilities there, Russell decided to study Russian and business when he starts at Brigham Young University this spring. After college, he'd like to set up a business with the agriculture industry.

Although he is blasé about the experience, Russell is confident that being a missionary changed his life.

"I've done an about face. I've always been a pretty obedient kid, but it was more because I understood with my mind that I should be nice to people. As I served my mission, I came to understand why I should do this," he said.

He used an example of a prison visit to make his point. If someone jailed for stealing thought about the theory on why he shouldn't steal, they wouldn't do it, and thus he would be free.

"Commandments are more than just a set of rules. What they are is guidelines for right and wrong. I know it is by following these commandments that I am free."

item and has not yet reached a decision on whether it will be included in the final budget. One parent questioned the appropriateness of including various athletic coaching positions in the budget in light of the committee's doubt over whether the curriculum coordinator could be justified for inclusion.

During the course of discussions at the meeting, the scope of the position and its applicability to other subject areas increased significantly, raising concerns among committee members over how the position fits in with the overall curriculum direction of the system. Talk that the position would include consideration of the use of technology in curriculum prompted Kidder to raise again an issue which has troubled him for some time.

"I have to ask again, is it curriculum that drives technology or technology that will drive the curriculum?" Kidder questioned. Consistent with the concern, Kidder expressed his opposition to purchases of large quantities of technology equipment until it is determined how the technology fits into the curriculum.

❑ The Cohasset Food Pantry wish list should be a priority for the new year! Right now they need the following: Ziplock bags, detergent, toilet paper, white rice, fruit, cereal (no corn flakes, please), dish detergent, canned spaghetti, crackers, hot cereal, pancake mix, syrup, puddings, and bags to put the essentials in.

Try to remember to help those who need it, they are in our own town!

❑ You know, Craig Muir deserves applause, he is a gem! He works so hard, then does work for the Second Congregational Church in his spare time, then he was Santa for the Council on Aging, he is a great husband and super father.. whew, heavy load, and he does a grand job!

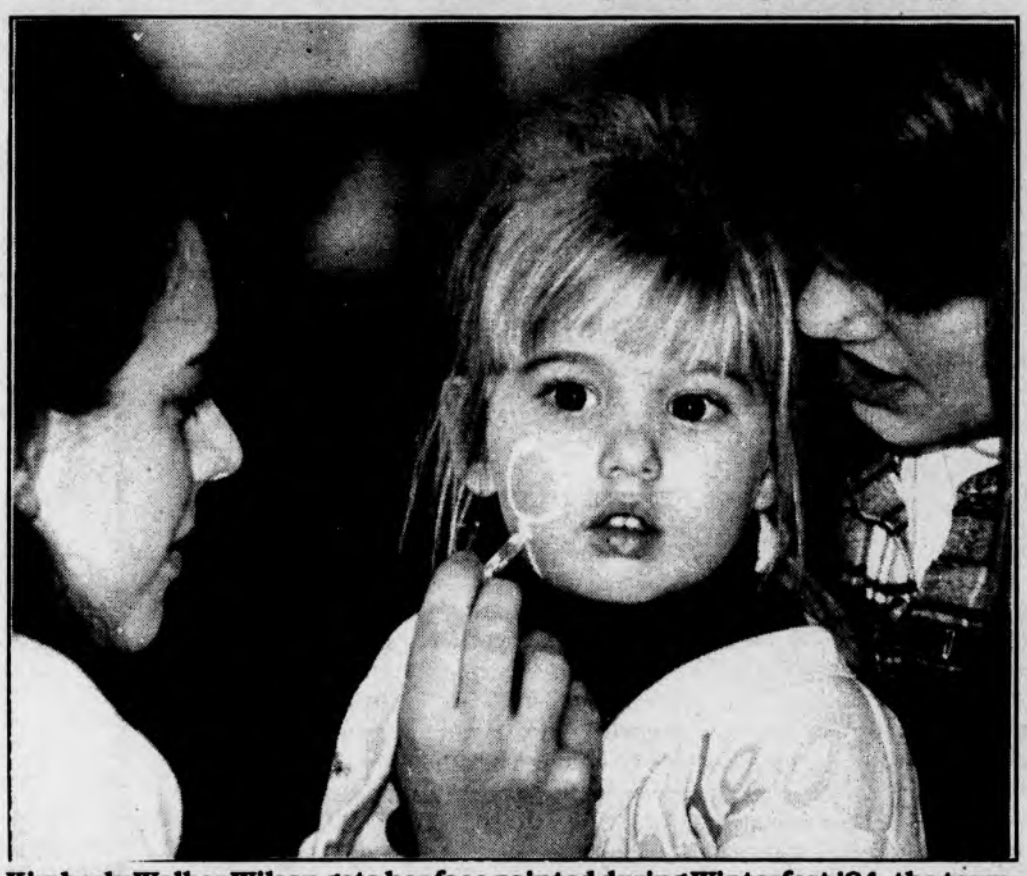
❑ We have to begin by giving a high five to all of those responsible for the best weekend that most kiddos have had all winter.

Through the efforts of the drug-free committee and many donations from various local organizations, the whole weekend was wonderful! There were so many events! (You will have to watch the conclusion of the basketball game against Abington, the floor got so slippery from the snow and water that they couldn't finish it).

The clown made balloon toys for all of the people, young and old, and the brunch was a huge success (and yummy). The sundaes were scrumptious as well. If you missed the events at the fun fair, you really missed a treat because the kids had such fun. When you see anyone wearing an orange shirt that says drug-free weekend, be sure to tell them what an awesome job they did.

And, if you couldn't make it to the events this year, make plans now to be there next time.

❑ Did you know that Nicole Santoro of Cohasset is one of the 1,400 regional finalists in Kid Search '93, the largest model contest in the country? We wish you success Nicole, let us know how you do.



Kimberly Walker Wilson gets her face painted during Winterfest '94, the town-wide Drug and Alcohol Free weekend awareness and education celebration. For more photos, please see page 11.

❑ Happy 30th anniversary to Ann and Roger Pompeo, may your next 30 be as happy as your first.

❑ Jeff Bryant, son of Jack and Vernita Bryant of Hobart Lane, graduated last month from the University of Michigan with a degree in civil engineering. Jeff graduated from CHS in 1989. His sister Saadi also graduated from the University of Michigan, as well as being a CHS grad. We congratulate you both, Michigan was lucky to have you in their college, we all know how talented you are.

And, good luck in the business world.

❑ Cohasset's Johanna Horn received a great Christmas present in December! Johanna was accepted at Bowdoin College under their early decision plan. She is a member of the sixth form at St. Paul's School in Concord, New Hampshire and is the daughter of Richard and Carolyn Horn of Highland Avenue. Johanna, who was a sailing instructor at the Cohasset Yacht Club last summer, is also the captain of the 1994 SPS girl's track team. Congratulations!

❑ Here is a little breath of spring for you, the forms for the 18th annual Cohasset Roadrace by the sea are available for you runners/walkers. Pre-registrations close March 21st, get your application and your $10 entry fee; then be ready March 27 to win the 6.2 mile race. There will be shirts for the first 700 runners, and it is sanctioned by the NEAC.

The Cohasset Rotary Club always does a grand job running this event, and it is an exciting event for the whole town to watch (or participate) in, so be sure you get your application asap.

❑ Hope that everyone read about Kara Johansen and her tragedy concerning the thieves who forced their way into her home and stole about $4,000 of computer equipment and software.

Kara, a student at Deer Hill School, needs the software as her computer helps her with her homework. She has cerebral palsy. A fund has been established to cover the $1,000 insurance deductible to replace what she needs. Anyone wishing to donate can send a check made out to the PSO/Kara Johansen, c/o Ann Whiteley, 35 Pond St., Cohasset 02025. Or, bring your check to Deer Hill School office. Can you think of a better thing to do for a lovely young lady?

Remembering a precious personality and a beautiful life

A letter to the Dear Friends of Mrs. Winfield M. Sides:
(Camilla Paula Elizabeth Weber)

We lost Mrs. Sides on the first day of summer, June 21. She quietly slipped away from this earth to horizons beyond our own.

She had a wonderful life!

We are all going to miss a precious personality this bundle of sunshine with abundant energy this generous heart with an optimistic outlook called "Camilla."

Thirty years in Germany, 30 in Andover, 30 in Cohasset are a great record. She forever remained an alert, active lady, and a very pretty one indeed! She was in a dignified position in her comfortable Cohasset home. Her ways were delightful and prosperous. She usually looked forward to her afternoons when she'd share ideas and philosophies with good company at the coffee table or in the living room.

I don't know anyone else who relied so much on walking as she did! She went 97 years long without driving an auto. Being a Weber, her constitution was of healthy stock! People who knew her lately admired her independent and personal strength. Her natural inclinations in art, music, and literature were rooted in a proud cultural foundation, a childhood in the city center of Frankfurt am Main, Germany, where she was born in 1896, June 2.

The lives of those who touched hers were doubly blessed! So full of joy and genuine feeling, she was quick and willing to do for others; nothing ever seemed too much, a teacher by example. She believed that mothers who do their duty bring forth in their sons and daughters, besides softer and milder virtues that make for happiness, the stern and hardy qualities needed to overcome difficulties in life.

Children especially attracted her very dearly. They were God's love to her, the voice and promise of the future.

In Germany, she had served "Zum Wohle der Menschheit," a league which placed children with families.

Then in April of 1923 came the invitation to come to America from Pastor Jacob Pistor of Chicago. With the help of the Lutheran pastor of the church where she took the children Sundays, St. Paul's in Frankfurt, and the director of the Children's Home, Rev. Pistor made possible at her request that a close friend also in the same calling, Johanna Eckhardt, could go with her. They were met in Berlin, and further assisted with passage to sail on the Hansa from Hamburg going as friends to visit the Chicago minister.

This mission took her to Highland Park, Illinois and Beverly Hills, California. She met Mr. Sides in the summer of 1927 on board the S.S. Munich while crossing over the Atlantic Ocean on her way back home. Thereupon, she returned in the fall and they were married Jan. 5.

The Old New England School became a way of life she'd never before known. She adjusted to a lovely style on "The Hill" and enjoyed every bit of it all making a good home amidst a hard Academy program. Those first years were her best, and from my experience, she was always ready and presentable in a most beautifully gracious manner to welcome the world with open arms, not only into her fine home but wherever she went.

I can't begin to recall the thousands over the years who were privileged to share the hospitality, concern, and close attention provided them by both Mr. and Mrs. Winfield M. Sides together. He was well established in his field of mathematics and she too loved what she was doing. Her warm nature and special understanding with extra strong support at her good husband's side have given her the honorable place she so well deserves in the hearts and souls of Phillips Academy.

In her last days there wasn't anything she responded to better than "Mutti" (mother). She herself wrote in a letter Feb. 22, '90, "I was ten years old when my Papa took me to my grandmother's funeral in Waldsee, Würtemberg. She wore in her white hair a delicate wreath of snow drops, those first blossoms in May. Her daughters made them fresh each morning for three days. Papa held me by the hand in his warm, firm grasp...The tears I felt and the love of his for his mother made a deep impression I never forgot. Six hundred people came and I resolved then in my innermost being what I was going to be."

Later she wrote the story of her life in Der Baum, printed in Lawrence, Mass. and distributed in the schools of Germany during World War II.

In Cohasset "The Firmament" provided a clear, sunny day for her farewell! My mother was resting peacefully in light blue on ivory satin protected by angels on miles and miles of fluffy, white clouds. A tall plant of bright geranium colored roses stood at her side. Many friends came and we passed among us a booklet of picture memories. After a prayer and a heavenly blessing, the pastor came with us to Red Gate Lane where on "Eireia" (name of her property in Cohasset) I had an elegant table prepared. It was crowned by a crystal vase full of pale, pink roses very close to her favorite "new dawn." Candles were lit on the mantel, and we felt Mutti among us as she was and always shall be.

She leaves her daughter, Renate Camilla Sides of Cohasset, and three grandchildren, Mary Wilcox Sides, Winfield Michael Sides III and Katherine Scott Sides.

Interment will be with her husband and son on their ranch in Wharton, Texas, where they'll have a service with the planting of an oak tree this spring.

❑ We were very sorry to learn of Jim Soltesz's sudden death, he surely will be missed around town. Jim was such a nice man, and a leader in the community. Our hearts go out to his family.

❑ The good news is that Burt Pratt is recovering and will soon be going to Ocean Manor Rehab in Scituate. We hope see you around town soon, Burt, you are missed by all and loved.

❑ Under the Cohasset Food Pantry news, they are in need of more! The shelves are almost bare! Among the most urgent needs are jelly, sugar, detergent, canned spaghetti, crackers, family size fruit juice, pancake mix and syrup; anything along those lines would be a huge help! Keep your fellow neighbor in mind and donate!

❑ That's the news from here for this week, would you please call with yours? You and everyone else will be glad that you did!

HELP GET GREENBUSH COMMUTER RAIL BACK ON TRACK!

PRO-RAIL RALLY IN HINGHAM SQUARE
SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1 TO 4 P.M.
COMMUNITY CENTER, CENTRAL & SOUTH STS.

Back on Track invites all residents of towns along the Greenbush Line who favor restoration of commuter rail to join us in our tenth anniversary celebration. If you're a commuter who's tired of fighting traffic and bad weather, a parent who wants their children to enjoy safe, smooth access to Boston's cultural treasures and sporting events, or a non-driver who feels stranded by the lack of public transportation facilities, we want to hear you and help you get the same fast, comfortable rail service other Boston-area communities enjoy. There'll be:

- Speakers
- Music by the Back on Track Folk Singers
- Railroad movies, old and new
- Exhibits of maps and models
- Refreshments

When you come, be sure to sign our petition to Governor Weld to move quickly to restore rail service to the Greenbush Corridor!

Paid for by Back on Track, P.O. Box 55, Hingham

Election policy

Time is nearly running out. Anyone mulling a run for town office only has until 7 p.m., Thursday, Feb. 10 to obtain nomination papers.

So far Cohasset's election only includes one contest: three citizens have taken out papers for two seats on the school committee.

In years past, The Cohasset Mariner has carried a Candidates Corner to which candidates could sumit their position papers weekly on the issues they deemed most important to their campaigns.

This year, we're going to pose a question one week and let candidates answer it the next week, if they so desire.

Here's how we hope it will go.

The week of Feb. 17, we'd like to start with formal statements announcing candidacies. Statements should list the candidate's crucial information, credentials, background, and a statement about why he or she is running for office. Photos may be included.

In the weeks thereafter, we will run a "Candidates' Corner," but it will be limited to a few lines from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fundraisers and the like.

We will also pose a "Question of the Week," for candidates in contested races with the last "Question of the Week" replies in the edition of March 24, nine days before the April 2 election. We will print the question in one week's edition and candidates may reply the next week by FAXing their replies to 617-837-4843 or 617-740-8955, or leaving them at the Hennessy News in Cohasset Village, or mailing them to us, 165 Enterprise Dr., Marshfield 02050 by noonTuesday. Be sure to leave enough time for mail delivery. Candidates must limit their response to 200 typed words (or less), double-spaced.The Mariner is not responsible for late delivery of any replies for any reason.

The Mariner will not accept Letters to the Editor from candidates or letters endorsing candidates.The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues up until the March 24 issue before the election. That means that politically-oriented letters will not be printed after the March 2 4 edition.

Any event during the campaign, which is deemed newsworthy, will be handled by The Mariner's editorial staff.

Candidates are encouraged to advertise their campaigns in The Mariner. Political advertisements must be prepaid and the deadline for those ads is 5 p.m. Friday. Candidates who want a proof of their ad must submit it by 5 p.m. Thursday for the following week's publication. Preferred placement (choosing a particular page on which the ad is to run) carries a 25 percent surcharge.

For advertising information, call Jim Horvath, marketing director, at 1-800-649-6661.

No candidates are endorsed by The Mariner and no preferential treatment is offered any candidates seeking public office.

CHL landfill hearing is Monday, February 7

To the Editor:

A public hearing will be held Monday, Feb. 7, at 8 p.m., Cohasset High School Auditorium, on the proposed 27.5 acre "Area V" expansion of the Cohasset Heights Landfill.

I urge every Cohasset resident who is concerned about the quality of our water supply and the future of our town to attend this important hearing.

I call on every town official — especially every member of the Board of Selectmen, the Board of Health, and the Water Commission — to stand up and be counted by testifying at this hearing.

The hearing is being held by Jan Reitsma, Assistant Secretary of Environmental Affairs, and is being held at the request of Senator Brian McDonald.

The hearing is your best opportunity to let the state hear of your concerns for this landfill expansion. Speak up and let your voice be heard.

John K. McNabb, Jr.

Attendance at dump hearing is urged

To the Editor:

I would like to commend state Senator Brian McDonald and his assistant Bill Ryan for their diligent efforts on behalf of our community. It is through their efforts that citizens of Cohasset will have the opportunity to meet directly with Jan Reitsma from the Office of Environmental Affairs and comment on the proposed expansion of the privately owned Cohasset Heights Limited Dump.

I hope all of you who oppose this ill-conceived project will attend the public hearing Monday, Feb. 7, at 8 p.m. in the Cohasset High School auditorium.

Playground program needs supplies, please help

(Ed's note: The following is an open letter to Cohasset parents.)

Dear Parents,

This year's Playground Program is in need of certain arts and crafts materials. These materials are needed to ensure a creative and artistic program which is available every year. Your support and donation will be greatly appreciated. Below is a list of some of the materials in need:

Paper cups, clear plastic cups, large shells, paper plates, small lunch bags, paper towel cardboard rolls, fabric scraps, Ziploc bags large and small, styrofoam plates, left-over Christmas wrapping paper, New Year party items.

Should you be able to donate any of these or other items there will be a box at the recreation office for collections.

Take heart, winter is nearly half over

To the Editor:

About this time every year, many of us suffer from what is often referred to as cabin fever, the winter blues, or just the blahs. That's when it is time to think about winter being half over. Well, that time is approaching, or has passed, depending on how mid-winter is defined.

Curiously enough there are at least two ways to figure it. First, the day when the sun has come halfway back to the equator from its most southerly limit. This year that will occur two weeks from now at 11:25 p.m. EST, Feb. 17. On that day the sun will pass directly over Lima, Peru.

But take heart, the second definition is much nicer to consider and I favor it. It is the time exactly mid-way between the start of winter and the start of spring. That turns out to be at 3:27 a.m. EST Feb. 4, early tomorrow morning, on the day that the sun passes over La Paz, Bolivia., If we look at it that way, things should soon be improving. There is, however, no guarantee from this writer.

Healthcare reform bill opposed by seniors

To the Editor:

A healthcare reform bill, "Managed Competition Act," introduced by Rep. Copper and Sen. Breaux, is rapidly gaining speed in Congress as an alternative to President Clinton's health security act.

The Copper/Breaux bill is not a real reform bill: it does not cover everyone and does not clamp down on health insurance premiums. Among other problems with this bill, it is very bad for seniors and their families.

Federal Medicaid payments for nursing homes would be eliminated. Federal nursing home quality standards would be gone. Doctors could again charge more than what Medicare allows.

President Clinton's bill may not be the right answer to the much needed health reform, but Copper/Breaux is just a bad bill.

Seniors want a bill that fairly covers all Americans, regardless of age. Please call your senators and representatives and ask them to say no to this bill.

political notes

Dems to meet Feb. 12

Registered Democrats in Cohasset will be holding a caucus Saturday, Feb. 12, at 2 p.m. to elect delegates to the 1994 Massachusetts Democratic Convention. The convention will be held June 3 and 4 in Worcester. Its purpose is to endorse candidates for U.S. Senate and constitutional offices.

Cohasset will be electing four delegates and four alternates, equally divided between men and women, to send to the convention.

Chartis Langmaid, chairperson of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee, will call the caucus at the Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium, which is accessible to handicapped persons. The caucus is open to all registered Democrats in the town, persons ineligible to register and media representatives. The only persons eligible to participate in any portion of the caucus are those who are registered Democrats in Cohasset as of December 31, 1993. There will be no absentee or proxy voting.

Candidates for delegate and alternate must be present, voting, and give his or her written consent to be nominated and that nomination must be seconded by two persons present at the local caucus.

All ballots will be written and secret. Those candidates receiving the greatest number of votes on the first ballot will be elected.

Each candidate will be allowed to make a two-minute speech and to distribute on his/her behalf one sheet of paper listing qualifications and ideas. Slatemaking is allowed, but no special preference shall be given to slates. There is no quorum requirement for the caucus.

There will be no admission or expense charge at the caucus.

Discrimination on the basis of race, sex, age, color, creed, national origin, religion, ethnic identity, philosophical persuasion or economic status in the conduct of the caucus is strictly prohibited.

Challenges to the delegate selection process can be filed in writing with the Compliance Review Commission, c/o The Massachusetts Democratic Party, 45 Bromfield Street, Boston, MA 02108 no later than June 21.

Chittick is in the race

JoAnne Chittick has announced her candidacy for a three year term on the Cohasset School Committee. A 23-year resident of Cohasset, Chittick is a strong advocate for the public schools. Her two older children graduated from Cohasset High School and attend Dartmouth College; the youngest is a sophomore at Cohasset High School.

A 1966 graduate of Smith College, Chittick's professional experience includes 25 years as a free-lance editor, primarily for Houghton Mifflin, editing textbooks for elementary, high school and college levels. A painter for 15 years, she has exhibited at the South Shore Art Center and the Paul Pratt Library and serves as a gallery artist at the Scituate Arts Association.

Joanne Chittick has worked with the Cohasset schools for over 15 years, as Arts Enrichment coordinator and classroom volunteer for the Communication Councils, forerunner of the PSO. A founder of the PSO, she has served as Volunteer Talent Pool coordinator and School Representative from Osgood, Deer Hill, and the junior high school. At Osgood School, she helped develop the Great Books program. At the high school, she helped organize the Career Lecture Series, Junior High Newsletter, and worked on two senior class parents committees; her recent project is the development of a community service program. Chittick works with the Community Health Education Advisory Committee as well as the Arts Boosters. The Chittick family served as a host family for the METCO program for seven years.

Community activities include the Religious Education Committee of the First Parish Unitarian Church, the Family Service Committee of the Social Service League, the Friends of the Library, and the Jr. Activities Committee of the Cohasset Yacht Club. Chittick also serves as Cohasset coordinator at Rosie's Place, a shelter for homeless women in Boston.

Hubbard to run for trustee

June S. Hubbard of 144 Beach St., Cohasset, has announced her candidacy for the position of library trustee for the Paul Pratt Memorial Library for the one-year term.

June has lived with her husband Jack in Cohasset for 25 years and has been an active volunteer in many areas for that period of time. She is a former president of the Friends of the Library, an organization with which she has been associated for 25 years. She has also served as a library volunteer for that length of time. June drives the shuttle bus for the Council on Aging and delivers Meals on Wheels for the social service league.

Her belief is that the library and in particular the Paul Pratt is an important part of the community providing a real variety of resources for the citizenry.

The one-year term for which June is running was recently vacated due to the resignation of Katharine Sturtevant, who will be moving from Cohasset.

Kirk announces candidacy

James Kirk has announced his candidacy for the Cohasset School Committee. A 14-year resident of Cohasset, Kirk's background includes experience in both business and education. With an undergraduate degree from Harvard and a Shell Merit Fellowship at the Stanford School of Education, Kirk taught Advanced Placement Biology and Chemistry from 1972 to 1976 in Hingham, and also served as a science education consultant for five years. His 20-year career in business includes positions at Gillette and Ocean Spray. He is presently Vice President of Marketing and Sales at Eidetics in Watertown, a consulting and research company specializing in health education issues for patients and healthcare professionals.

"My two older daughters have gone through the Cohasset schools, and are well-prepared for their college careers," Kirk said. "I'd like to invest my time and energy in helping my youngest, who's now a first-grader at the Osgood, get an even better education."

Kirk has served for the past two years as Chairman of the Regional School District Planning Committee. He participated for the past several years in PSO activities, including the Career Lecture series and phone-a-thons. He presently serves as a director of the Cohasset Education Foundation, and is working to develop corporate partnerships for the schools. Kirk volunteers weekly at the Pine Street Inn medical clinic for the homeless, and is Boston Participation Chairman for his Harvard class fundraising.

Greenbush pro-rail rally in Hingham is February 12

Saturday, Feb. 12, Lincoln's Birthday, a pro-rail rally will take place at the Community Center on the corner of Central and South Streets in Hingham Square from 1 to 4 p.m.

Sponsored by Back on Track, the grass-roots citizens' group working since 1984 for commuter rail service restoration to the Middleboro, Plymouth, and Greenbush lines, the event will mark the organization's tenth anniversary and include refreshments, musical entertainment, and railroad films.

The public is also invited to view exhibits related to the Greenbush line restoration, with maps of the several tunnel alternatives now under study. Sen. Brian McDonald, a longtime supporter of the Old Colony rail restoration project, will speak, and William Grimes, founder and chairman of Back on Track, will discuss "Greenbush: Past, Present, and Future."

A petition to Governor Weld urging prompt restoration of rail service to Greenbush will be available for signature by Greenbush community voters.

"We invite all residents of all towns that would benefit from restored Greenbush rail service to stop by and say hello," said Grimes. "Hard as it may be to believe, judging by the headlines, Back on Track was founded in Hingham; but our goal remains what it has always been: to see commuter rail trains running again on all three lines as they did until 1959.

"Important decisions will be made this year regarding the future of the Greenbush line, and we want everyone, especially commuters, parents, and non-drivers, from Hingham, Marshfield, Scituate, Cohasset, Norwell and other Greenbush towns, to have the same first-class single-seat ride to Boston that those in communities to the north, west, and south of the city now enjoy. Their signatures on our petition will help make this possible."

Team comes first for Megan Pratt

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Megan Pratt will never be confused with being a selfish athlete. If anything, she is as team-oriented as an athlete can be.

This season the fourteen-year-old gymnast has greatly improved her individual performances, while still preserving the epitome of the consummate team player.

As Pratt sees it, the better she performs, the higher Cohasset High's gymnastics team is going to rise in the Pilgrim Conference standings.

"I try for my best scores, not for myself but for the team," said the petite, 4-foot-10, 85 pounder. "That helps me to do good."

Although she is only a freshman, Pratt is no stranger to varsity competition. She has been on the Skippers' squad since the seventh grade and believes being on the team at such a young age has paid off.

"You get the practice and experience of what its like being on a varsity team," Pratt said.

Pratt's coach, Ruthann Sargent has seen the progress of her freshman and foresees a bright gymnastics future waiting in the wings.

"She has come right around this year," Sargent said. "Megan is not a seventh- or eighth-grade child. She's taking everything she has learned and put it together.

Pratt has matured tremendously as a gymnast. Sargent said if she has a poor performance in one event, she is able to shake it off and move on to the next without dwelling on it. Pratt, Sargent said, is maturing, concentrating better than ever and trying to remain consistent.

"Megan can have a bad event and then do well in another event," Sargent said.

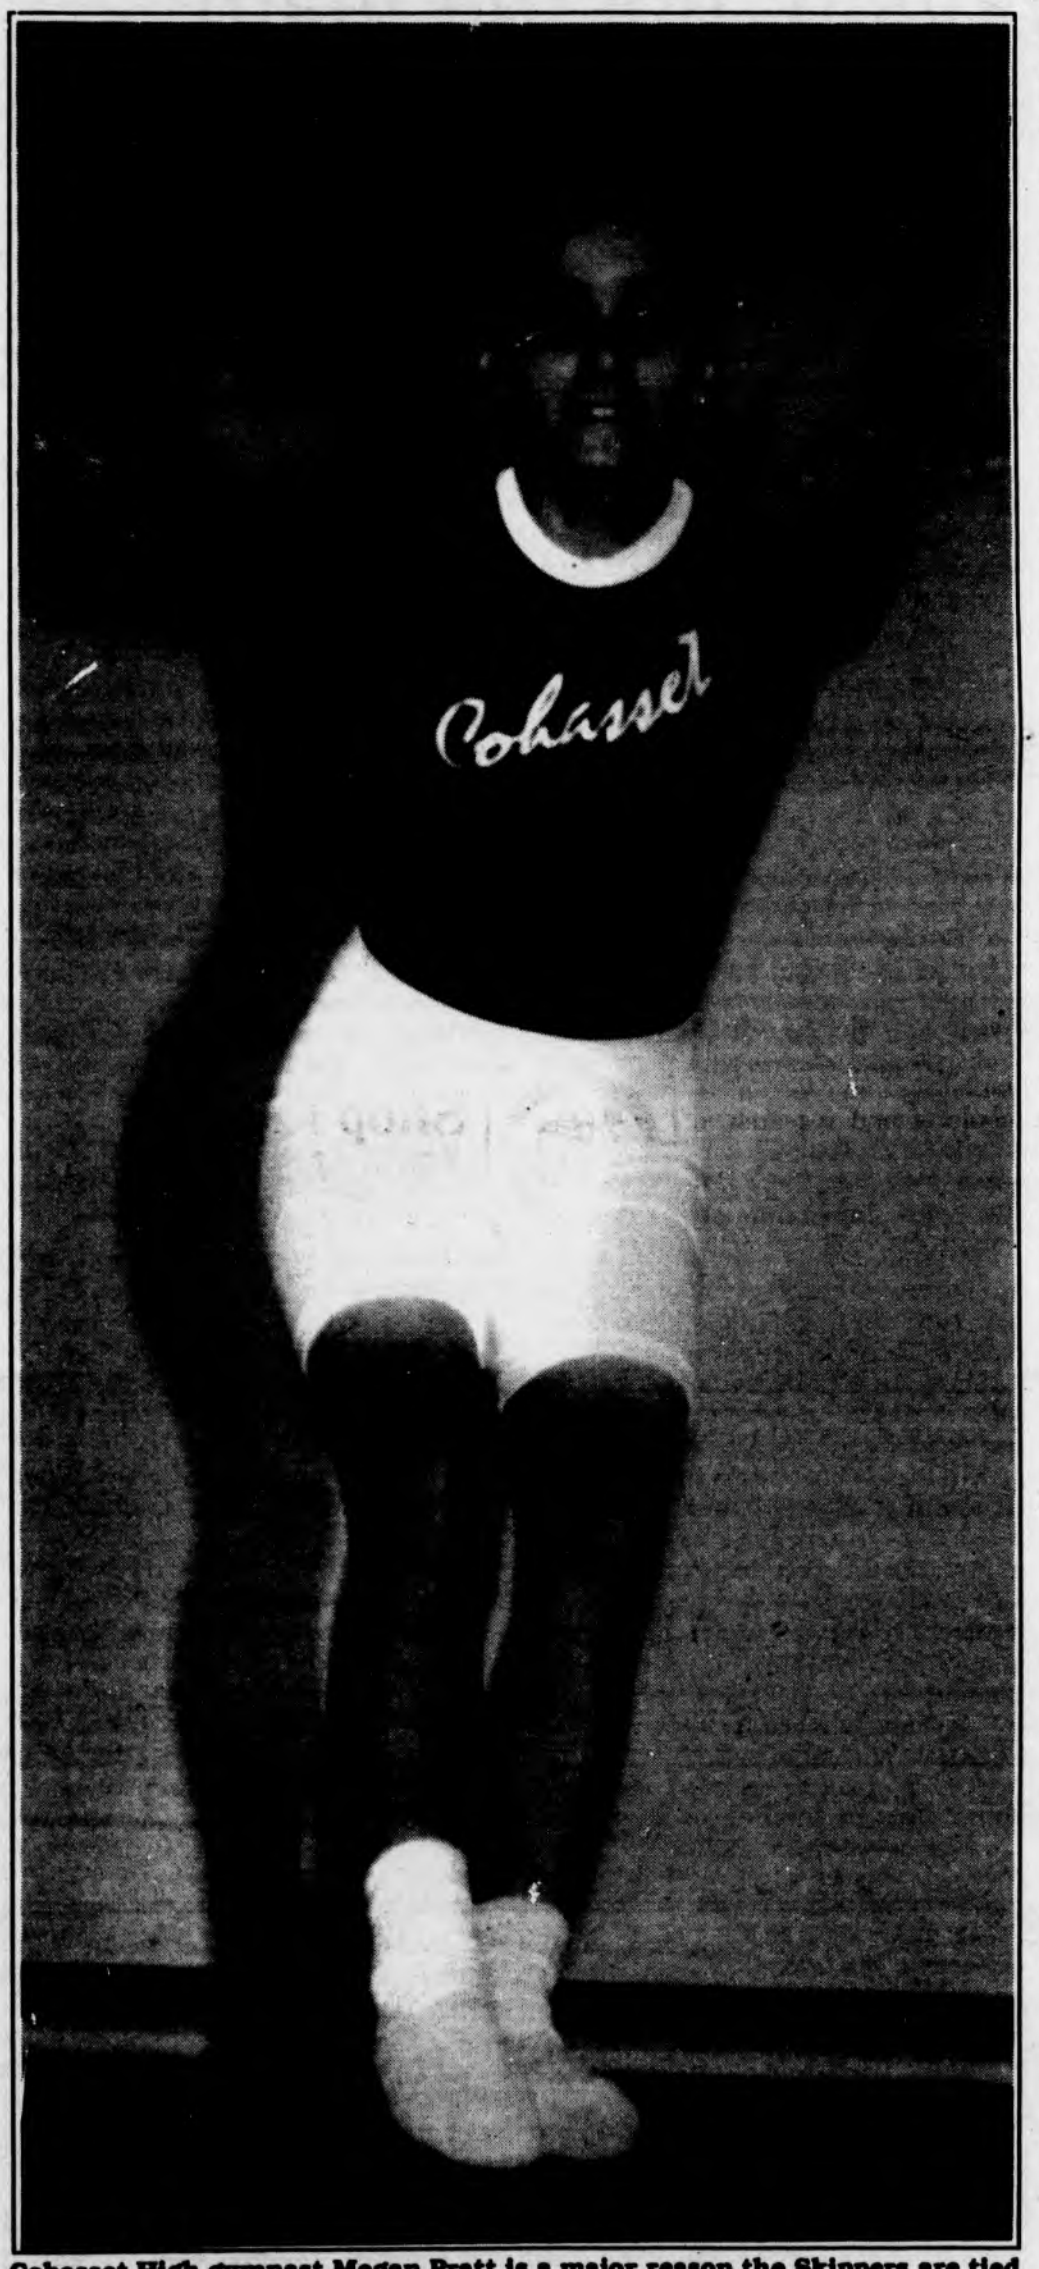
It's safe to say Pratt is a seasoned veteran enjoying her best winter in the gym. She has improved her scores on the Bars (7.5), Beam (8.0), Vault (7.5), Floor (8.4) and the All-Around (30.9). Pratt's 30.9 All-Around score tied her for first with teammate Erica Hettstrom in Cohasset's huge win over Scituate. The victory marked the first time in 11 years a South Shore team defeated the Sailors. Scituate defeated the Skippers in their second meeting, leaving both tied for first place with one loss.

Pratt's Floor score of 8.4 is far superior to the 8.05 that earned her a fourth-place finish in last year's Pilgrim Conference Meet. In order for Pratt to make the conference All-Star team, her total points in a certain event would have to be among the two highest in the league. She admits, however, an All-Star selection wouldn't make or break her season.

"Even if I don't make All-Stars I'll be happy because I accomplished my goals," she said.

Pratt took up gymnastics as a 6-year-old at the Cohasset Community Center under Sargent. With just one coach her entire career, Pratt has improved to the point where she now competes at Level 8 in meets outside of high school, as well as the mandatory Level 9 in school gymnastics.

(see page 14)



Cohasset High gymnast Megan Pratt is a major reason the Skippers are tied with Scituate atop the Pilgrim Conference standings. The 14-year-old has improved in every event this season and is hoping for a strong performance in the All-League meet.

Gymnasts all tied up with Scituate

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Ruthann Sargent could see early her Cohasset High gymnastics team was going to have its hand full in the Skippers' second meet against the powerful Scituate High team.

After all, it was the Skippers who got the better of the Sailors the first time around, dropping both Scituate and its 11-year unbeaten streak against the South Shore League.

Cohasset was already behind by 1.9 points on the Bars with second- and third-place finishes from Erica Hettstrom (7.4) and Megan Pratt (7.3) on the way to a 123.8 — 119.5 loss. The defeat left Cohasset and Scituate deadlocked atop the Pilgrim Conference standings with identical 8-1 records.

"I think there was a lot of pressure on this because this meet was postponed," said Sargent. "I think they really couldn't

Once again the Super Bowl was less than super.

As I demonstrated in last week's column, I know my sports.

Therefore, the following are 10 things that I feel need to be done to liven up the Super Bowl.

1) Tonya Harding gets to play quarterback for the AFC team.

I don't know about you, but I'm sick of watching Jim Kelly and John Elway getting whacked by Cowboys, Redskins and Giants. Put Tonya in there. She's tough, she has muscular thighs and if anyone roughs her up that badly, her hubby and a few friends will take of them at the half.

2) Put Dennis Hopper in the announcing booth.

"Did you see the pass that Troy just made, man. It was like the ball was shot out of a cannon. When he throws the ball, you know what happens, bad things, man."

He's got to be better than Bob Dumpy, Humpty-Dumpty or whoever that big mouth guy is on NBC.

3) Let Thurman Thomas play without a helmet.

Three years ago against the Redskins, the Bills running back couldn't find his helmet for the first two plays in the game. After his bonehead fumbles in Sunday's game, let him play without his helmet. It's obvious he cannot be harmed in the head. His skull is too hard.

4) Get rid of Jimmy Johnson.

He's arrogant, would run over his mother to win a football game and has never had a bad hair day. He's won two straight Super Bowls and people in Texas think he's the best thing since taco sauce. I also hear he is running for God if he wins the Bowl again next year.

Jimmy, what does it profit a man if he gains the Super Bowl but loses his soul?

5) Less Michael Jordan ads.

Okay, Jordan was a pretty good basketball player but I'm sick of seeing his smiling mug on TV. He sells sneakers, he sells hamburgers, he sells Gatorade, he sells out. He ought to sell Pepto Bismol for people like me who are getting sick of looking at him.

Here's my marketing idea in three words: "More Cindy Crawford."

6) Legalize gambling on football and make it like the lottery.

Just about every office has a betting pool. (For the record, the Mariner does not believe in illegal gambling and to my knowledge there was no betting pool offered.) And one of the reasons I watched Sunday's game to the bitter end was to see if the Bills would score and put the final score under the 10 1/2 point spread. Millions of dollars were riding on that final score and one meaningless touchdown in the final 30 seconds would have spelled financial disaster for many bettors.

Grapplers go on pin purge, now 7-4

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

The only thing the Cohasset High wrestling team has done in the past two weeks has been to offer its services in showing the opposition what a rubber mat tastes like.

The Skippers have won five of their last six meets in raising their record to 7-4 on the season with recent wins over Canton (47-24), Silver Lake (42-24) and Hingham (48-29).

Cohasset was scheduled to wrestle a tough, Southeastern squad on Wednesday. Despite the fact the team is a Division 1 club, head coach Torin Sweeney believes his streaking grapplers can't be counted out.

"If we wrestle the way we did last week we'll give them a good go," he said.

The Skippers registered six pins in their meet against Canton, including four straight in the first period by Brandon DeVoe (145), Scott Theriault (152), Dan Silvia (171) and Andy Church (189). Kevin Duffy opened up the meet with a pin at 103 pounds. His brother, Brian, won the first of three straight matches at 125 with a pin. Ryan Freeman took an 11-0 victory and Brian Sasso, making his season debut after recovering from a football injury, scored six points in the final period to take a 9-7 win in the heavyweight division.

Cohasset jumped to a 24-point cushion with Freeman's pin at 130 as Kevin Duffy (8-6 win), Brian Thompson and Brett Leahy won on pins.

DeVoe and Silvia scored pins, and Theriault and Church won by points. Freshman Justin Buckley won his first varsity match of the season in an 11-0 rout at 140 pounds.

Probably the biggest surprise was the ease in which the Skippers manhandled 10-2 Hingham. Cohasset led 30-0 after five matches. Even more impressive was that none lasted longer than the first period.

Kevin Duffy started things off with a forfeit before Thompson, Leahy, Brian Duffy and Freeman blitzed the Harbormen with wins.

"Hingham was basically shell shocked," Sweeney said.

The Harbormen responded with four wins of their own, but Cohasset put together a run of three straight pins from Theriault, Silvia's meet clincher and Church's 30-second match.

Athletes playing for the dough, not the team

By Rick Adami
Special to the Mariner

Have you noticed? I bet you haven't. So...when was the last time you seriously got excited to sit and watch the Celtics?...OK how 'bout the Bruins? Surely the Dread Sox...errr..Red Sox have got you thinking? Me neither. Not yet anyway. Please don't feel badly, it's a movement that has affected most of sports America for sometime. But now, more than ever, sports fans USA need the move. The move? The move to basic competitive values, i.e. college sports, high school sports. Which ones? Who cares, as long as it's competitive. But this is nothing new, we all watch the NCAA Final Four tournament, and what's New Years without bowl games? But it goes deeper. People are up at 2 a.m. watching Long Beach State and the Gauchos of U.C. Santa Barbara duke it out on ESPN. If you aren't one of these people, surely you know of one. It could be a neighbor...a husband...or worse...a wife! Mothers, do you know where you're children are at 2 a.m.? Imitating Dick Vitale. Think about it.

For a while I was passing off this infatuation with college sports, whether it be women's volleyball, men's soccer, or co-ed cheerleading as something for the real get-a-lifers. But it is more, much more. I believe that it's a return to the basic competitive values that got this country in a frenzy about sports all those years ago. It's that something that our professional mercenary leagues no longer produce, it's...it's a feeling. Stop. Think about it. Tell me I'm wrong. Am I? When was the last time you watched a Celtics game? O.K. uhh...tuned in to see highlights of the game? Mentioned them in passing? Me neither. Just to think, it was just three years ago that the Celtics were the toast of Boston...now?...now they're just toast! Even if they were winning, who'd want to watch those guys? You know they're just waiting to test free agency, and take their show elsewhere. At least with Bird and Magic, you felt that they were playing for the pride of their organizations and the respect of the community. Pride, team pride! Community pride! That's what it is. That's why we loved those guys. That's why we loved Williams, and Orr, and that's why we're outraged when Pudge left for the windy city. But at least with these college kids, we know that they're ours for four years. That's why we root for Boston College, UMass, Northeastern, and B.U. and could care less about the Red Sox. It's a pretty safe assumption that a Marcus Camby hasn't signed a three year deal with Georgetown or Glenn Foley isn't going to Miami for more money. That's part of what makes the college game infinitely more likeable than the pro game. Where the fan isn't an inconvenience, emotion is real, and the players aren't for sale. I just love it when Alonzo Mourning says he's employed by Nike. Fine. Crawl back into your greedy little hole, and take the Shaq too, he'll never -see-no-N-B-A championship anyway. Hoop is just the road to endorsement boulevard. That goes for most pro sports, it's all about personal fame, and personal fortune. What has the Shaq done!!?? Nothing! Not even a playoff! Does this infuriate the average sports fan or, once again, is it just me!? Let's switch gears.

Occasionally I'll catch old baseball highlights on ESPN, you know the ones in black and white, where the wide-eyed kid in the stands gets an autograph from the Splinter, thinking that he wouldn't sell it for all the money in the world? I see this stuff and get sad. Today kids get a 'graph from Junior and they're thinking cash value. With all the mercenary activity, the autograph hounds, memorabilia scams, and bad news players (see Vince Coleman (K.C.), Bobby Humphrey (Miami), C. McTavish (NHL), Rick Mahorn (Who Cares)) it's a wonder anybody pays to see a pro sporting event. It's kind of like the bread and circus routine of ancient Rome wouldn't you say? It's little wonder people by the thousands are turning to college, and even high school sporting events for their competition fix. Is there any hope for the pro game? Will we someday return to the park, parquet, playing field, or pond with the enthusiasm of yesteryear? Will the business' become a show again? Will they at least show some class? This said, I bring you my story of hope...

One afternoon when I had had my fill of ball players crying about their contracts, about not gettin' no respect, and the fans not appreciating them, I fell to my knees threw my arms to the heavens...and...and I prayed. I'm not a church goin' type, but I prayed long and hard to ballplayers of old, the kind of players you might see in the "Field of Dreams". I prayed for a sign. Rolling thunder would have been nice. Exploding the Citgo sign would have been better. But I got nothin'. No hail, no burning bush, nothin'. I just wanted a sign that they were listening...

Later that afternoon, a series of bizarre, possibly mystic, circumstances led me to Boston in search of answers. History tells us that from every dark age, there is a period of light...renewal.. or maybe just a renaissance. That's when I met Joe. Joe is a 19-year- old draftee of our tumultuous bad news BoSox. Joe bats left, throws right, and hits for power. Best of all, he turned down Harvard, Yale, and Annapolis to do it.

Tune in next week for the conclusion...I'm too stunned to write.

Hoopsters ready for title run

The Skippers are big, strong and hungry. And Ron Ford's troops are just warming up for their two biggest games of the season.

Cohasset (11-1; overall, 9-1; league) is currently tied with Carver for first in the South Shore League and will face the Crusaders Tuesday night in Cohasset. But first, the Skippers must take on third-place Norwell on Friday. The Clippers are the only team to defeat Cohasset this season.

Ford likes the position his squad is in going into the pair of games.

"You can't look past Norwell," he said. "They beat us already. The kids have a lot of work to do.

"We're at the point where it's (destiny) all in our own hands. We don't need anyone else. If we win these next three games I think we'll win the league."

Joe Slotnick continued his scoring binge, pouring in 17 points in the Skippers' 46-35 non-league win over Sacred Heart of Kingston. Cohasset was able to break through a tough press by SH and held up strong up front and defensively.

The Skippers came out slow initially—they trailed by six at the half — but unleashed runs of 16-0 and 11-0 in the second half to pull away. Pete Bishop and Dorian Bryant each scored eight points to complement Slotnick.

Cohasset was scheduled to continue its game against Abington, which was postponed last week with 13 minutes left to play because condensation on the court was causing players to lose their traction and slip all evening.

Ford said the Skippers "were playing their best game of the season," and Bishop was "absolutely huge" having scored 14 points and grabbing 10 rebounds. Cohasset led 35-11 when the game was called.

The Skippers had an easy time against Steve Fernandez and his East Bridgewater team. Bryant led Cohasset with 15 points, while Andy Kamaratis came off the bench to score eight points and grab five rebounds in the first half.

Cohasset put together its typical runs that secured the victory. They're hoping the runs will continue against Norwell and Carver. The Skippers are certainly ready for the test.

Team is first for Megan Pratt

Pratt said she has qualified for Level 9, but Sargent is keeping her at Level 8 for now, until she feels Pratt is 100 percent ready to move up permanently.

"She (Sargent) likes to clean and be safe," Pratt said. "She believes in smiling and thinking positive."

With high school meets running from December to February and the community center team's season lasting from March to September, Pratt has very little time away from the sport. But she realizes constant improvement in gymnastic involves a year-round commitment.

"In gymnastics, you really can't take a lot of time off," Pratt said.

"You have to be in the gym every week," Sargent said. "She's very, very talented. Just staying in the gym and practicing she should stay on top.

"She has great potential to be super."

But practicing year-round for the sake of improving her scores is just one of the reasons Pratt puts in so much time. The team concept has always had a broad appeal with Pratt. With several of her friends on the gymnastics squad, the sport is all the more enjoyable.

"We're all very supportive of one another," Pratt said. "That's what our team's all about. That's why we've been so successful.

"I just remember to smile and have fun. That's what gymnastics is all about."

Not quite. Pratt gets the most satisfaction helping her team. Her goals are secondary.

1994 MS WALKS set statewide

Put your best foot forward by walking 10K in the "Cohasset Walk by the Sea" Sunday, April 10, and you will be helping to find a cure for the number one disabling disease of young adults: multiple sclerosis.

Walks will be held in Boston, Marblehead, Hopkinton, Hyannis, Attleboro, Westport, Greenfield, Northampton, Worcester, Haverhill, Concord, Cohasset, Springfield, Longmeadow, Southbridge, Pittsfield.

Bob Lobel, WBZ-TV/Channel 4 Sports Anchor and Honorary Chairman of the MS WALKs, commented: "The MS WALK Weekend is the MS Society's biggest fundraising event of the year. It's become a huge success because people are so willing to reach out to help their neighbors with MS. I'm looking forward to helping lead-off Boston's MS WALK, 'The Beantown Parade!', Sunday, April 10. We're hoping that the recent breakthroughs in MS research will encourage even more WALKers to join us this year to help raise funds and have a great day for an excellent cause." To volunteer, call the MS Society at (508) 291-2169.

Mariner Sports

Aerobics at the center

The Community Center offers an hour of aerobic step, strength and flexibility training in a fun, non-competitive class Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday from 9 to 10 a.m. and Saturday, 8:45 to 10 a.m. Babysitting available. A 10-class card is $40. Drop in fee, $5. Call 383-0088 for more information.

Baseball registration Feb. 16 and 23

Wednesday, Feb. 16 and 23, registration for participation in the 1994 Cohasset Little League program will be held at the Deer Hill School Cafeteria from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Each registrant should be prepared to complete the registration form, to pay the registration fee and to furnish a non-returnable copy of his or her birth certificate. These will be the only registration sessions and all parents are urged to register their children on one of these dates. All those whose birth dates are between August 1, 1976 and July 31, 1988 are required to register in order to participate in the various baseball programs for 1994.

Baseball camp set

Instructor Steve Ferrolli will offer early bird baseball camp for ages eight to 12 February 21 to 25, from 3:30 to 5:50 p.m. The goal is to enable boys and girls to improve their skills in a positive recreational atmosphere. Pitching, catching, defense, baserunning and hitting will be featured in special lessons. Professional instructors will devote attention to individual needs and problem areas. Cost is $60. Call 383-0088 for more information.

Yoga offered at the center

The Community Center offers ongoing yoga at 9 Depot Court, Cohasset, Mondays and Wednesdays, 6:30 to 8 p.m. Yoga is an ancient form of exercise performed slowly in coordination with deep and controlled breathing. Students need to bring a towel or mat. Drop-ins welcome. Call 383-0088 for more information.

New dance class offered

The Community Center will offer a new low-impact dance class, "Dance at the Depot," Tuesdays and Thursdays at 5 p.m. beginning Feb. 8, at 9 Depot Court.

Call the Center at 383-0088 for more information.

Local girls invited to sports day

Priscilla Anne Goff and Julie Good from Cohasset High School have been invited to attend a ceremony at which a gubernatorial proclamation will be read proclaiming Feb. 4 as Massachusetts Girls and Women in Sports Day. The ceremony will be held at Faneuil Hall from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

The first Thursday in February — National Girls and Womens in Sports Day (NGWSD) — is set aside each year to focus attention on issues involving girls and women in sport. NGWSD began in 1987 as a day to remember Olympic volleyball great Flo Hyman for her numerous athletic achievements and her work to assure equality for women's sport and to eliminate the struggles of girls and women in sport. It has evolved into a day to call attention to the positive influence of sport participation, and to the past and present achievements and struggles of all girls and women in sport.

Mary Ellen Clark, Bronze Medalist in diving at the Barcelona Olympics, will be the keynote speaker. The New Agenda: Northeast — "Advancing the Role of Women in Sport" will be presenting certificates to the two female athletes representing each MIAA member high school in the Commonwealth.

Indoor beginner golf lessons offered

The Cohasset and Scituate Recreation Departments are co-sponsoring indoor golf lessons for beginner players scheduled to begin Thursday evening, Feb. 17, at the Cushing School, Scituate.

Lessons are five weeks, meeting one hour weekly. The fee for the five hour session is $60 per person.

Should you wish to register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791. Classes are limited in size and registrations are accepted on a first call basis. Available class times are 6, 7, and 8 p.m.

Local golf professional and head golf pro Dan Neary will be instructing.

Volunteers to play role in World Cup Soccer

World Cup USA '94, the organizing committee for the World Cup is looking for volunteers to help with the staging of the world's biggest sporting event. Applicants must be at least 18 years of age and either U.S. citizens or permanent residents.

World Cup USA will enlist the services of over 1,000 volunteers during June and July when the tournament takes place. Departments requiring volunteer staff include accreditation, press operations, language services, protocol, hospitality, food services and transportation.

Anyone wishing to volunteer should call 557-2975 or write to World Cup USA '94, Volunteer Services, 2 Center Plaza, Mezzanine Level, Boston, MA 02108. All prospective volunteers are encouraged to apply as soon as possible, to maximize their chances of being selected.

The World Cup is held every four years and is coming to the USA for the first time this summer, with six games scheduled for Foxboro Stadium. It is estimated that the 1994 World Cup will attract a global television audience of 31.2 billion, double the audience for the 1992 Olympics in Barcelona. 70,000 international visitors are expected to travel to the Boston area in the summer of '94 as a result of the World Cup.

Shepard on Suffolk hoop squad

Amy Shepard of Cohasset is a member of the 1993-94 Suffolk University Women's Basketball team. The five-foot-five senior is majoring in criminology.

Gymnasts all tied up with Scituate

wait to get it over with."

Cohasset looked flat in its routines as compared to the tough fight they gave Scituate the first time the two teams met.

Hettstrom picked up Cohasset's lone first-place finish with an 8.3 on the Beam. She also led a two-three finish in the Floor Exercise with an 8.3. Pratt scored an 8.0

Cohasset trailed by 2.4 points at the half, but Sargent believed the Skippers would have to put up near flawless routines to pull out the victory.

"It doesn't sound like a wide margin, but I know it would be hard to get back," Sargent said.

Jodi Colwill finished third on the Vault (7.7) and Hettstrom rounded out her evening with an All-Around score of 31.5.

Sargent didn't believe the Feb. 12 All-League Meet would a tie breaker for the two teams because an official team score isn't kept.

"I think Cohasset and Scituate should shine all around," she said. "You go in as a team, but your team scores mean nothing on that day. It's the individuals that place."

The Skippers fared much better in their two other meets with victories over Notre Dame (121.8—89.8) and Hanover (118.5 — 100.8).

Cohasset swept first place in both meets and swept every event against Notre Dame. Erica Hettstrom wound up with seven victories, including the All-Around and a personal best in the Beam (8.5). Pratt swept the Bars in both meets, as did Jodi Colwill in the Vault. Colwill had three seconds against Notre Dame and two more in the Hanover meet.

Tafana Fiore, Tara Hettstrom and Christine Reynolds also grabbed top-three finishes.

Walking team to benefit hospice, March 5

Do you and your friends have the winter blues? Looking for a way to get some exercise, while doing good for others? Why not participate in the Hospice of the South Shore indoor mall walk Saturday, March 5, between 7 and 10 a.m. at Hanover Mall? You and your friends can walk sponsored laps inside the mall to raise money for the terminally ill and their families. What's more, all walkers are eligible for valuable prizes.

Each year, area residents show their support for Hospice of the South Shore by organizing teams of their friends or families to join the indoor mall walk. Babysitting services are available for children, ages two to six; older kids can join their parents in walking pledged laps.

If you can't walk at the event, you can still contribute by recruiting other walkers, donating money, or distributing fliers. Call Hospice of the South Shore at (617) 380-0877 for more information.

Ryan Freeman

— Student of the Month —

I nominate Ryan Freeman as Student of the Month for December because of his athletic and academic achievements, as well as his involvement in student government and the Cohasset community.

During the past month Ryan has risen to the top of the local wrestling charts by finishing first in his weight class at the Whitman-Hanson tournament, and second two times, at the Cohasset and Marshfield Christmas Tournaments. Obviously a hard worker in his athletic endeavors, Ryan has also been able to maintain a strong academic average in his classwork. He just missed the honor roll for Term 1, earning all A's and B's except for one class.

In addition to excelling both academically and athletically, Ryan is also involved with student government, serving as class president for the class of 1995. He is also involved in community service as well, as a member of the Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee. According to one member of that committee Ryan is "...one of the best student volunteers we've ever had. He is always there, his contributions to the group are insightful, and he is someone to be counted on..."

Ryan, through his hard work, desire, and dedication, is a model student for others to follow.

PAC to meet

The PAC will meet in the Deer Hill School cafeteria at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday Feb. 8. The guest will be Clare Vann from the Federation for Children.

Call Ann Whitely at 383-9310 or Velma Begley at 383-1541 for information.

Deer Hill plans tech fair

Demonstrations by teachers and students will be ongoing from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at Deer Hill School Wednesday Feb. 9 at Tech Fair '94.

Mavis Beacon typing software, music software, writer's club, interactive programs on CD Rom, video editing, art graphics, writing books, school newspaper, computer/TV interface and D.J. Mixer will be demonstrated.

Refreshments will be available.

PSO volunteers sought

The Parent School Organization is looking for three volunteers to serve on the 1994-95 Nominating Committee. Please call Ruth Wilcox (383-1827) if you are interested.

This year the committee will oversee the elections for school council representatives as well as positions on the executive board. The committee will meet about six times beginning in February and ending in May. Serving on the Nominating Committee does not preclude your volunteering for a position on the board or a school council.

Valentine cabaret planned for Feb. 16

The Valentine's Cabaret at Kimball's By The Sea to benefit the music and art departments of the high school will begin at 6 pm. Wednesday Feb. 16.

There will be time to view student art during the buffet supper from 6 to 7:30 p.m. From 7:30 to 9 pm. emcee and choral director Bryan Marks and band director Marcia Lajoie will present student musicians, singers, dancers and comedians. Student-designed artwork will be on sale.

The price for the dinner and show is $12.50. Call Olga Nohe at 383-1273 for reservations.

Mixing art and business at SSAC

When Mary Larson of Cohasset first suggested an event that combined the arts and business, she never imagined it would become such a tradition. But a tradition it is and for the fifth year, the South Shore Art Center presents TABLESCAPES V Feb. 10 to 12.

The event, which features many Cohasset artists, decorators and businesses, will include a champagne reception Thursday evening, Feb. 10, from 6 to 9 p.m. Tickets are $15 for the reception and $10 for general admission Friday, Feb. 11, from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Saturday, Feb. 12, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. For more information, please call (617) 383-9548.

Tablescapes brings together the arts and the business sector in a unique celebration of creativity and talent. Artists, designers, decorators and businesses present table settings designed around a particular artist or artistic period.

Cohasset participants of Tablescapes V include The Artist's Son, The Barn at Bound Brook (Chris Johnson), Country House Antiques (Arlene Ferreira and Donna Morgan), Mary Larson, Kathryn Morgan Interiors, Suzanne Moyer, The Studio of Jeanne Replogle, No Place Like Home (Elaine Welby), and Anne Lane who will collaborate with Mary Lizotte of Norwell. Also participating are Shreve, Crump & Low of Boston, Arlene Weeks of Hull, The Green Gage Plum of Scituate, Les Olivades of Duxbury, Ellen Wallack Interiors of Hingham and the South Shore Antique Center of Norwell.

Arlene Ferreira of Cohasset is chairing the event. Mary Larson and Sue O'Brien of Cohasset are chairs for the raffle, which includes many unusual pieces of art and items donated by local businesses.

Amateur gardeners to meet Feb. 15

The Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will meet at 1 p.m. Tuesday Feb. 15 at the home of Mrs. Edna Finegan. Mrs. Sue Fone and Mrs. Connie Kurtz will serve as co-hostesses.

After the regular meeting, the topic of the program will be "How Does Your Garden Grow?"

Refreshments will be served.

Puppet show planned

"Lost in the Woods," is the main story this month for the preschool puppet show at 10:30 a.m. Friday Feb. 4 at the community center, 3 North Main St. Admission is $2. Call 383-0088 for information.

Historical costumes program slated

The Cohasset Historical Society's Costumes Committee will present a program from 10 to 11:30 a.m. Tuesday, Feb. 15, at the Caleb Lothrop House, 14 Summer St.

Title of the special event will be "Changing Styles of The 19th Century." Billie Berents and Jo Ford of the Costume Committee will be the presenters. This will be a "hands-on" examination of dresses from the Historical Society's costume collection detailing the 19th century. There will be an emphasis on change in styles and trends from decade to decade. Fashion reflects the times and it is interesting to examine shapes and forms, which often are a response to historical events and changing life styles.

A selection of dresses from our collection will illustrate these changes. Seating is limited; 15 persons can be accommodated for this workshop.

Please call the historical society at 383-1434 for reservations. Cost $4 for society members; $5 for non-members.

PRESENTING THE NEW JANNELL FORD OF HANOVER
2000 Washington Street (Route 53) in Hanover, MA.

The new Jannell Ford of Hanover is bigger, better, more visible and more easily accessible than any other Ford dealer from Boston to Cape Cod.

Bigger because the new Jannell Ford of Hanover has a bigger selection of Ford cars, trucks, and quality pre-owned vehicles to meet your needs and your budget.

Better because the new Jannell Ford of Hanover includes a complete up-to-date service center to better accommodate your service requirements from routine check-ups to major repairs.

More visible and more accessible because the new Jannell Ford of Hanover is conveniently located on Route 53 between Merchants Row Mall and the Hanover Mall.

We hope you will visit the new Jannell Ford of Hanover at your earliest opportunity. After 73 years of excellence in customer service, we can do more to offer you the best in new and used cars and trucks.

Cohasset Mariner

Vol. XVI, No.15 | Thursday, February 10, 1994 | 1-800-649-6661 | 50 cents

Life-long contributions to Cohasset don't go unnoticed

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The first Cohasset Mariner 'Citizen of the Year' couldn't be more home-grown if he tried.

"I'm a long ways from home when I cross the town line," the septuagenarian says with a smile.

A fourth generation Cohasseter, Gerard Keating was delighted with the news that he'd been selected for 1993 Citizen of the Year honors.

"Getting this award is like a good dose of Geritol.

"It may not help you physically but it sure helps your spirit and morale,"Keating says.

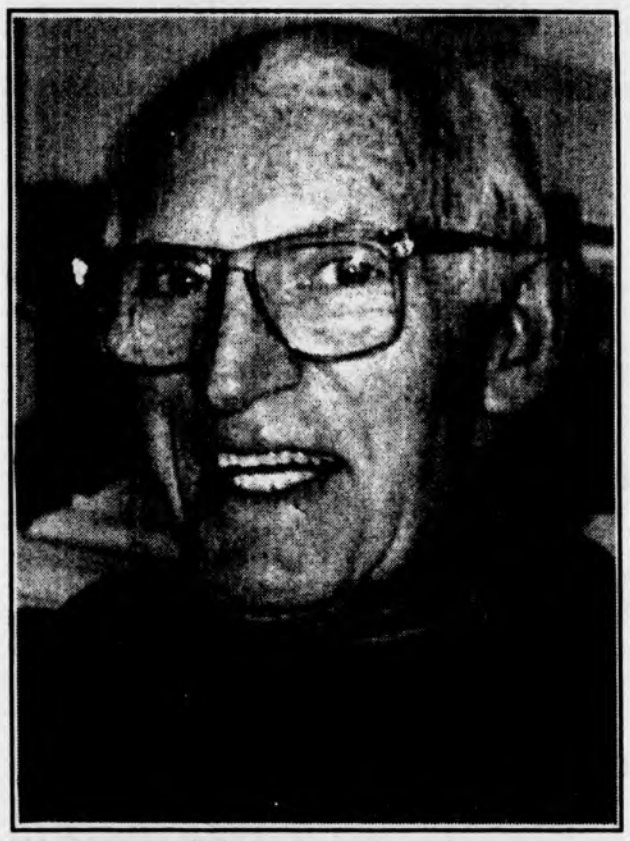
"I like to do things not to be recognized or to receive compensation of any type but a pat on the back now and then sure helps."

The five-member selection committee — consisting of Police Chief Brian Noonan; Cohasset High School Assistant Prinicpal Jack DeLorenzo; Cohasset Chamber of Commerce President Keith Knowles; local resident Deborah Protulis who works in the Town Clerk's office, and Cohasset Mariner editor Mary Ford — selected Keating out of a field of 21 nominees.

'Citizen of the Year' is really a contradiction in terms for Keating who for nearly 60 of his 74 years has been going that extra mile for the town he loves.

His contributions past and present include serving as:

- president of the Parent Teacher Association (PTA);
- Grand Knight of the Cohasset Council of the Knights of Columbus;
- director of Civil Defense;
- director of veterans' services;
- president of the hockey boosters club;
- chairman of the Cohasset School Committee;
- member of the government structure committee;
- vice president of the Cohasset Historical Society;
- member of the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation;
- director of the Central Cemetery and perennial chairman of the nominating committee;
- chairman of the Council on Aging;
- member of the Friends of the Council of Aging;
- at St. Anthony's Church serving as a lector, eucharistic minister, usher, and member of the building committee.



'Getting this award is like a good dose of Geritol. It may not help you physically but it sure helps your spirit and morale..'

— Gerard Keating, 1993 Cohasset Mariner Citizen of the Year.

Keating spent three grades at the Ripley Road School (now the Osgood School) and graduated from the old Osgood School (where the police and fire station now stand) in 1937. There were 24 members in the class, 12 girls and 12 boys.

He recalls that graduation celebrations were a lot lower key than those with today's teenagers.

"The night I graduated from high school, a friend and I went to the Howard Johnson's in North Weymouth and had vanilla frappes.

"Then we both went home and went to bed," he says.

After serving his country with the shore patrol in the U.S. Coast Guard, Keating worked for the railroad and then in 1942, he began working at the Cohasset post office and stayed there for 40 years until he retired in 1982. He was postmaster in town for 35 of those years.

Consultants grade Greenbush rail crossings

By Marilyn Jackson
Mariner staff

If the train comes to Scituate, the intersection of Country Way, Driftway and Chief Justice Cushing Highway in Greenbush should be realigned, according to consultants for the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA).

The section of Country Way between Driftway and Route 3A could be discontinued, or that section could be designated as one-way eastbound, the consultants suggested. A conceptual design will be included in the next report.

And, at another intersection — at North Main, Forest and King streets in Cohasset, one of the higher accident sites in that town — the consultants recommend that four-way stop signs be installed if that location is not signalized.

Traffic consultants, together with Joe Connor, project manager of the Greenbush rail restoration project, met Feb. 3 with the citizens' advisory committee (CAC) at the Scituate High School library to discuss the impacts of traffic and noise of the train.

Sverdrup Civil Inc., the MBTA's consultants for the Old Colony Railroad rehabilitation project, provided new traffic counts as well as new ridership projections.

The conclusion was that both the East Weymouth station and the two Scituate stations would attract more riders — as many as 895 in Greenbush and 427 in North Scituate.

Other forecasts are based on a tunnel in Hingham with a station in West Hingham or in Hingham Square.

Projections for Cohasset remain the same at 258 riders, and for Weymouth Landing, 641 riders.

With a West Hingham station, ridership projections are 397 at Nantasket Junction, 142 at West Hingham and 446 at East Weymouth.

With a Hingham Square station, the ridership projections are 209 at Nantasket Junction, 320 at Hingham Square and 461 at the East Weymouth station.

The MBTA, according to Connor, is exploring the possibility of acquiring additional land in East Weymouth to accommodate the projected increased demand for parking.

Originally, 1980 data were used to determine how many individuals would ride the trains as well as other modes of transportation — buses, commuter boats,

Videos & voices add to Heights opposition

By Sean P. Sweeney
Cohasset Mariner

More than 250 citizens and elected officials, most of them vocal opponents, attended a public hearing last week to discuss the fate of the proposed expansion of the Cohasset Heights Landfill.

The meeting was arranged by State Senator Brian McDonald in response to growing concern among Cohasset residents over the environmental impact of such an expansion.

Local officials and citizens were given the opportunity to address members of the Massachusetts Environmental Protection Agency (MEPA) who will make a recommendation to the Executive Secretary of Environmental Affairs as to whether the Final Environmental Impact Report should be accepted or rejected. Acceptance of the report would pave the way for the landfill owners to proceed to the next phase in the expansion process. Rejection of the report would lead to further

Music Circus liquor license okayed

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

This summer patrons of the Music Circus will be able to enjoy a glass or two of wine or beer.

After ironing out some legal issues, selectmen, in a majority vote, decided to award the South Shore Playhouse Associates (doing business as the South Shore Music Circus) a liquor license.

Selectmen Jane Goedecke, Michael H. Sullivan, and Rocco F. Laugelle voted to grant the license. Selectmen Martha K. Gjesteby and Merle Brown were opposed.

Last week the zoning board of appeals granted a one-year special permit to the Music Circus which set the stage for the selectmen's issuing the liquor license Monday. (See related story).

The zoning board's decision included 14 conditions. Selectmen approved the license with some loosening to the conditions imposed by the zoning board. Selectmen didn't agree that patrons should be prohibited from taking a drink inside the tent; they would allow alcoholic beverages to be served before 7:30 p.m. performances on Sundays; and they would not impose restrictions on parking at Deer Hill and Osgood Schools stating that's under the purview of the school department; and on the recommendation of the police chief, they will not require a police officer be stationed at the intersection of Rte. 3A and Sohier St following performances.

Town counsel Richard A. Henderson said as licensing authority selectmen could stipulate different conditions than the zoning board. But it's not clear which restrictions the Music Circus must follow. Henderson said the applicant should appeal to the zoning board for relief from conditions imposed by that board. The Music Circus, which is in a residentially zoned area off

DPW garage in limbo

The fate of the proposed public works garage is in limbo until the board of health, water department, and garage study committee meet to discuss the prospective site on N. Main Street by the Little League fields.

In a letter to the garage study committee, the board of health said it is opposed to the N. Main St. site unless water commissioners abandon the Sohier Street well as a potential public drinking water supply. The letter said the proposed garage is a few hundred feet off the Sohier St. well head.

Representatives from the garage study committee told selectmen Monday that the garage meets the necessary set back requirements. It was not clear if a new state regulation requires projects of this type to be set further back.

Selectmen tabled action on the warrant article for the garage until the well issue can be clarified.

Waste bans in effect

Citizens utilizing the Cohasset Recycling Transfer Facility are reminded that recycling is mandatory. Newspapers, corrugated cardboard, magazines, white office paper, computer paper, glass, metal cans, plastic bottles with a "2" on the bottom, scrap metal, batteries, tires, waste oil and yard waste must be recycled.

Users of the Recycling Transfer Facility are urged to keep all yard waste and recyclable glass out of the general rubbish so the town will avoid any potential penalties in the future. Please assure that glass is clean prior to recycling as there are no facilities for washing glass at the Recycling Transfer Facility.

Burning season is here

Residents can burn brush, cane, and driftwood between the hours of 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. through May 1.

Anyone planning to burn should call the fire department's business number at 383-0616 each day and leave their name and address.

Burning of grass, leaves, and hay is not allowed because they cause too much smoke, Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said.

Ambulance billing update

The town continues to hover in the 80-percent collection range for ambulance runs billed.

In January the town had commitments of $10,574 and receipts of $7,689 brining the 1994 fiscal year totals to $66,058 in commitments and $52,210 in receipts, a collection rate of about 79 percent.

Engineers survey King St.

The Board of Selectmen have requested help from the Norfolk County engineering department in the survey of a portion of King St. The county commission has authorized this assistance which should begin in the next few months.

Harbormaster gets raise

Selectmen voted to approve a raise for Shawn E. Kelly, the town's new harbormaster from the minimum rate of $12.25 per hour to Step 1, $13 per hour effective Feb. 11.

Framed photos accepted

The town hall is adorned with framed photographs by Janice Sargent. Selectmen accepted the Cohasset scenes as gifts to the town at their board meeting Monday.

Snow budget gets redder

Not counting this weeks storm, the snow removal budget is $32,947 in the red, according to Highway Dept. Supt. Harold Litchfield.

Litchfield said he will update selectmen weekly on the amount overspent in the snow-removal line item. The state allows towns to deficit spend for snow removal but the amount must be made up next year.

Town election races heat up

Races are developing on the school committee, water commission and housing authority for the April 2 town election.

Candidates have until 7 p.m. tonight (Feb. 10) to return nomination papers to the town clerk's office.

Five potential candidates — James C. Kirk, David Elsmore, Daniel S. Evans, Joanne T. Chittick and Owen O'Malley — are vying for two seats on the school committee now held by Barbara Bliss and Russ Reidy, who have indicated they will not seek re-election.

Frederick P. Koed and Mark B. Bell have taken out papers for an open seat on the water commission. The seat is currently held by James Sheerin.

And Mary N. Grassie and Joanne Young Nawn have taken out papers for one seat on the housing authority. Nawn is running for re-election.

So far no one has decided to challenge incumbent selectman Rocco F. Laugelle who is seeking a sixth, three-year term.

Others who seek election include: Robert Davenport for a re-election to the board of health; Raimund G. Vanderweil for re-election to the sewer commission; Shelanne S. Durkin for re-election to the recreation commission; Michael C. Patrolia for re-election to the board of assessors; Agnes McCann and Patience Towle for re-election to the board of library trustees and Anne Bowdoin and June S. Hubbard are seeking election to the library trustees.

Sohier Street, had to apply for a special permit from the zoning board because the granting of a liquor license is an expansion of a non-conforming use.

General manager Vincent Longo said the Music Circus "planned to abide by all the rules."

Many neighbors of the Music Circus opposed the granting of a liquor license expressing worries that patrons drinking could become a safety problem, among other concerns.

Music Circus officials were also criticized for putting pressure on the town by using how much money the non-profit corporation gives to town organizations every year as an argument for why the license should be granted.

Zoning board gives nod to liquor at Music Circus

By Lorraine Palmer
Mariner correspondent

For the South Shore Music Circus, the third time's a charm. The Zoning Board of Appeals decided to grant a one-year special permit that would allow the business to expand on its pre-existing, non-conforming use in a residential area for the 1994 season, for the purpose of selling beer and wine on its premises under certain conditions, at the Feb. 2 meeting.

In order for the business to be granted a liquor license by selectmen, it first must obtain a special permit from the Zoning Board of Appeals if the area the business is located is not zoned for that particular use.

For the third time, South Shore Playhouse Associates Inc., the owners of the Music Circus as well as the Cape Cod Melody Tent, came before the Zoning Board requesting this special permit Nov. 15, 1993. The original applications were filed first on July 3, 1969 and then on April 21, 1983 and were denied on the grounds that they lacked substantial safeguards ensuring that consumers of alcoholic beverages at the premises would not become intoxicated.

Whereas the request has not changed, the applicant has agreed to comply with all safeguards set forth by the Zoning Board of Appeals. The Board has therefore stated that if the conditions are followed "the change in use will not be substantially more detrimental to the neighborhood or injurious or dangerous to the public."

The general manager of the Music Circus and representative for the applicant, Vincent Longo, said that he commends [the Zoning Board's] efforts and thorough investigation of the issue, and said he believes the end result will be positive for all.

Longo has asserted that the type of clientele which attends the Music Circus performances are not likely to become intoxicated during the performances and that the ability to serve alcoholic beverages would not, by their projections, increase the number of people who attend performances but would increase revenues as the direct result of the concession sales, at $4 per drink.

They anticipate that their revenues would increase by approximately $60,000 which would assist them in maintaining the level of talent willing to perform at the Music Circus, by being able to offer performers more money up front. The revenues would also up the amount of money which they, as a non-profit organization, would be able to give back to the community.

The conditions set forth by the Zoning Board of Appeals under which the applicant has agreed to comply with are as follows: only beer and wine may be sold; prior to the opening of the Music Circus' 1994 season, a picket fence or similar structure must be erected in a location which will ensure that only ticket holders will have access to the areas from which beer and wine will be sold; beer and wine will be sold only from the four locations from which non-alcoholic beverages are currently being served; beer and wine will not be permitted to be brought into the Music Circus' tent nor will anyone be allowed to take beer or wine to their car or off the property; beer and wine may only be served during the one-hour period immediately preceding the commencement of the performance and for thirty minutes during intermission, regardless of the length of the intermission; only two alcoholic beverages will be served to an individual at a time; all persons serving alcoholic beverages must be at least 21-years-old and must have successfully completed a TIPS training course; a police officer must be stationed at each location from which beer and wine is being served during intermissions and a police officer or a TIPS-trained security guard must be stationed at each such location during the one-hour service period prior to the performance; all performances must end no later that 11 pm.; no parking will be permitted along Sohier Street or Ripley Road by any customers of the Music Circus.

The applicant shall take whatever steps it deems necessary to ensure that there is no parking in the parking lots at the Deer Hill School or at the Joseph Osgood School during performances which are not sold out. In the event of a sold-out performance, at least one TIPS-trained employee will be stationed at each school parking lot during the one hour serving period prior to the performance and one hour after the performance or as long as any customer automobiles remain in the particular school parking lot;

A detail police officer shall be stationed at the intersection of Sohier Street and Route 3A after the conclusion of any performance during which alcoholic beverages have been served for up to one hour or until the police officer is satisfied that all customers of the Music Circus have exited. Compliance with this restriction is required unless the Cohasset Police Department feels that there is no safe way for them to station a police officer at this intersection. Alcoholic beverages may only be served at performances which commence at 8 pm or later. The applicant shall ensure that all alcoholic beverages on the premises are at all times secured in such a manner that no unauthorized persons will have access to the alcoholic beverages.

Chairman of the Zoning Board of Appeals, Myrna Putziger, said that the special permit will expire exactly one year from of the date the opinion to grant the special permit is filed with the Town Clerk's Office, Feb. 3, 1994.

Longo said said he is certain all the conditions can be met to the Zoning Board of Appeals approval.

Life-long contributions don't go unnoticed

Keating notes being postmaster was a great way to get to know the townspeople.

"If you hollered out a some one's name who'd been in town any length of time, I could tell you where they lived," he says.

The high school track and football athlete, Keating never stopped competing. Today he's a regular at the annual Senior Olympics in the speed walking event.

But despite his trim physique and glowing good health, Keating knows he's lucky to be alive.

He suffered a stroke in 1979 and in 1983 he underwent a heart by-pass operation following a coronary.

"I was almost a commuter to South Shore Hospital," Keating recalls about the months before his heart operation.

Although he's never been a drinker or a smoker, Keating says his diet played a role in his heart disease. With big, athletic children steaks were the norm at family dinners, he says.

Since his operation, he hasn't looked back.

"Now I do everything. I've shovelled more snow this year than I have in the past ten years.

"I don't have any restrictions (in physical activity) and I don't place any on myself," Keating says.

A widower, Keating lost his wife Margaret five years ago. The Keatings have six grown children and 20 grandchildren. One son, Allen was killed in Vietnam. Larry lives in Hull, Tommy in Duxbury, Brian in Marshfield, Christopher in Rochester, N.Y. and Stephen lives in York, Maine. Their daughter Joan Bowman lives in Portsmouth, Rhode Island.

Keating's sisters Pauline and Mary Keating live in town, another sister Barbara Keating Rinkovich lives in Hartford.

Although Keating has given his time over six decades to a myriad of committees, projects, and causes — it's clear that right now his attention is focused on being an advocate for local senior citizens.

He was recognized recently by South Shore Elder Services for his service to his fellow senior citizens with the 1993 Edythe B. Donkin Memorial award.

Keating stresses the positive contribution that older Cohasseters make.

"As far as being a senior citizen goes, some people look at old age as miserable.

"To me old age is golden. You can take your knowledge, experience and education and offer it to the town and we do," he says.

Keating notes that Cohasset senior citizens return the equivalent of $150,000 annually to the town in grants and in-kind services. That's three times the $50,000 annual Council on Aging budget.

"We're a can-do group and not a help-me group," he says.

Serving in a leadership role, Keating's not afraid to ruffle a few feathers.

"I try to project the image of a leader and if you're going to be a leader, you can't sit quietly by," he says.

Keating says giving something back is a great way to show you care.

"Volunteering is really an expression and display of love, concern, and respect for friends, neighbors and the community," he says.

1993 Citizen of the Year nominees

The Cohasset Mariner received the names of 21 nominees from 38 readers for its first annual Citizen of the Year Award.

T. Gerard Keating was selected by a committee of five consisting of Deborah Protulis, Police Chief Brian Noonan, Cohasset High School Asst. Principal Jack DeLorenzo, Chamber of Commerce president Keith Knowles, and Mary Ford, editor of the Cohasset Mariner.

Other nominees included:

• Austin Ahearn, Jr. for his work on the Veterans' memorial.

• Robert Barrows for his helpfulness and kindness to people.

• Merle Brown for his excellent leadership qualities as selectman and as Boy Scout Troop 28 committee chairman.

• Patricia Brown for her helpfulness and the time she puts in with METCO students.

• Joseph D. Buckley for giving freely of his time to the town and to the Council on Aging.

• Ted Carroll for his contributions to the well being of children, personal development of staff, and the peace of mind of parents as director of the Summer Playground program.

• Clark Chatterton for always being ready to help the needy including students, neighbors, the elderly and with general fund-raisers.

• Clifford Dickson for extreme service to man and beast throughout his lifetime.

• Therese D'Urso for her dedication and hard work on the PSO and education council, among other volunteer activities.

• Herbert Jason for his many hours on the Minot's Light Replica.

• Robert B. James, a posthumous nomination for his many years of service to the town including serving as town moderator, president of the Cohasset Historical Society, president of the Cohasset Golf Club, and more.

• Tanna Kasperowicz for her entrepreneurship in starting the 'Tinytown Gazette.'

• Jim Lagrotteria for his vision which hatched Harborfest.

• Harold Litchfield for his leadership over one of the most efficient highway departments in the state.

• Bob Martin for his leadership and good works with the Chamber of Commerce and Lightkeepers Corp.

• Joseph R. McElroy for his long range thinking and leadership in involving an army of volunteers to contribute their time, money and expertise to make the renovation of the Cohasset Lightkeepers Residence possible.

• Marjorie Murphy for her service above and beyond the call of duty as school librarian at the Deer Hill School.

• Glenn Pratt for almost single handedly turning the Community Center into a successful, thriving 'Center'.

• Ginny Riley for delivering Meals on Wheels, cooking for Rosy's Kitchen, and helping on Thanksgiving Day at the Community Center.

• Veneta (Vee) Roebuck for giving tirelessly of her time and enthusiasm on the Conservation Commission since 1988 and for being instrumental in the town's purchase of the Hagerty property.

Consultants grade Greenbush

rapid transit and private vehicles.

This time the consultants used the 1990 census figures and estimated traffic volumes by the year 2010.

And, in Cohasset, the consultants calculated the additional traffic that would be generated by the construction of a 60,000-square-foot supermarket/shopping center on the west side of Route 3A at lower King Street.

The proposed HOV (high occupancy vehicle) lane from Furnace Brook Parkway in Quincy to Freeport Street in Dorchester — for which an environmental notification form has been filed with the state — accounted for a traffic adjustment as well.

But the bottom line, according to the consultants, is that about 6 percent more riders would board the commuter trains at the seven stations — Weymouth Landing, East Weymouth, West Hingham, Nantasket Junction, Cohasset, North Scituate and Greenbush, but ridership on the commuter boat would decrease about 1 percent.

An anticipated slower level of economic growth than previously projected during the late 1980s accounted for the slight increase in ridership rather than a larger increase.

With an HOV lane, bus ridership also would increase, but the number of auto trips to Boston had been overestimated while rapid transit ridership had been underestimated in the earlier study.

Another assumption in the study is that both the Middleborough and Plymouth lines would be in operation. Previous figures did not include the operation of the Plymouth line.

GRADE CROSSINGS

Much of last Thursday's meeting focused on the 43 grade crossings on the Greenbush Line and how long traffic would be backed up on the various public streets.

The most significant traffic jams would occur in the Hingham Square-Lincoln Historic District and at the Weymouth Landing station.

The grade crossing at the first Commercial Street crossing at the top of Weymouth Landing would be closed for two minutes while the train loads and unloads passengers at the station.

In Hingham Square, with the train traveling about 30 miles per hour, the crossings would be closed for about one minute. Because the existing crossings are so close together — seven are within 0.9 miles — the gates closest together would be closed simultaneously if they are less than 1,000 feet apart, the consultants explained.

For other crossings, the gates would be closed for a maximum of 45 seconds.

Occasionally, traffic would be tied up at other locations for longer than that, perhaps once a week. One location would be at Scituate's First Parish Road at the fire station.

The consultants propose that "Don't block" signs be erected at crossings where queues would block other roads.

"We are assuming people have common sense," said Richard Prone, Duxbury's representative to the CAC.

WARNING SIGNALS

Sverdrup's Faulkner also presented a study on the noise assessment of the train's warning signals. An earlier study addressed the noise from trains themselves.

All grade crossings will have descending gates, with an advance warning by standard flashing lights and bells. Once the gate is down, the bells will stop.

In drawing up the noise assessment, the MBTA discovered that a waiver adopted sometime in the late 1800s by the Department of Public Utilities stated that no horn could be sounded in Hingham from Fort Hill and West streets in West Hingham to and including Kilby Street in Hingham. Two Spring Street crossings in Cohasset are included in the waiver, according to Connor.

This was a policy when it was operated by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad and by Conrail, said Connor, and was included in a timetable published in 1956.

At the other 33 grade crossings, horns would be mounted on poles, directed up and down the streets at the grade crossings, and sound for between 20 and 30 seconds after the gates have descended and bells rung. The horns would be activated by the train operator.

Faulkner noted that the stationary horns presently are not used anywhere in the country, but the Los Angeles rapid transit project is conducting a study that will provide optimal warning but keep community annoyance to a minimum.

❑ Tommy Coburn hosted a wonderful Groundhog Day party last week! His family all loved it! He, his Poppy (Roger Pompeo) and Kelsie (Litchfield) even went into the woods to try to find the groundhog. The good news is that they didn't, so we are all going to believe that he was sound asleep and did NOT see his shadow.

Yipee, this horrid winter will not last for six more weeks! We're right, right?

❑ Speaking of parties, Pat Casey is hosting his annual party this weekend. He is a real sportsman that loves to hunt and fish, and he saves all of his "game" to hold an event to send funds to Duck's Unlimited. Over the years he has contributed a lot to the organization, and everyone certainly has a great time helping him do so. And, a full tummy to boot!

❑ Last week we neglected to tell you that Carmine of Strawberry Parfait fame, was so helpful during the drug-free weekend. Whenever there is an event that is worthwhile, Carmine is there to volunteer either his help or his food and he deserves a big pat on the back for doing so.

Carmine, Cohasset is lucky to have you as an intregal part of our community! You are super.

❑ Mary Jane McArthur visited Burt Pratt at Ocean Manor Rehab in Scituate last week, and reports that he is doing well. He would love to have more visitors, so be sure to include that in your plans for this week.

As we have said, he is one great man!

❑ News from Skidmore College! Alison Weis, daughter of Bryan and Eloise Weis and a member of the Class of 1996, has earned honors during the fall semester at Skidmore, a coeducational liberal arts institution of approximately 2,150 students.

Congratulations go out to you, Alison, your hard work certainly paid off. Keep it up.

❑ More student news, this time from Gould Academy. Junior Daniel Varisco, son of Mr. and Mrs. David C. Varisco, was named to the honor roll for the mid-winter term. Daniel is a member of the alpine ski team, so he must be thrilled with the weather that we're having this winter. Guess you have to enjoy outdoor winter sports to like this, but to many people it is dismal.

❑ The Quincy Center Dinner Theatre will be conducting open auditions for the spectacular musical "Ziegfeld Follies". "Ziegfeld" requires a cast of 20 men and 20 women. There are 12 lead roles and multi-chorus and character parts, with singing and dancing required. Auditions will be held Sunday, Feb. 13, at the Masonic Building on Hancock St. in Quincy at 2 and 7 p.m.

Hey, Herm and JoAnn Fictner should go, they are awesome. Have you ever seen them dance together; they are wonderful.

❑ Isn't it great news that Rocco F. Laugelle is running for selectman again. This will be Rockie's third term, and he is doing a grand job. Imagine the hours that he has put in, all for our town. Thank you Rockie, we owe you a ton of applause.

❑ We give a standing ovation to Megan Pratt this week. Megan, the daughter of Glen and Kathy Pratt, is 14 years old and a member of the CHS gymnastics team. She is a major reason that Cohasset is tied with Scituate atop the Pilgrim Conference.

She, and all of the team, work hard folks, he sure to tell them so when you see them. And, go soon, their season is almost over. They truly are a pleasure to watch — so graceful and pretty.

❑ On the subject of events, the Amateur Gardners of Cohasset will meet at the home of Mrs. Edna Finegan Tuesday, Feb. 15, at 1 p.m. Mrs. Sue Fone and Mrs. Connie Kurts will serve as co-hostesses. After the regular meeting "How does your garden grow" will be the topic of the meeting.

Another breath of spring, can you wait to plant your flowers? Hurry up, pansies!

❑ We certainly hope that Jen Coley, daughter of Ralph and Susi Coley, is doing much better as she reads this. Jen is undergoing treatment for a painful inflammatory disease, get well fast!

❑ Hey Amy Shepard, are we pleased with you. Your schedule, plus playing basketball for Suffolk University, must be tough, but you are doing it!

Amy is always doing something, she has several jobs and is good at all of them; she is great.

❑ That is the news from here for this week, please call me with yours!

Citizen of the Year

As editor of the Cohasset Mariner, nearly every day for more than a month before nominations closed Jan. 14, it has been my pleasure to open a letter or two nominating Cohasset citizens and detailing the nominees' contributions to help make this town one we all love.

With a field of 21 nominees, the selection process wasn't easy.

Our thanks go to Police Chief Brian Noonan, Deborah Protulis, Cohasset High School Assistant Principal Jack DeLorenzo, and Chamber of Commerce president Keith Knowles, for joining me at the Mariner office in Hingham for the challenging and pleasurable task of poring over the nomination forms submitted.

We narrowed the field down to seven, then to three, and finally to one. The final decision — although not reached without considerable discussion — was unanimous.

So we extend our heartfelt congratulations to T. Gerard Keating, who's spent the better part of 60 of his 74 years giving something back to Cohasset, on his selection as this newspaper's 1993 Citizen of the Year.

Libby Pompeo put it best in her nomination of Mr. Keating.

"He is 'Mr. Cohasset' himself. He is a great guy and has done more for the town of Cohasset than two people put together could do and all so willingly," she wrote.

Mr. Keating was delighted by my phone call (which I decided was not unlike Ed McMahon calling someone about winning the Publishers' Clearing House).

It's not money we're offering but recognition for making a difference. In our society too many true role models go unrecognized. Too often people today look to the sports, rock or movie star with envy when the real hero is the local police officer, fire-fighter, teacher, parent, or church leader.

In what we hope will become a tradition, the annual Citizen of the Year award is our way of taking our hats off to a person among us who goes that extra mile without asking for anything but the intrinsic reward of helping to make Cohasset a better place.

Rejection of landfill report urged

letters

To the Editor:

Even though the public comment period on the proposed expansion of Cohasset Heights landfill (CHL) ended yesterday, Feb. 9, there is still something we can do to help stop this expansion.

Secretary Trudy Coxe has until Wednesday, Feb. 16, to make her decision on the Final Environmental Impact Report (FEIR) for the 27.5 acre "Area V" expansion.

Before Feb. 16, call Governor Weld at his Office of Constituent Services (727-6250), and ask him to REJECT the FEIR. Tell them the project is EOEA File #7223.

Also, before Feb. 16, write Gov. Weld at Executive Office, State House, Boston, MA 02133, and ask him to make sure that the FEIR, File #7223, is rejected.

The strong public opposition to this project is our best way of stopping it. I urge everyone reading this letter to call and write Gov. Weld today. Sincerely,

John K. McNabb, Jr.

Bell runs for water board

Mark Bell of 460 King St. has taken out the necessary papers to make himself a Water Commission candidate for the upcoming elections in Cohasset.

Citing concerns consistent with publicity of less than desired performance of the water department, Bell will focus his campaign on the desire to get available information out in the open, work with the department to solve issues, and improve communication with the public. Working with other commissioners to assist their present positive efforts is another strong priority.

Bell has been chairman of the Title 5 Transition Study Committee, a subcommittee of the Board of Health, for over a year. The "T-5" committee has been commended by many as being extremely well-informed and ahead of other towns in terms of information and depth on the issue. Mark plans on bringing similar energy and diligence to the water department.

Bell is a senior technician in the Technical Operations Department at Boston University. A long-time electro-mechanical engineer, his familiarity with sequential operating methods and common engineering practices will help in the understanding of many water department processes. His Title 5 work has given him similar insight into state regulations and the present "mindset" of DEP.

Bell is a frequent contributor of articles for Television Broadcast, a nationally distributed industry publication, highly regarded by television station general managers, chief engineers and news directors.

Bell's most recent accomplishment has been attaining the goal of being sponsored, by the publication, to work at the upcoming National Association of Broadcasters convention, in Las Vegas, this March. His assignment will be to write about satellite transmission vehicles and news remote vehicles.

Bell lived in Cohasset for 10 years and is married to Lynne Sheridan, director of the Cohasset Community Center Nursery School. He has two children, Kelsey, 5 1/2 years old and Devon, 3 1/2.

Please call Bell at 383-6090 for additional information.

Kirk committee to meet

A campaign committee is being organized to support Jim Kirk's candidacy for the school committee. The first meeting will be Monday, Feb. 14, at 8 p.m. at the home of Sue and Jack McNamara, 45 Fair Oaks Ln.

If you would like to contribute time, money, etc., to the campaign, please call chairman Karen Kirkendall (383-0464) or Sue McNamara (383-6945).

Dems to meet Feb. 12

Registered Democrats in Cohasset will be holding a caucus Saturday, Feb. 12, at 2 p.m. to elect delegates to the 1994 Massachusetts Democratic Convention. The convention will be held June 3 and 4 in Worcester. Its purpose is to endorse candidates for U.S. Senate and constitutional offices. Cohasset will be electing four delegates and four alternates, equally divided between men and women, to send to the convention.

Chartis Langmaid, chairperson of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee, will call the caucus at the Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium, which is accessible to handicapped persons. The caucus is open to all registered Democrats in the town, persons ineligible to register and media representatives. The only persons eligible to participate in any portion of the caucus are those who are registered Democrats in Cohasset as of December 31, 1993. There will be no absentee or proxy voting.

Challenges to the delegate selection process can be filed in writing with the Compliance Review Commission, c/o The Massachusetts Democratic Party, 45 Bromfield Street, Boston, MA 02108 no later than June 21.

evaluation of possible environmental impacts.

"I think that this meeting represents the sincere concern that the DPE and MEPA have for the concerns of the people of Cohasset," stated Senator McDonald.

McDonald's office will be submitting a six-page letter to the secretary's office outlining the senator's specific areas of concern. McDonald felt the issues had changed dramatically since the process first began and that the whole environmental impact analysis should start over again.

Representatives of MEPA explained that it is responsible for insuring that a full review of potential environmental impacts is completed, and that the impacts are minimized.

One of the first speakers was selectmen chairman Martha Gjesteby who indicated her board would be furnishing the secretary with a written response to the report. She said the board is primarily concerned that the report does not adequately address the potential noise and odor impacts of the expansion and the expected wetlands impact. Gjesteby also believed the need for additional solid waste disposal sites is undocumented.

Michael Sullivan, selectmen vice chairman, echoed the sentiments of Gjesteby, saying his first concern over the expansion came a number of years ago when the odors from the landfill started to enter his children's bedrooms. Sullivan is also concerned the landfill owners have not given adequate financial assurances to cover the cost of capping the landfill in the future. It appears the costs of closing and capping the landfill could fall squarely on the town of Cohasset if the owners are unable to cover the costs, he said.

Sullivan believed that if the expansion is approved, the increased refuse will result in increased breakdown which will cause increased odor problems. Sullivan also cited the lack of benefit to neighboring towns since most waste will come from other parts of the state.

"One very small company stands to make a lot of money and that is no reason to expand a facility," concluded Sullivan.

Another speaker at the meeting was advisory committee chairman Nan Roth, who identified the expansions threat to the town's future water supply and the lack of financial assurances as primary reasons for her board's opposition to the expansion. She also confirmed that her board does not believe the report has demonstrated a need for the expansion.

"The advisory committee feels that the potential cost of the failure of this expansion is too high and the need too limited and we can't justify this," said Roth.

One of the most detailed presentations at the hearing came from representatives on the board of health. Chairman Bill Baird summarized his seven-year involvement with the proposed expansion and recounted his often futile attempts to regulate the current landfill. Baird showed an 11-minute video with footage that originated in the mid 1980s and spanned until just last week. The video evidenced the migration of silt laden water from the landfill in the direction of Lily Pond, the town's water supply, highlighting the board's concern over the potential impact of town drinking water.

In addition to Baird's comments, special counsel to the board of health and a member of its engineering team commented on the concerns of the board. Some of the concerns addressed included the expected wetland's impact, the odor problems, the landfill owners' "chronic inattentiveness" to regulatory requirements pertaining to financial assurances and the report's "fatally flawed" needs analysis.

Still more opposition to the expansion came from Duncan McCormack of the Water Department. McCormack criticized the Final Environmental Impact Report as being incomplete, inaccurate and incorrect. He also cited the problem of increased seagull populations that would follow the expansion which will lead to an environment in Lily Pond which will be nutrient rich and given to bacteria growth due to increased fecal matter.

"Watershed protection is the most important factor that we should consider tonight," said McCormack.

Concern for the water supply also prompted comments from Jeff Waal, chairman of the conservation committee.

"We must stop the flow of contaminants to the water supply," stated Waal. He stressed that the Final Environmental Impact Report was not sufficient to address the wetlands concerns.

Representatives from MEPA heard from a number of other Cohasset citizens regarding the proposed expansion and the environmental impact report. The MEPA representatives will consider all input it has received by 5 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 9, prior to making its recommendation to the Secretary.

Gymnasts conquer conference meet

Hettstrom takes individual all-around

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

If Cohasset was to pick a theme to sum up its performance in the Pilgrim Conference gymnastics meet, 'Coach Knows Best,' could have been the perfect choice.

Head coach Ruthann Sargent has a strict rule for her Skipper gymnasts when it comes to sneaking a peak at the scoreboard during invitational meets: Don't do it.

Cohasset's coach isn't trying to be an ogre by implementing the team rule. She, more than anyone, knows what's best for her 9-1 squad.

By looking at the standings, Sargent believes, her gymnasts have the tendency to become preoccupied with how many points they need to win a medal, rather than concentrating their energies on nailing a strong routine.

Sargent's theory held water nicely as the Skippers stayed away from the scoreboard and proceeded to collect eight medals, Saturday at Carver High.

Cohasset also had three gymnasts named to the All-Star team. The team vastly improved on last year's performance of one All-Star (Tara Gallagher) and three medals in the six-team competition.

With so many teams and several events taking place simutaneously, Sargent said it was difficult to determine how well her gymnasts were doing, overall.

"It was unexpected," she said. "We didn't realize we'd won so many medals."

Erica Hettstrom (all-around), Megan Pratt (floor) and Jodi Colwill (beam) were selected to the All-Star squad, based on their average regular-season scores of 31.46, 8.25 and 7.96 respectively.

The Cohasset High gymnastics team pose with the Pilgrim Conference 2 Championship plaque it shared with Scituate. The Skippers broke the Sailors' 14-year grip as undefeated league champions.

Hettstrom won the all-around on Saturday with a 31.65. Cohasset had three gymnasts receive medals on the bars as Pratt (third), Colwill (fifth) and Lauren Genovese (sixth) all finished in the top six.

Colwill took a second in the beam and sixth in the vault. Pratt's floor routine was good for second place in front of teammate Tara Hettstrom, who finished third. Tafana Fiore picked up a third-place finish in the beam.

Cohasset and Scituate were also presented Pilgrim Conference co-championship plaques. It was the first year since 1982 that the Skippers have won the league title. The Sailors had won every year since.

Cohasset faces Marshfield, Notre Dame and Thayer this week before a Feb. 19 date at the South Sectionals in Foxboro.

"I think it's a real honor," Sargent said of the Skippers qualifying for the meet. "They've been very consistent for such a young group. They performed better than I thought they would."

Sargent said there's a possibility some of the girls could place in the top four and qualify for the state meet as individuals.

Relaxed Eric Flaim ready for Games

By David McKee
Mariner staff

Speed skater Eric Flaim doesn't look like an athlete entered in his third Winter Olympic Games.

Flaim, 26, who stands 5'8" and weighs 160 pounds, had stylish long hair and was dressed in a work shirt and baggy pants as he greeted fans Saturday afternoon at his roller blading store in Boston.

The store, called Eric Flaim's Motion Sports, is located on Newbury Street and is New England's only store dedicated just to in-line skating and equipment.

Saturday was the day before Flaim left for the '94 Games in Norway and he was busy talking to the media and meeting with family and friends.

It was a big week for Flaim. He was featured in a two-page spread in Sports Illustrated. He was also interviewed by WBZ-TV and Channel 7.

Flaim, who was bouncing in between interviews, said he is shooting for three medals at the '94 Games.

"I feel pretty confident but you never know with short track," he said. "Anything can happen. But if I skate my race, I think I can come back with some medals."

Flaim skated in long track speed skating in the '88 and the '92 Winter Olympic Games. He decided to enter the short track speed skating events in '94.

Flaim has qualified in the 500 meter, the 1000 meter and the relay event.

On Tuesday Feb. 22 the 1000 meter race will be held.

On Thursday Feb. 24, the 500 meter and 5,000 meter relay will be held.

And on Saturday Feb. 26, the 500 meter finals and the 5,000 meter relay finals will be held.

All the events are expected to be on CBS television.

Flaim was also talking about the Nancy Kerrigan-Tonya Harding controversy.

"Every time you turn on the TV it's on," he said. "It's on Larry King, Katie Couric, you name it. I know just as much as everyone else. I think the legal system will take care of it. I really don't know what's going to happen."

Flaim, an '85 graduate of Silver Lake High School, has been competing at the highest levels of speed skating for the past ten years. With relatives in Pembroke and Scituate, there will be many supportive family members. The relay finals are supposed to be on live national TV.

"Pembroke's been great," he said. "Tell everyone there that I owe them a lot for my success. All my former hockey coaches and the players I played with helped out along the way."

He has an apartment in Hyde Park and owns the roller blade store on 349 Newbury Street in Boston.

The store opened in April of '93.

Flaim is partners with Bud Keohan.

"Eric and I are friends from childhood," said Keohan, who hails from Boston. "I roller blade like Eric but I cannot stay with him. He is a world class athlete. I'm just a hack."

Flaim is hopeful the store will continue to flourish.

"I've been focused on competing and training for a while and haven't been too involved with the store," Flaim admitted. "But the idea is for it to be successful and I hope it can keep going."

The store offers rentals for those looking to try out the sport.

Rentals starts as low as $15 per day.

"Boston is the fastest growing area for roller blading," Keohan said. "And we get people of all age groups."

Skippers tough in three-game week

By Kevin Lewis
Special to the Mariner

The Skippers played three games last week against Latin Academy, Abington and Duxbury.

Wednesday, Latin Academy defeated Cohasset, 5-3. Pat Reynolds scored two goals, including a spectacular short-handed goal. "Bubba" Kinchla scored the other Cohasset goal. Kyle Bunstein played a strong game in goal. Coach Walsh skated three lines, Nevin Bunstein centering Kinchla and co-captain Mike Riley. Reynolds centering Brian Riley and Chris McKenna. Matt Lewis centering Mike Shields and Kevin Smith. Coach Evans used co-captain Charlie Endris,

Last week I was dissed by several East Bridgewater basketball players and their coach because I criticized their style of play.

My writing, my knowledge of the game and possibly my hairstyle were questioned by these good fellows.

Anyway, I was not going to respond but then something strange happened Saturday night and I can no longer be silent.

I was drifting off to sleep after a night of quiet meditation when a man dressed in shorts, sneakers and a YMCA sweat shirt appeared to me.

"Are you troubled by the game of basketball my young friend?" the spirit asked. "I could sense your concern."

"Why yes. But who are you?" I responded.

"I am the ghost of Dr. James Naismith. I invented basketball in December of 1891 at the Springfield YMCA."

"Oh my god. You are just the man I wanted to talk to."

"Let me ease your pain," he assured me. "Tell me your problem."

"Well, I wrote a column a while back that was critical of a high school coach who ordered his team to hold the ball and not shoot it at the hoop. I said the game was boring and that a shot clock should be used like it is in the girls' games."

"Whoa," the spirit said. "What is a hoop? The game I invented had peach baskets. We had to stop the game after each basket and poke the ball out."

"Uhm, we don't use peach baskets anymore," I explained. "We use metal hoops so the players can jump up and dunk the ball."

"Dunk the ball?"

"Yeah, don't you know what a dunk is," I said. "You take the ball, jump up and jam it through the hoop. And if you dunk hard enough, you can shatter the glass backboard."

"Jumping? Shattering glass? What have you done to my game? Next thing you'll tell me is the players don't shoot with two hands anymore."

"Hey that's right," I said. "The players today shoot one-handed jump shots."

"Jump shots?" the ghost barked. "We never jumped when we shot. We had nice simple two-handed set shots."

"If someone tried a set shot today a defender would block it and knock it into the stands," I said.

"Defender? Blocked shots. You mean the players don't just stand there with their hands up and let their opponents shoot?" the spirit asked.

"No they don't. These days if a player can jump high, shoot well and block shots, he can make $5 million a year in the NBA," I said.

"Five million a year? With that much money you could buy your own state," the spirit said.

"Well, Dr. Naismith. Things have really changed since those good old days."

"Well, hearing about these changes has given me a headache," the spirit said. "Before I go, tell me your problem again."

"A shot clock," I repeated. "Boys high school basketball needs a shot clock to

Beginner golf lessons offered

The Cohasset and Scituate Recreation Departments are co-sponsoring indoor golf lessons for beginner players, scheduled to begin Thursday, Feb. 17, at the Cushing School in Scituate.

Lessons are five weeks, one-hour weekly and the fee for the five-hour sessions is $60 per person.

To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791. Classes are limited in size and registrations are accepted on a first call basis. Class times available are 6, 7 and 8 p.m.

Local golf professional and head golf pro Dan Neary will be instructing.

Hockey boosters grateful for support

The Cohasset Hockey Boosters would like to thank the many local businesses and professionals who contributed to the Boosters fund to benefit the Cohasset High School varsity and JV hockey teams. Donations will be used for spring league participation, team dinners, awards, games and shirts.

Many thanks to: The Good Sport, Barry Waste Services, R.G. Vanderweil, Jr., The American Athlete, Beverly and Jerry DuMoulin, Foxborough Savings Bank, Stop & Shop, Cohasset Heights Ltd., Edward F. Goff Co., Marylou's News, Mitchell Mechanical Contractors, Kimball's By the Sea, Cohasset Police Association, Frank Williams, Cohasset Hardware, Steve Golden, M.D., Dauphinee Auto Body, and especially Fiori's Exxon for sponsoring new practice shirts for both teams.

If any interested fans of Cohasset High School hockey would like to make a donation, they can send a check to Cohasset Hockey Boosters, P.O. Box 653, Cohasset 02025.

Mt. Sunapee ski trip

The Cohasset Recreation Department, in conjunction with the Scituate Recreation Department, will accept telephone registrations for a day ski trip to Mt. Sunapee, N.H., scheduled for Wednesday, Feb. 23, during school vacation week. The cost for the motor coach transportation and an all-day lift ticket is $48 per person.

The bus will leave Scituate Town Hall at 5:30 a.m. and return at about 7:30 p.m.

To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791. Space is limited and registrations can be confirmed only via payment within three working days after call-in registration is accepted.

make the players shoot more. This clock would be set at 30 seconds and if the team didn't shoot the ball in that time, it would lose possession. I was at a game recently where the final score was 32-20 because there wasn't a shot clock. It was like watching paint dry."

"A score of 32-20? What is wrong with that," the spirit said. "That is a very high total for a game. Why I played in a game once that ended with a score of 4-1. Boy that was exciting. I say you leave things alone, you wacky sportswriter. People are always changing things. Keep things the way they are."

I bid the spirit farewell and learned a valuable lesson about life, basketball and writing.

I had a big glass of milk and a cookie and slept like a baby.

So Tonya Harding wants Meg Ryan to portray her in the T.V. movie of this whole figure skating fiasco? You have to admit, the resemblance (?) is uncanny. And while we're on the subject, doesn't it only make sense that Ryan's real-life husband, Dennis Quaid, portray Harding's husband/boyfriend Jeff Gillooly?

And let's see, Keven Costner has already played a bodyguard. It only makes sense to fatten him up until he's about 375 pounds or so and have the Oscar winner take on the role of that fat tub, Sean Eckart.

Robert DeNiro could pump himself up like he did for "The Raging Bull" and "Cape Fear" and play the hitman, while his "Midnight Run" co-star John Ashton ("Marvin") could play the dude who drove the get-away car.

How about Anne Bancroft in the role of Harding's mother and Sam Eiliot as Tonya's half-brother? This movie has Emmy written all over it. What a cast!

Now all we need is a name for this movie. My choices are "Dimfellas," "My Right Knee," "A Few Dumb Men," "Tonya: Portrait of a Bully" and "The Outlaw Tonya Harding."

I wonder if a Shannen Doherty-Tonya Harding Pay-Per-View wrestling match would gross more than "Howard Stern's New Year's Rotten Eve" gig?

Norwell's Eric Mueller had quite a week for himself on the track for the Clippers. The South Shore League All-Star in cross country last fall, rolled to impressive 4:25 and 4:26 mile victories in consecutive meets. The 4:26 was good for the Big 3/Pilgrim Conference title. Look for Mueller to make some noise in the Division 4 Class Meet at Harvard in the coming weeks.

Hanover High wrestler Tim Graves had a tough match last Wednesday when he sustained a broken arm against Don Bosco. The freshman grappler was just 30 seconds into his match and was leading 2-0 when injured.

Graves has to feel good, however, about the concern and class shown by his Indian teammates and coach, Ron DePesa. The first-year coach waited at the New England Hospital with Graves until his arm was set and his teammates all signed his cast the next day. Here's hoping for a quick recovery for Tim from the Extra Points crew!

Walton greets South Shore hoop fans

By David McKee

Bill Walton was late and offered his apologies.

"Hello, sorry I was late," the NBA Hall of Famer told the crowd at the Royal Discount Book store in Weymouth Monday night. "But, I'll make it up to you."

Walton was in Weymouth to sign copies of his new book, "Nothing But Net" written with Gene Wojciehowski.

The line for autographs snaked throughout the entire store and Walton signed everything from books to hats and posters for more than an hour.

Dressed in a black blazer with a red turtleneck, Walton looked and acted like a politician.

He greeted each person in line with a warm smile, patiently signed autographs and made polite chit-chat.

Walton helped lead the Boston Celtics to their last championship in '86.

He also won an NBA title for Portland in '77.

In college at UCLA in the early 70s, he won two straight NCAA titles under coach John Wooden and just missed a third his senior year.

However, Walton was more than your average jock.

He graduated with a degree in History from UCLA,was part of the counter culture scene in California touring with the Grateful Dead and at one point was under surveillance by the FBI because of his friendship with Patty Hearst.

On the court, his unorthodox ways showed. He wore his long hair in a pony tail and had a beard for several years in the NBA.

However, his basketball talent was unmistakable.

He is considered by many to be one of the best centers who ever played basketball.

He was a great rebounder, inside scorer, shot blocker and passer. His only fault as a player was his chronically injured feet.

Walton battled foot injuries throughout his entire career, losing many seasons to broken bones and stress fractures.

His foot problems led to his retirement after the '87 season with the Celtics.

The fans in Weymouth were eager to talk to Walton about everything from basketball to drugs.

One of the first people in line, a guy in his 20s with a leather coat on, boldly asked Walton a question after the big red head signed his book.

"Man, I always wanted to know, did you ask John Wooden for permission to smoke pot at UCLA?"

In David Halberstam's book, The Breaks of the Game, it is said that Walton asked the UCLA coach permission to smoke marijuana after games to calm down. After first refusing, Wooden agreed to Walton's request.

However, on Monday, Walton was singing a different tune.

"No I never did that," he told the man.

Skippers tough in three-game week

David Noble, Anthony Wigmore and Jared Graves on defense.

Friday, the Skippers lost a heartbreaker to Abington 3-2. Abington scored with 12 seconds remaining to record the victory.

The game featured outstanding goaltending by Kevin McKenna. Chris McKenna and Charlie Endris scored the Cohasset goals.

Saturday, tournament-bound Duxbury defeated Cohasset in a very physical game, 5-0. Kyle Bunstein made numerous saves including several of the spectacular variety. David Noble continues to play exceptionally well on defense along with his cohorts Charlie Endris, Anthony Wigmore and Jared Graves. Walsh received outstanding efforts from his entire group of forwards; Nevin Bunstein, Mike Riley, "Bubba" Kinchla, Pat Reynolds, Chris McKenna, Brian Riley, Matt Lewis, Kevin Smith and Mike Shields.

Cohasset's last home game of the season is Saturday, Feb. 12, vs. Hanover at Pilgrim Arena, located in Hingham. Face-off time is 7:20 p.m.

Volunteers to play key role in World Cup Soccer

World Cup USA '94, the organizing committee for the World Cup is looking for volunteers to help with the staging of the world's biggest sporting event. Applicants must be at least 18 years of age and either U.S. citizens or permanent residents.

"This is a once in a lifetime opportunity for the people of New England to get involved with the largest sporting event in the world," said Terry Driscoll, World Cup USA's venue executive director in Boston. "Volunteers are not only valuable because of the magnitude of the event, but also because the enthusiasm and spirit of the volunteer group is really what the World Cup is all about."

World Cup USA will enlist the services of over 1,000 volunteers during June and July when the tournament takes place. Departments requiring volunteer staff include accreditation, press operations, language services, protocol, hospitality, food services and transportation.

Anyone wishing to volunteer should call 557-2975 or write to World Cup USA '94, Volunteer Services, 2 Center Plaza, Mezzanine Level, Boston, MA 02108. All prospective volunteers are encouraged to apply as soon as possible, to maximize their chances of being selected.

The World Cup is held every four years and is coming to the USA for the first time this summer, with six games scheduled for Foxboro Stadium. It is estimated that the 1994 World Cup will attract a global television audience of 31.2 billion, double the audience for the 1992 Olympics in Barcelona. 70,000 international visitors are expected to travel to the Boston area in the summer of '94 as a result of the World Cup.

"No. No."

Walton was then asked about the '86 Celtics.

"That was a great year and I had a lot of fun," he said. "I just wished we could have had more years like that."

Amy from Canton brought three books for Walton to sign. She was wearing a cowboy hat and a tight leather skirt.

"I'm not a big sports fan," she admitted. "But these will be great gifts."

She plans on giving them to her husband, her brother and her friend.

Sue from Weymouth, asked Walton to sign her book, "To Paul. Sue was Great. Bill Walton."

"Are you sure you want me to write that?" Walton asked the lady with a smile.

"Yeah it's for my brother in Texas. He will get a kick out of it," she said.

Kathy Dolnier, who works in advertising for the book store, said Walton was the third author to appear and sign books.

Country singer Naomi Judd was the first. There was also children's author Tommy DePaola.

"Naomi had about as many people here," Dolnier said. "But her fans were a little more emotional. Some brought her flowers and others brought her albums along."

Walton was asked about signing so many autographs and meeting the fans.

"This is great," he said. "I enjoy talking to the people. They are all interesting and I hope they like my book."

He was then asked about youngsters playing sports.

"The main thing is to have fun," he said. "Enjoy the game and don't take it too seriously. That is the best advice."

Walking team to benefit Hospice of the SS

Do you and your friends have the winter blues? Looking for a way to get some exercise, while doing good for others? Why not participate in the Hospice of the South Shore indoor mall walk Saturday, March 5, between 7 and 10 a.m. at Hanover Mall? You and your friends can walk sponsored laps inside the mall to raise money for the terminally ill and their families. What's more, all walkers are eligible for valuable prizes.

Each year, area residents show their support for Hospice of the South Shore by organizing teams of their friends or families to join the indoor mall walk. Babysitting services are available for children, ages two to six; older kids can join their parents in walking pledged laps.

If you can't walk at the event, you can still contribute by recruiting other walkers, donating money, or distributing fliers. Call Hospice of the South Shore at (617) 380-0877 for more information.

Germany in transition

Beginning Feb. 12, Lynne Layman's photography exhibit, "United Germany in Transition," will be on display at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library through April.

When she was a teenager, Lynne visited with a family in Dessau, East Germany, one month before the famous Berlin Wall was built. At that time, travel was limited by special permits and ever-present guides. She found the need to return to the emancipated "East" irresistible.

Returning to Germany in 1991, after the Wall came down and after unification, she wandered freely along country roads from West Berlin to Bernburg to Dessau, capturing many special moments and unexpected happenings conveyed in the photographs in the exhibit.

"The people in the former GDR are experiencing an economic and ideological struggle right now and true freedom and opportunity seem a long way off. I plan to return to United Germany, the FRG, to document the struggle of the German people and their progress towards renewal," she said.

Lynne is a Scituate resident. Her work has been exhibited in local arts festivals and juried photography shows, where she has taken First Prize (South Shore Arts Festival, 1991); her photographs are included in the book, Project Kenya, in the magazine, Wooden Boat, Sept.-Oct. 1991, in Elder Hostel catalogs and in local newspapers. She is also involved in various freelance projects.

There will be an opening reception at the Library Feb. 12, 5:30 to 7:30 p.m.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

DANGER OF WRONG PRICING

QUESTION: Doesn't it make sense for a homeowner to set the selling price for his own home?

ANSWER: Since human nature is predictable, there is a better than even chance that you'll put the wrong selling price on your home. You may price it far above its fair market value because of sentimental attachment or expenditures you have made. A home remaining on the market for months due to overpricing, frequently becomes a "White Elephant." It eventually sells for a much lower figure.

Or, you might underprice it. Your safest bet is to list it with a Realtor who will help you price it correctly.

CHS actors honored

At the Emerson College High School Drama Festival on Saturday, three Cohasset High School students were honored for their performances in "Dancing with Strangers." Singled out for acting excellence were senior Melissa van der Werf and junior Kevin O'Donnell. A special award was created to recognize the exceptional performance of junior Mary Ellen Rayment who had to go on without rehearsal and with a script in her hand to fill in for an actress who was taken ill minutes before performance.

This weekend Cohasset's actors will take "Dancing with Strangers" into the preliminary round of the Massachusetts High School Drama Festival. They will perform at 9 a.m. Saturday at Hingham High School. Previous to this they will present an open rehearsal of the play Thursday evening at 7:30 with a discussion of the work with the play's author, Sandy Asher, to follow. The public is encouraged to attend either or both of these performances. The open rehearsal will be free while admission to Saturday's festival will cost $5.

The complete Hingham High School Festival Lineup appears below:

9 a.m. Cohasset — "Dancing with Strangers"
10 a.m. — Notre Dame — "Mother Love."
11 a.m. — North Quincy — "Special Guest."
Noon — Scituate — "The Closet Society."
12:45 p.m. — Lunch.
1:30 p.m. — Hingham — "Competition Piece."
2:30 p.m. — Weymouth — "I Never Saw Another Butterfly."
3:30 p.m. — Rockland — "Voices from the High School."
5:30 p.m. — Awards — Three winners go to semi-finals March 5.

PSO Diversity workshop

Feb. 2, PSO president Maureen Jerz introduced Miriam Jefferson, of The National Coalition Building Institute (NCBI), to an audience of some 65 school administrators, teachers, parents and students. Miriam Jefferson, the Director of the Boston Chapter of the NCBI, conducted a mini-workshop on "Understanding Diversity."

The NCBI is an international, award-winning organization versed in training and leadership development. The workshop was divided into three parts:

1. Look at our own diversity. In this phase the facilitator, Ms. Jefferson, had each member of the audience stand to identify his or her background, in response to categories named. This exercise gave a sense of the surprising diversity that exists in any group.

2. Examine the attitudes that we have about different groups. This part included a brief role-playing episode, examining preconceptions each of us may have of different groups.

3. Identify how to convey an understanding or tolerance for that difference. And here, role-playing again was used to explore thought-provoking techniques that allow a person to weigh their preconceptions and to understand and rethink them.

In her introductory remarks, Maureen Jerz expressed that we as parents, educators, and leaders have a responsibility to effect change in our world by teaching our children now, how to show respect and tolerance to all with whom we share this planet. With this goal in mind, the PSO hopes that this workshop will serve as a springboard for further discussion.

Artists set 'Tablescapes' in creative fund-raiser for Art Center

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

[illegible]d-raisers at the South Shore Art Center put an idea on the table five years ago and since then, they can't seem to clear it off.

Artists, interior designers, and home fashions dealers come together once per year to marry their talents to create Tablescapes. The result is an exhibition of art, home design and whimsy, according to Joan Wright of the SSAC.

Tablescapes from 20 participants will depict themes inspired by artists and the way they live, family relationships, and interior design, and more. The event will include a champagne reception tonight, (Thursday, Feb. 10) from 6 to 9 p.m. and the exhibit will be open Friday, Feb. 11 from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Saturday, Feb. 12 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Each year, attendance at the unique art show has grown as more people find out about the event. Last year, SSAC took in more than $3,000, Wright said.

More than just a table setting, a Tablescape is a collection of items which reflects an aspect of an artist's life, or anything the designer wants to convey.

Photographer Susan Nalband and paper-maker Joy Osborn worked together to create "Frida and Diego," which depicts a picnic lunch that may have been enjoyed by Mexican artists Frida Kahlo and Diego Rivera.

Nalband and Osborn worked together to make a 15-foot mural (Frida is 10-feet tall) behind a real scaffolding which will be set with a typical Mexican picnic.

Frida used to bring lunch to her husband's work site, sit on the scaffolding, and work on her own art through the afternoon, explained Nalband.

"(SSAC President) Lanci Valentine is really encouraging to artists to do these interpretations. It's really fun to do this," Nalband said. "It really caused us to research their lives. It's really easy to skim the surface, but we have to make sure that we're doing justice with these people."

To complete the painting, Nalband and Osborn actually used knee pads to paint the mural.

"It's been a wonderful experience to work together," Nalband said.

Osborn said the eclectic nature of their Tablescape may not reflect their work as artists, but that it reflects their personalities.

"We kind of take things a little further than the normal person would," she said. "I love flowers, I love fabrics, I love table things — I have always been known for that. (Susan) has been known to create really fun things."

The Tablescape was an opportunity to educate Cohasset about the artists' life together, Osborn continued.

> We kind of take things a little further than the normal person would."
> — Joy Osborn, who helped create a 15-foot mural to accompany her Tablescape

"I was so excited about this woman — the pain she went through. I think that most people don't really interpret her work right," she said.

Another Tablescape highlights local ancestral traditions.

Scituate artist Serena (Brundige) Green, her husband, John, and mother-in-law, Mary Green worked together on a Tablescape that shows their love of their personal tradition.

Using antiques from the Green Gage Plum in Cohasset, the Green family's Tablescape celebrates their personal history in a rustic setting.

"It's like an old farmhouse and it has a lot of warmth, that's all," said Mary. "I like the past. We didn't have much but we were all happy."

Each of them contributed something to their family Tablescape.

"My son, made a wonderful old, bench - it's so very unusual he spends hours and hours. We have a wedding-ring quilt that was mine; we also have a nice old crock with the old blue-gray with flowers in it. Serena added some nice pottery dishes that she used for her table setting," Mary explained. In addition, old family photos will sit on the table.

"I'll tell you the honest truth, I just provide the antiques. Serena and John have pulled me into this," she said.

"I love primitive things, basically that's what I have in my house. I have stuffed animals and quilts and chairs — it's always a very warm feeling."

Above the Tablescape is an original painting Serena created just for the show entitled, "Those Who Came Before Us." The painting depicts a Tablescape showing a bench laden with the heirlooms that inspired the family theme.

"I thought about the way things were when our grandparents were growing up," said Serena. "One day, John's mother told me how she made lace — that really inspired the painting; listening to her tell us how these things were as a young girl. The quilt is very symbolic of the way things used to be."

John Green, who built the bench for the Tablescape, enjoys the opportunity to work with his family on a mixed media project.

"It gets us all together as a family," he said. "In the evening, my wife paints; we talk back and forth about the painting."

A furniture-maker and remodeler, John enjoys the chance to make a piece which reflects the past.

"People need to know a little bit about their past to appreciate their future — to know they had roots," he said.

Neither ancestry nor history was the inspiration for Hingham resident Sandra Tuthill. She called her Tablescape "Up, Up and Away" — inspired by a fantasy hot-air balloon ride.

"Two people have gone off and they've taken a hot air balloon ride and they've come back for a brunch. In two wicker chairs they are sitting at a centerpiece that is a hot air balloon and hanging right above that is a painting and hot air balloon sconces on the side," she said.

" Normally, you think of a period of art or an artist.But I back-doored it. I thought up my theme for the table and then I came up with my inspiration for the artist," Tuthill said.

For her Tablescape, she commissioned a painting by Judeth Van Hamm, of Hull, which depicts a balloon-ride over Hingham Harbor. Van Hamm entitled her work, "Flight of Fancy."

"In her hot air balloon over Hingham Harbor, she took the roses from the tablecloth and painted them on the largest one," Tuthill said.

Cohasset participants also include The Artist's Son Galleries, The Barn at Bound Brook (Chris Johnson), Country House Antiques, (Arlene Ferreira and Donna Morgan), Mary Larson, Kathryn Morgan Interiors, Suzanne Moyer, Jeanne Replogle, No Place Like Home (Elaine Welby), Joy Osborn and Susan Nalband and Anne Lane with Mary Lizotte of Norwell.

Also participating are Shreve, Crump & Low of Boston, Arlene Weeks of Hull, The Green Gage Plum of Scituate, Les Olivades of Duxbury, Ellen Wallack Interiors, Sandra Tuthill, Cynthia Wessling, each from Hingham, Gail Michaud, and the South Shore Antique Center of Norwell.

Tablescapes founder Arlene Ferreira of Cohasset is chairing the event. Mary Larson and Sue O'Brien of Cohasset are chairs for the raffle, which includes many pieces of art and items donated by local businesses.

(Ed. Note: Tickets are $15 for the reception and $10 for general admission. Call the South Shore Art Center for more information at 383-9548.)

Pierson to Person

Wigmore Pierson will host fire chiefs Kenneth Galligan of Brockton, Roger Lincoln of Cohasset, Timothy Travers of Whitman and Nicholas Russo of Hull. They will be discussing regionalization of fire services, changes and trends in fire fighting, safety tips and fire prevention.

The Pierson to Person show is broadcast live from the studio of Continental Cablevision, Gannett Rd., No. Scituate. The show airs on Channel 53 in Hingham and Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset. The public is welcome to be part of the studio audience.

For information call Robert Belliveau at 545-2500.

World's End is topic

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will meet at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday Feb. 22 at St. Stephen's Parish. Coffee will be served at 9 a.m. Visitors are welcome.

The guest speaker will be Tom Foster, South District Regional Director of The Trustees of Reservations. He will provide an overview of the 75 properties throughout the state and focus on the management of World's End Reservation.

Quilt show benefit

A quilt show and luncheon sponsored by the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Avenue, Cohasset, will be held March 5 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Featured will be 40-50 handmade quilts from private collections and the Cohasset Historical Society. Following the luncheon a talk will be presented by Penny Redfield entitled "Two Cohasset Quilts."

Penny has done extensive research on two Cohasset Album quilts, circa 1860 and how they reflect the happenings of their times.

The luncheon will include a choice of shrimp or vegetable souffles, salad, rolls and an elaborate dessert cart.

A limited number of tickets are available from the church office or by calling 383-0345.

All proceeds will go to DOVE (DOmestic Violence Ended) a shelter for abused women and children.

Recital at St. Stephen's

Peter Sykes, director of music at the First Church Congregational in Cambridge will perform an organ recital at 4 p.m. Sunday Feb. 13 at St. Stephen's Church, 16 Highland Ave.

The recital is part of a series of musical events featuring regional professional organists and the church's three manual organ.

Sykes is on the faculty of the Longy School of Music in Cambridge and plays keyboard for the Handel and Haydn Society and Boston Baroque.

A donation of $6, $4 students and seniors, will be received at the door.

Amateur gardeners to meet

The Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will meet at 7 p.m. Tuesday Feb. 15 at the home of Mrs. Edi Finegan. Mrs. Sue Fone and Mrs. Connie Kurtz w serve as co-hostesses.

After the regular meeting, the topic of the program will be "How Does Your Garden Grow?"

Refreshments will be served.

Free spring planting guide

The Norfolk County Conservation District is sending its newspaper "Let's Get Growing" which lists planting locations and growing habits of many plants grown in the area.

The Norfolk County Conservation District is a non-profit, volunteer group working toward the preservation of natural resources. To receive the spring planting newspaper, send a 29 cent postage stamp to the Norfolk County Conservation District, 400 Main St., Spring Planting, Walpole, 02081 before Feb. 28.

No decision yet on harbor pier proposal

By Barry Svriuga
Mariner correspondent

No decision was reached this week on a proposal by Margin Street resident Peter Roy to build a private recreational dock in Cohasset Harbor.

Instead, the conservation commission scheduled a special meeting for Tuesday, March 22 to hear the proposal.

The commission was forced to postpone its review of the plans because Roy's engineer, who has been in charge of the project since in 1990, was unable to attend Tuesday's meeting. The continuation will also allow the harbor committee to hear Roy's proposal at its March 3 meeting.

Roy has proposed building an L-shaped recreational pier and floating dock system that would be capable of mooring two 45-foot boats. The first section of dock, which would be attached to a 23-foot access ramp, would be 66 feet long. The dock perpendicular to it would extend another 72 feet.

Funds don't add up for schools' DARE-like program

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Cohasset's proposed new DARE-like program isn't quite DARE-like enough for one state agency.

The schools couldn't qualify for a $14,000 grant last week because the Massachusetts Criminal Justice Council is only authorized to award grants to official DARE programs.

DARE — Drug Abuse Resistance Education — is a popular health education program that involves having a uniformed police officer conduct a 17-hour curriculum over half a school year usually to six graders.

Scituate has had a DARE program in its schools for about five years. Hingham was awarded a $12,000 state grant last week to start a DARE program in that town.

Cohasset's request was initially granted which put Police Chief Brian Noonan on an emotional roller coaster. He was told by the state that the schools had been awarded the grant Friday — then on Monday, he learned the award was withdrawn when it was determined that the program wasn't actually DARE, Noonan said.

Cohasset's schools' DARE-like program is called PALS for Wellness (Police Assisting Local Schools) and would involve more age levels and incorporate a broader curriculum than DARE would, Health Education Director Michael Gill said.

"Basically we developed our own program that does things we feel are important to our community," Gill said.

Additional goals of PALS include identifying risk factors that contribute to youthful abuse of alcohol, tobacco and other drugs; and using outside agencies like the police in addressing topics such as body safety, conflict resolution and

Town cemetery access road hits road block

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The owner of three house lots on Red Fox Lane, a cul de sac off Rte. 3A, had a shock recently.

He picked up the paper and discovered that next month Cohasset town meeting voters will be asked to approve a potential easement over 150-feet of his property as a possible access road to a new town cemetery.

There was only one problem: no one asked him about it.

In a letter to selectmen, Red Fox Lane owner David G. Mitchell said he is against having an access road to a cemetery through his property.

"I would ask each member of the board to consider how they would feel having a funeral procession driving in and out of their private driveway — not to mention the devastating impact this would have on their property values," he said.

Mitchell explained that Red Fox Lane is not a road built to subdivision standards and is merely a private driveway which has a paved width of 15 ft.

"The driveway was constructed only to provide access to three house lots," he said.

Mitchell said "it is extremely difficult for two cars to ever pass by each other on Red Fox Lane as constructed; it would be impossible for hundreds of cars to go to and from a cemetery using our driveway."

Mitchell and his representative Jim Rader of Rader Properties, said they were perplexed at how the item could be placed on the town warrant without their having been informed.

Glenn Pratt of the Cemetery Study Committee said his committee had to seek an opinion from town counsel first to see if it could talk with the land-owner without town meeting authorization. And because the committee must go through

When it comes to good sports, summer is 'round the corner

By Lorraine Palmer
Mariner correspondent

Amid the snow and bitter cold, the recreation commission is thinking warmer thoughts, with plans for a May concert on Governor's Island, the Easter Egg Hunt, Harbor Fest sand castles, and policy changes regarding the summer playground program.

With the American Federation of Musicians, the Commission decided to help finance a May 15 concert on Governor's Island in celebration of the ribbon-cutting of the newly renovated Light keeper's Association. Upstairs in the old gate-keepers house there are now two apartments and the downstairs will be used for functions and other community events.

Harbor Fest has been set for Thursday, June 16 through Sunday, June 19. The sand castle contest, a Harbor Fest tradition since 1975, will be Friday afternoon, June 17 at Sandy Beach.

"The kids love it, it's a good thing," Cohasset recreation director John M. Worley said. There was talk of busing the children from school to Sandy Beach for the contest, since they will still be in school.

Cohasset's week

Roberts pleads guilty

William D. Roberts, Sr. plead guilty to federal arson charges before Judge Robert Keaton in U. S. District Court, Feb. 10, Police chief Brian W. Noonan said.

Roberts was indicted in August on arson charges following an intense 15 month investigation of an early morning fire April 17, 1992 at the former Roberts Food Mart, a convenience store on Route 3A in Cohasset, by the Cohasset Police and the federal bureau of Alcohol Tobacco and Firearms.

The fire caused an estimated $150,000 in damage. No one was injured in the fire.

Roberts, a former Scituate resident, had been incarcerated in the Plymouth House of Correction awaiting trial. He was arrested Dec. 24, 1993 by U. S. marshalls regarding probation violations in Dighton, Noonan said.

Noonan said Roberts will be sentenced April 21. The arson statute carries a maximum penalty of ten years and a maximum fine of $250,000.

"Arson's a tough case to prove," Noonan said. "But witnesses came forward and we felt very confident going to trial."

Noonan praised the work of Cohasset police and federal officers in investigating the case.

Festival gets new name

This year's South Shore Art Festival/Harborfest June 17-19 will be called 'Festival on the Common' to accommodate all aspects of the annual event which has burgeoned to include an annual Strawberry Festival and Chowderfest, festival chairman Rhonda Myers said.

The popular event attracts upwards of 10,000 people.

Selectmen approved use of the common for the Festival on the Common at their board meeting Monday.

Square dedication slated

Sunday, April 10 the George H. Mealy American Legion Post will sponsor an official dedication of the P.O.W./M.I.A. Square at the intersection of Depot Court and N. Main St.

A parade is also planned pursuant to the ceremonies.

Several months ago, selectmen approved the Legion's request to place a sign honoring all P.O.W.s and M.I.A.s at the Square. Post Commander Thomas Wigmore said the sign will be installed once the snow clears.

Selectmen granted permission Monday for the Legion to close Depot Court to traffic from 1 to 3 p.m. that day for the ceremonies.

Cat Dam to be opened

Selectmen approved opening Cat Dam, between Little Harbor and the inner harbor for the months of February and March.

The board delayed definitively scheduling any further openings until interested citizens on both sides of the issue explain their views at the board's March 7 meeting.

Doyon said there are two schools of thought: those who prefer to see high water and the tidal gates closed; and those who want the inner harbor flushed to help control mosquitos and midges.

The green algae which grows in April and May is an ugly site when the water is lowered, selectmen noted.

Thanks to SAFE, senator

Selectmen will send a letter to the grass-roots group, S.A.F.E. (Stop Any Further Expansion), and state Sen. Brian McDonald (D-Weymouth) for their efforts in arranging for the meeting with state officials on the Final Environmental Impact Report on the proposed expansion of the Cohasset Heights Landfill.

More than 250 local citizens from Cohasset, Hingham and Hull attended the forum held last week at the Cohasset High School auditorium.

Unemployment is down

There was good news to report as Cohasset's unemployment rate dipped in December.

According to the state Department of Employment and Training, Cohasset's unemployment rate for December, 1993 was 2.8 percent, lower than 3.4 percent rate reported the previous month.

In December, 105 Cohasset residents received unemployment compensation from a total local labor force of 3,766.

State Commissioner Nils L. Nordberg announced that the Massachusetts unemployment rate for January was 7.2 percent. The national rate was 6.7 percent.

Unemployment figures for municipalities lag a month behind the state numbers.

"This is the first month of employment data using the redesigned Current Population Survey," said Nordberg. "Federal and regional tests of the new questionnaire and computerized collection technologies for the past year and half indicated that rates would be higher with the new survey."

Waste bans in effect

Citizens utilizing the Cohasset Recycling Transfer Facility are reminded that recycling is mandatory. Newspapers, corrugated cardboard, magazines, white office paper, computer paper, glass, metal cans, plastic bottles with a "2" on the bottom, scrap metal, batteries, tires, waste oil and yard waste must be recycled.

Users of the Recycling Transfer Facility are urged to keep all yard waste and recyclable glass out of the general rubbish so the town will avoid any potential penalties in the future. Please assure that glass is clean prior to recycling as there are no facilities for washing glass at the Recycling Transfer Facility.

Burning season is here

Residents can burn brush, cane, and driftwood between the hours of 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. through May 1.

Anyone planning to burn should call the fire department's business number at 383-0616 each day and leave their name and address.

Burning of grass, leaves, and hay is not allowed because they cause too much smoke, Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said.

RTF permits required

Cohasset residents are required to have a current permit for the recycling transfer facility. No one will be allowed to use the facility without a current permit affixed to the vehicle in the proper location.

Town election races begin in earnest

In what could be one of the more exciting town elections in recent years, races for seats on the school committee, board of selectmen, water commission, board of health and housing authority begin in earnest this week.

Peter Pratt, a former water commissioner, will try to unseat long-time selectman Rocco F. Laugelle. Pratt is the son of Burtram Pratt, a former selectmen and president of the Cohasset Historical Society.

The school committee features a four-way race for two seats on that board. Owen O'Malley, Daniel S. Evans, JoAnne T. Chittick, and James C. Kirk will compete for the seats held by Barbara Bliss and Russ Reidy, who are not seeking re-election.

Alix White, who is president of S.A.F.E., a grass-roots group opposed to the Cohasset Heights Landfill, will challenge incumbent Robert V. Davenport for a seat on the board of health.

Dean Rizzo will try to unseat planning board member William Good who is up for re-election.

Housing authority member Joanne Young Nawn will be opposed by Mary N. Grassie.

Frederick R. Koed and Mark B. Bell will compete for one seat on the water commission. Incumbent James Sheerin will not seek a third term.

Unopposed candidates include: Raimund D. Vanderweil for re-election to the sewer commission; Shelanne S. Durkin for re-election to the recreation commission; Michael C. Patrolia for re-election to the board of assessors; Agnes McCann and Patience Towle for re-election to the board of library trustees and Anne Bowdoin and June S. Hubbard are seeking their first terms on the library trustees.

Candidates make announcements for April 2 election. See page 10.

Timeless fashions come out of the closet

By Lorraine Palmer
Mariner correspondent

Joanne Ford, a member of the Historical Society costume committee, lays out one of the 19th century dresses - gently so as not to damage the delicate cloth. Members of the committee observe the procedure. (J. Paul MacDonald photo)

Deciding what to wear in the morning for the modern 20th century woman sometimes seems like an impossible chore. Imagine living in the late 19th century when a woman had to make that decision three or four times a day.

Changing costumes for every occasion, be it for breakfast, lunch, tea time or receiving in the evening, was a fashion must among the cultured well-to-do, and getting into these costumes was even more of a chore.

The costume committee of the Cohasset Historical Society held its first hands-on workshop Feb. 15, featuring American women's fashions of the 19th century.

Costume committee chairman Martha Hurtig explained that the goal of the committee, now that they have finished documenting all the dresses on computer, is restoration. The condition of the dresses is not very good, and it is important that every dress gets stabilized because each one is a treasure not to be lost, she explained. "Once it goes, we'll never get it back again," she said.

There are 500 costumes in the collection, which also includes over 1,000 accessories such as shoes, hats and bonnets, and parasols, Hurtig noted.

All of the items have been donated by Cohasset residents. Some of the original owners actually lived in Cohasset and others were brought to Cohasset through relatives over the years, Hartshorne explained.

One of the dresses displayed was donated by the Towers, one of Cohasset's oldest families. "The Tower Family has been very generous with their donations to the collection," said Hartshorne.

The Cumner Family, who are relatives of Hartshorne, donated a blue silk checkerboard dress from 1860.

Committee members Billie Berents and Jo Ford, divided the presentation of the dresses into the early and later years.

The fashions women wore were dictated by the times in which they lived. During times of social upheaval, the wives of wealthy business men stayed at home most of the time. The fashionable look was very delicate and modest. Women turned away from wearing rogue and preferred the pallid look, achieved by drinking vinegar. Since the women did not get out much, the fashions were extremely restrictive, because they didn't need to worry about moving about too much.

Between 1867- 1874 bustle dresses gave women what was known as a "Grecian bend" silhouette, with the head and upper body forward and bottom part pushed back. The bustle was criticized during the Aesthetic Movement for its unnatural shape and a new style came into play between 1875-1882, which tightly shaped the body for a more "natural" look.

The bustle made a come back between 1883-1890 and was then replaced by the "hourglass figure," voluminous skirts and huge sleeves with an emphasis on the bosom. It was remarked that women, through their fashions, grew up with the century. They went from being innocent and modest to cultured and both mentally and physically matured.

Fashion has a way of telling a story. It is hard to believe that a hundred years from now, 20th century fashions will tell the story of our times. Another goal the costume committee has is collecting clothing from the modern look so that one day they too will be looked upon as antiques. It was suggested that a donation of a lobster man's suit that would be put on today would be a treasure for the collection, since lobsters are one of Cohasset's main industries.

Fashions come and go so easily that they will not be remembered if they are not preserved. Some may say the "Grunge Look" is a fashion worth forgetting, but it too has become a part of America's fashion history.

No decision yet on harbor pier proposal

The project would also involve dredging the harbor to seven feet below it's current depth.

Roy first filed a similar proposal in 1990, but his request for two large docks capable of mooring four 50-foot boats was defeated. The commission ruled Tuesday that in order to make a recommendation on the new plan, Roy's lawyers must refile up-to-date studies on the effects of the dock.

While Charles Humphreys, Roy's attorney, agreed to refile pertinent information, he resisted the board's plea to have the area thoroughly restudied.

"It's an ambitious private undertaking," Humphries said. "It can be studied to the point of absurdity."

But commission member Tom Callahan insisted that the board is entitled to current information.

"If we want it reviewed, it's our perogative," he said.

The commission is concerned with what lies in the material that would be dredged from the harbor floor. When the original proposal was made, one initial test showed a trace amount of a PCB.

Commission member Veneta Robuck declared her intent to bring in an outside consultant to help the commission better understand the project and any environmental problems that might result. That plan was endorsed by the remaining members of the board. The project applicant is required to pay for such consultants.

Harbormaster Shawn Kelly said he does not consider the proposal to be a hindrance to marine traffic in the area, noting there are only a few cradles from the yacht club nearby.

"He's using a section of the harbor that pretty much couldn't be used for anything else," Kelly said. "I hope you can operate a boat that big going through that minefield."

Kelly also said that because the Army Corps of Engineers was due to dredge the harbor in the winter of 1994-95, tacking on an additional dredging project during that time would not be a problem. While Humphreys estimated Roy's project would take less than two weeks to dredge, the work could take longer because of the town's new bylaw governing this type of work.

Under the bylaw, dredging would only be allowed from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

the selectmen's office to get permission to talk with town counsel — the process took time.

Selectmen asked the cemetery committee Monday to investigate other potential accesses to the proposed town cemetery so they could have all the facts to present to town meeting.

One potential access is through the Stop and Shop rear parking lot (where the loading dock is).

Cemetery planners had rejected an entrance off Rte. 3A because the access road would have to cross 70 feet of wetlands.

The proposed cemetery road off Red Fox Lane would be 450 feet from the nearest house in the development.

Susan Brander, who is considering buying one of the lots in the cul de sac, said she doesn't object to abutting a cemetery but would be opposed to the access road on Red Fox Lane.

We must all realize that people are dying and dying fast. We are running out of space.'

— Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle

"I would not want my child on his tricycle having to watch out for hearses," she said.

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle said time was of the essence.

"We must all realize, people are dying and dying fast. We are running out of space," he said.

Selectmen said the town will run out of cemetery space at Woodside and Beechwood cemeteries in three to five years.

Town meeting voters will also be asked to authorize borrowing for up to $150,000 to develop the new cemetery which will be on about 10 acres of town-owned land between Stop and Shop and Red Fox Lane.

Funds don't add up

violence prevention, Gill said.

Noonan has pushed for a DARE or similar program since being named police chief a year ago. He has been working with Gill in developing the PALS program. The schools have resisted DARE, opting for a tailor-made program to fit Cohasset. School officials say the schools' current health program already covers some of the same area as DARE.

Noonan said his goal is simple.

"All we want is to get a uniformed officer in the schools," he said. "We want to develop a rapport with the kids."

Gill said plans are to use about $3,000 from monies the schools received from the cigarette tax to enact a scaled down PALS program this year.

gram will extend from July 6 through Aug. 20. On that day there will be a family cookout, so that the parents will get involved in the program finale.

The commission voted to change a policy that will widen the cut-off dates for the program's different age groups, making them better suited for all the children involved. The commission agreed there is too wide an age range in the groups.

There have been problems in the past, such as having to send children home when they are too young for the group Worley explained, and that is something that can be avoided.

The age cut-off for the 3 and 4-year-olds program is now March 1,1991 through Aug. 31, 1989. The half-day 5-year-olds program is now Sept. 1, 1989 through March 1, 1988. The full-day 5 through 12-year-old program is now March 1, 1988 through Aug. 31, 1981.

February vacation programs for the Joseph Osgood School and the Deer Hill School will be held between Tuesday, Feb. 22 and Thursday, Feb. 25 from 9 am to 3 pm, for boys and girls ages 4 to12. Pre-registration is required by Feb. 17. Call 383-6791.

Chairman Dick Barrow, vice chairman Steve Endris, secretary Ted Carroll, Peter Laugelle, Shelanne Durkin, Tom Wigmore and John Worley, attended Tuesday's meeting.

around town

by Sallyann Chatterton

❑ Saturday, Feb. 5, Gerard and Katherine Stanton celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary.

Gerard and Katherine renewed their wedding vows at a 2 p.m. Mass, celebrated by Father Keohane at St. Anthony's Church. Readings and prayers were offered by their granddaughters, Katherine and Kristine Barker, and Andrea and Brianna Stanton.

Patrick and Matthew Hynes, their grandsons, presented the gifts.

Unfortunately, Gerard's best man, Leo Fleming, was ill and unable to attend, but Katherine's matron of honor, Mary McNamara Dunn, was present.

Due to World War II, many of their relatives and friends, including Katherine's brother, Frank Magullion, were unable to attend the wedding, so they had a particularly good time at this party! Almost a re-enactment of the real thing.

A luncheon followed at Kimball's Restaurant. Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, an old family friend, presented Katherine and Gerard with proclamations from both the Massachusetts House and Senate. Son Bob Stanton announced that, in honor of their parents' anniversary as well as the family's appreciation to the town of Cohasset, the Stanton children (Kate Barker, Jerry, Mary Hynes and Bob) are creating a scholarship to be available to the child of any town employee.

Quite a busy weekend with all of the comings and goings! Congratulations to Gerard and Katherine!

❑ Jennifer M. Piante made the Dean's List at Tufts University! Jennifer, the daughter of Pat and Maria Piante, is a 1991 graduate of Cohasset High School, and is a junior at Tufts majoring in English.

Besides her writing and literature, Jennifer is active in the theatre and will be directing her own production March 10, 11 and 12. What a busy gal; congrats to you, Jennifer!

❑ Cohasset Hockey Boosters and co-captains Mike Riley and Charlie Endris hosted a pot luck dinner last Sunday at the Riley home on Jerusalem Rd.

Some 70 parents, CHS varsity and junior varsity team members and coaches feasted on such delicacies as Mary Wigmore's spicy chicken wings, Joni Reynold's lasagna, Ann Bunstein's spaghetti with cream cheese and chives and desserts to die for! This festive dinner should fuel a few goals for the finale of the CHS hockey season. Sounds yummy, don't you wish you were a hockey player or parent?

❑ You know, there are so many nice people in this town of ours, actually too numerous to mention. BUT, Bob Driscoll gets our vote this week, he and his plow helped so many people out of these tremendous snowstorms, just out of the goodness of his heart!! And with that huge smile on his face! Thank you Bob.

❑ Hope everyone is watching the USA hockey team at the Winter Olympics! Jim Campbell, the son of former locals Whitey and Nancy (Tower) Campbell, is an active member of the team! Jim is doing well, here's hoping that he comes home with the gold!

❑ We hope that Dianne O'Loughlin is feeling better as she reads this! She was out of town, visiting a sick relative, when she slipped and fell, breaking three ribs and puncturing a lung! We hear at last report that all is well, but cannot wait to see her around town again! Hasn't this been a "lovely" winter?

❑ Nothing is nicer than when a man gets his due recognition, and Gerard Keating got his through the Mariner last week! All those who read what he has done throughout his life in Cohasset probably could not believe it, he's that kind of gentleman! And a busy one! We are honored to know and love you, sir!

❑ Speaking of honors, Thomas G. Turner received the highest honor bestowed upon a volunteer scouter, the Silver Beaver Award. Applause, Applause!

❑ Be sure to watch Pierson to Person tonight on Channel 3 and 53, he will have the South Shore fire chiefs on and we will bet that they will give us a lot of tips on how to keep a safe house and a safe life. Tune in.

❑ If you don't see Betsey Detwiler at Buttonwood Books, don't be too surprised! She has become a grandmother to Alandar Kathryn Detwiler of Pembroke, who was born on Jan. 4. Alandar joins her brothers Forrest and Harry, and mom and dad, Laurie and Jonathan, are thrilled. You can bet that the Reverend and Mrs. Habiby are thrilled too. Have a great time with that baby.

A belated happy Valentine's Day to all ...

Please call with your latest event.

New position in proposed budget

By Sean P. Sweeney
Cohasset Mariner

At its Feb. meeting, the school committee reported that its final budget proposal for fiscal year 1995 will be $6,476,084, a 5.65 percent increase over this year's budget.

This proposed budget will be presented to the advisory committee Feb. 8, and then to selectmen Feb. 14.

The committee has included a position of curriculum coordinator in this proposed budget. At the close of the committee's meeting Jan. 27, committee members had not reached a consensus on whether the position would be included in the budget. Feb. 3, however, there was little doubt that the committee was in total agreement over its inclusion.

"I think that this represents a modest investment in order to articulate and coordinate curriculum in grades K through 6," said school Supt. Stephen Hart. The modest investment translates to a budget item of approximately $40,000.

Hart outlined the position in a draft job description for the committee members. The ideal candidate, according to Hart, will be someone with classroom teaching experience and an advanced degree in the curriculum area or a curriculum specialty area. Hart believes the position may attract someone who wants to get into the curriculum area or someone who wishes to become an elementary principal.

The position will encompass reading, language arts, mathematics, science and social studies. The broad range of subject areas represents a change in the scope of the position which was originally introduced as a language arts curriculum coordinator.

Hart envisioned the curriculum coordinator as having an overall view of curriculum in grades K through 6. It is expected the coordinator will focus on one subject area each year while still maintaining involvement in all subjects. Since the position is new, many of the coordinator's duties will be defined after the first few months.

"The curriculum coordinator will be in the schools co-teaching. This is not going to be a central office position," explained Hart. The coordinator will report to Hart in coordination with the principals at the Osgood and Deer Hill schools.

It is expected the coordinator will assist in the planning and execution of curriculum. It is hoped the coordinator will help prevent unnecessary review of previously-taught subject areas from one grade to the next. It is also expected that the curriculum coordinator will communicate with department heads at the junior/senior high school so the cohesive nature of curriculum continues at the upper grade levels.

The committees repeated that an additional bus driver will not be included in the proposed budget.

Supt. Hart also reported that preliminary bid information suggests it will be cheaper for the system to continue providing its own bus service rather than hiring a private company. It is expected the school committee will introduce a town meeting warrant article to cover the cost of purchasing a new bus.

With regard to technology purchases, the committee decided all purchases at the Osgood School should be directed at improving the technology lab, and will defer other purchases to a later budget. At the Deer Hill School, the committee has decided to spread purchases of equipment over two years.

Committee vice chairman Ralph Kidder repeated his continuing concerns about the extent to which computer equipment is being utilized as a tool in conjunction with curriculum. Committee members talked extensively about the availability of curriculum-based computer software and the desirability of purchasing such software. But they held off on making any commitment to purchasing any at this time.

Supt. Hart prepared four articles for inclusion in this year's warrant. They include an article seeking the money to remove oil tanks at the Osgood, Deer Hill and the junior/senior high schools; an article regarding town participation in the early retirement program under the Education Reform Act; an article seeking the money to install a wheelchair lift at the junior/senior high school, and an article seeking money for the purchase of a new school bus.

They're off!

Last year's town election was a real sleeper with only a single race for a seat on the board of library trustees.

But what a difference a year makes!

This year's April 2 town election includes races for seats on the board of selectmen, school committee, board of health, planning board, water commission, and the housing authority.

Two weeks ago, we reviewed the Cohasset Mariner's election policy. As the candidates gear up we're going to run through the details again quickly so we make ourselves perfectly clear.

This week interested candidates submitted photos and formal statements announcing their candidacies.

Next week, we will feature candidates' answers to the following 'Question of the Week.' Responses should be brief — no more than 200 words. Be specific, make every word count.

'What is the most important issue facing the town department (or board) you would like to represent? How will you make a difference?'

Candidates may reply by FAXing their replies to 617-837-4843 or 617-740-8955, or leaving them at Hennessy News in Cohasset Village, or mailing them to us, 165 Enterprise Dr., Marshfield 02050 by noon Tuesday. Be sure to leave enough time for mail delivery.

We will also publish a 'Candidates Corner,' but it is limited to a few lines from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fundraisers and the like.

The Mariner will not accept Letters to the Editor from candidates or letters endorsing candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues up until the March 24 issue before the election.

Candidates are encouraged to advertise their campaigns in The Mariner. Political advertisements must be prepaid and the deadline for those ads is 5 p.m. Friday. Candidates who want a proof of their ad must submit it by 5 p.m. Thursday for the following week's publication. Preferred placement (choosing a particular page on which is ad is to run) carries a 25 percent surcharge. For advertising information, call Jim Horvath, 1-800-649-6661.

If you have any questions, please call us at the Hingham office at 749-0031.

Happy running!

Network for housebound?

letters

The following is an open letter to Cohasset residents.

Dear Cohasset Residents:

Recent appeals to assist the elderly and handicapped who have been "housebound" due to the severe winter prompt me to inquire whether there are those among you interested in a community service project.

Concept: To network the "housebound" with local stores (ex: food/pharmacies) and banks to permit them to access availability/price information, order, and pay automatically with free delivery service.

If I receive a sufficient response, I will schedule a preliminary meeting and we'll go from there.

Jim Kirk running for school committee

Jim Kirk, candidate for the Cohasset School Committee, plans to use his experience in education and business to promote a standard of excellence and accountability for the Cohasset schools, for the benefit of the students and the community. As a homeowner and a parent of a first grader, a high school senior, and a CHS graduate now attending Middlebury College, Kirk believes in enhancing the value of our public schools.

Kirk graduated cum laude from Harvard, in three years, with a degree in Biochemistry, and received an MA in Education from Stanford University, specializing in science curriculum development. After teaching AP Biology and Chemistry in Hingham, he worked as a science education consultant. His 20-year career in business includes positions in innovative product development, marketing, and management. Kirk is currently vice president of Eidetics, Inc., a consulting and research company specializing in health education issues. As a businessman, Jim Kirk believes in performance and accountability and says, "The schools should do more and spend smarter."

As chairman of the regional school district planning committee, Jim Kirk believes Cohasset schools can leverage their resources by leading cooperative efforts with other schools. As a longtime PSO volunteer, he promotes a supportive coalition of parents, community and schools. As a director of the Cohasset Education Foundation, he has developed strategies for corporate/school partnerships. He believes the school committee would benefit from this experience, as well as his background in education and business.

Rizzo runs for planning board

Hello! My name is Dean Rizzo of 56 Spring St. and I am excited to announce my candidacy for the available position on the planning board. My wife Barbara Anglin and I have been residents of Cohasset for a year and a half. We both grew up in Quincy and have always admired the beauty and charm of this town.

I am a graduate of the University of Massachusetts with bachelor degrees in economics and sociology. I have been self-employed for the past seven years and currently own Aquarius Sunrooms Inc., located in Braintree. Aquarius Sunrooms distributes and installs various styles of sunrooms, conservatories, and greenhouses. In my involvement in the residential and commercial building and land development industry for the past seven years, I have attained a wide array of experience working with clients and cities and towns regarding such issues as building permits, zoning variances, DEQE, and conservation guidelines. My experience has shown me the value of compassion, fairness, and compromise when dealing with the many delicate issues regarding building and planning.

The purpose of the planning board is vital to the town for many reasons. As stated in the zoning bylaw of the Town of Cohasset, we are responsible to "...promote the health...and welfare of the inhabitants of Cohasset by lessening congestion in the streets;...to conserve the value of land and buildings including the conservation of natural resources...; to preserve and protect the outstanding characteristics and natural beauty of the town with due consideration given to to the geography, topography, and history of Cohasset." These are important commitments which cannot be taken lightly. I also feel that "due consideration" should be taken in regard to the hard working people in the town. The planning board should not be an adversary to the people. The planning board must understand the importance of compassion and fairness as it affects all people in the town. I believe in change and I do not believe in the philosophy that if a law has been on the books for the past seventy-five years that it should remain a law because it would seem unfair to change it now. Rules and laws must be allowed to change as society changes. What made sense in the past may not make sense for the future. I want to help Cohasset grow into the 20th century without altering its uniqueness and beauty. I do not believe a third major supermarket in the town is the proper direction we should be taking. In the long run, I do not feel that this area can support three supermarkets. I think many things should be considered before we jump to save twenty cents on a gallon of milk.

If you would like to share your opinions with me, please do not hesitate to write or call me at 383-2284. I would like to thank you and I am looking forward to the opportunity to discuss your concerns and opinions.

Chittick runs for school board

I have decided to run for School Committee because I am committed to working for a level of excellence in Cohasset's schools. My three children have acquired a solid educational background in this system, and I would like to help ensure that our public schools provide a good foundation for every child in Cohasset. Because I believe that the only way to achieve desired results is to be involved, in a positive way, I am willing to give time as a School Committee member, and I'm able to be in Cohasset during the day to do this job.

our School Committee has people with backgrounds in teaching, business, and administration; I can contribute my knowledge of curriculum issues, especially language arts. My experience of 25 years in educational publishing has impressed upon me the importance of good writing skills and the ability to communicate clearly. Another contribution I can make is a common sense approach. As the mother of three teenagers, Julianna, 21, Ben, 19 and Chloe, 16, I admire young people, respect their abilities, and believe in nurturing their potential. I also realize that educating children with individual needs is a difficult and demanding process.

I have been involved in school issues for over 15 years, supporting established programs, building new ones, and bringing community resources into the schools. I understand that achieving a high level of quality in the schools requires cooperation among administrators, teachers, parents, and taxpayers. Our demands and expectations are great, while financial resources are limited. I would like to work as part of the School Committee as it continues to find creative ways, within the reality of a tight budget, to provide a quality education for the children of Cohasset. If you are interested in contributing to the Committee to Elect JoAnne Chittick, contact: Chairman, Cliff Mitman (383-9766); Managers, Ruth Wilcox (383-1827) and Monica McKenney (383-1338); or Treasurer, Sarah Pease (383-1406).

Murray seeks 10th term

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R) Third Plymouth District will seek re-election to the Massachusetts House of Representatives.

Rep. Murray has served nine terms in the House of Representatives. Her first district consisted of Cohasset and Scituate. Murray has represented Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull for the past eight terms. This is the district which her father, the late Nathaniel Hurwitz, served as a state representative. They are the first father-daughter combination in the legislature.

"I was raised to believe that a legislator's obligation is to the people in the district. My commitment has always been to the people who elect me," Representative Murray said.

Murray serves on and is the ranking member of the Committee on Counties and Local Affairs. She is a member of the House Ethics Committee. Membership on the Ethics Committee is by election in Party Caucus. She has also served on the Committee on Human Services and Elderly Affairs and the Committee on Taxation.

Murray, as one of two women with the longest service in the House, co-sponsored the original and the latest Child Abuse Bill. She co-sponsored the Homemaker Bill, and other issues for women, such as abused women, and breast cancer among others. She has filed legislation for a sex abuse registry and to lower the age for a person convicted of abuse to the age of 12 years.

Mary Jeanette said, "I have supported decreases in taxes, mandated sentences, and no-early parole time for convicted criminals. I have consistently voted to return more local aid to the cities and towns."

Financial aid info at library

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (D-Cohasset, Hingham, Hull) has distributed the "Handbook on Admission and Financial Aid at Independent Colleges in Massachusetts" to the town libraries.

The handbook informs students and parents how and when to apply for financial aid. It describes the state and federal programs and has admissions information and application deadlines.

Photographer Lynne Layman (l) was the guest of honor last Saturday at a reception which marked the opening of her exhibit at the Paul Pratt Library. Her photography featured scenes of a United Germany. Joining Lynne at the reception were Joanne Chittick and Sue Killilea. The exhibit will be at the library through April.

New video tool in class

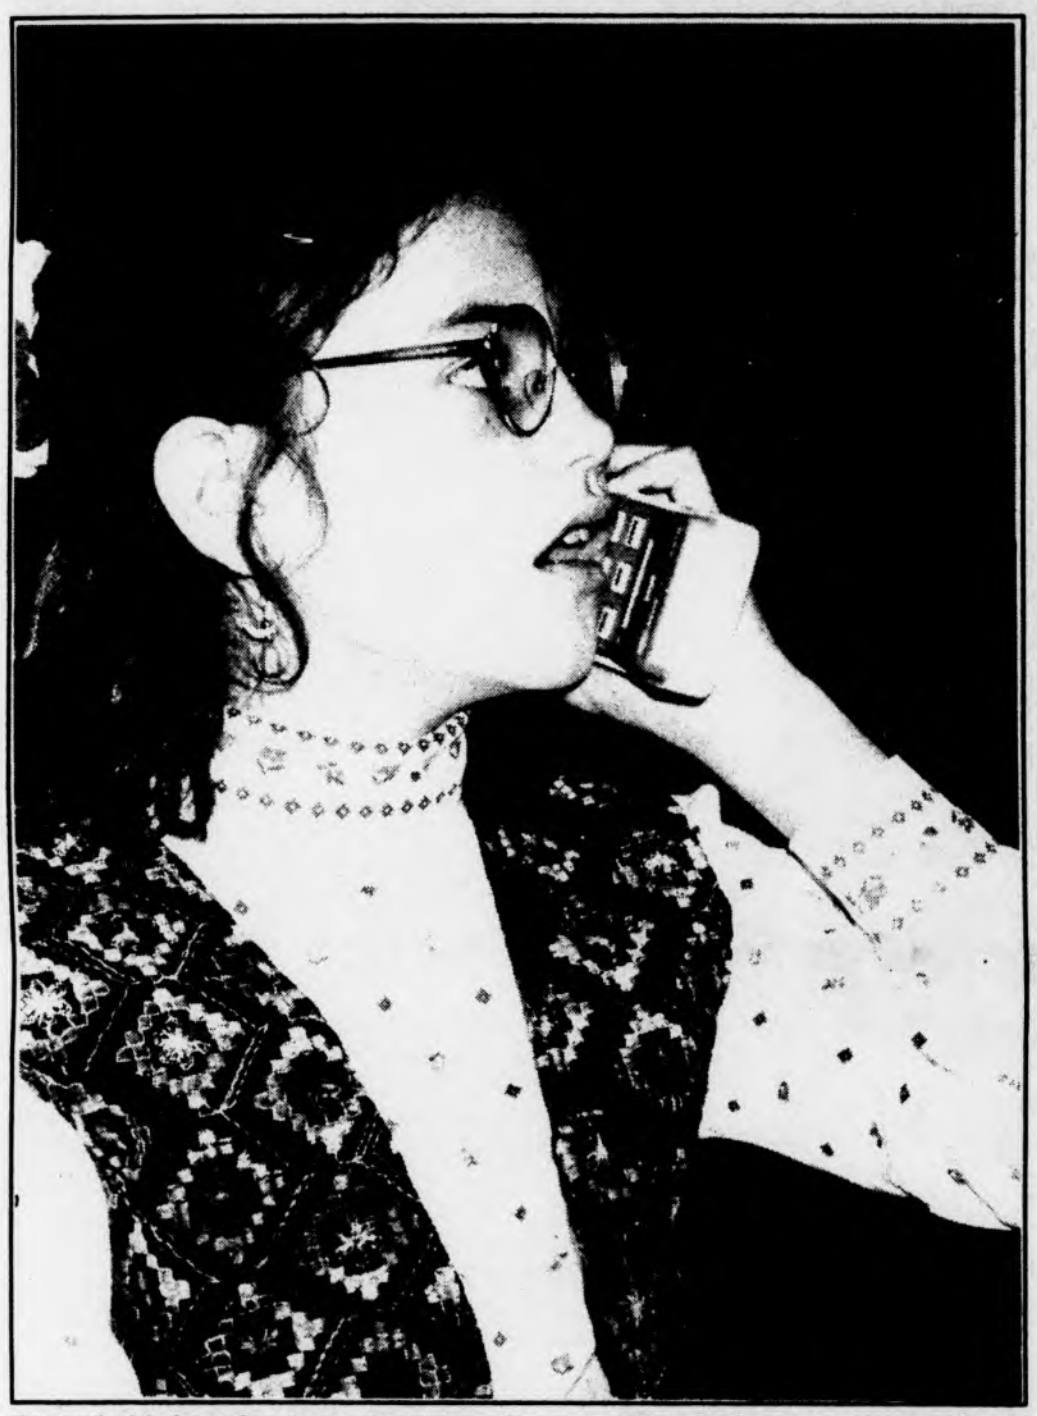
Students talk back — and that's just fine

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

A roomful of kids sat on the edge of their seats, staring at the television. But this time, the character onscreen was paying attention to them, too. For the first time in Cohasset schools, children are interacting with television in a school program.

Third graders at Osgood School took part in a five-week oceanography series sponsored by MCET Massachusetts Cooperative for Educational Telecommunications — a Cambridge-based interactive television network. Jonathan Bird of the Oceanic Research Group lectured on the undersea food chain and took questions intermittently from students across the country via telephone.

"I learned a lot of stuff that I didn't know. There were different sessions about different things. He was funny, but we learned, too," said third grader Matthew Corry.



Osgood third grader Anna-Jane Murphy uses the telephone to communicate with her video oceanography instructor, Jonathan Bird. Bird hosted a five-week television program broadcast to schools across the country. He answered students' questions via telephone during his lectures.

Unlike a typical classroom video tool, MCET's program makes students a part of the program.

"It draws their attention because they know they're going to be called," said Donna Dunbar, IMC director at Osborn Elementary School. "This interactive is great because it involves them. They hear their question over the line. These kids are so involved."

Anna-Jane Murphy was a lucky third grader to speak to Bird on camera. She asked whether manatees travel in herds or schools. (Rarely, they do, he answered.)

"It was kind of embarrassing because I've never heard my voice on T.V. before," she said.

Other topics include animal tracking at Drumlin Farm, a visiting artist series and a meet-the-author feature, but Osgood students responded well to Bird's oceanography classes which he called "The Incredible Journey."

"He was about the best presentation so far," Dunbar said. "He started out with the low part of the food chain — he stimulated them enough so they could ask a question. As long as it stimulates some thought and some interest, it has value. I've been teaching for some years and I've seen some things come and go. This is interactive."

MCET has brought this technology to Massachusetts schools for about four years. Recently, the program went nationwide, serving 37 states. Several state education departments have contracted with MCET for the entire school system.

About half the MCET budget ($5.5 million) is funded through the Massachusetts legislature and the rest comes from subscriptions and corporate funding, said executive director Inabeth Miller. While subscriptions to the service make up a small portion of MCET's $11 million dollar budget, Miller hopes subscriptions will grow in the coming years.

"We hope in another year we'll be in several millions," she said.

The number of subscriptions already sold indicates how the technology is permeating the nation's school systems. Faculty notice the broad changes in technology more than the children.

"This is the first time I've ever experienced this," said Osgood third grade teacher Marian Atkinson. "It's mind-boggling to connect with someone who's right before your eyes. Children are born into this world of (video). It does not overwhelm them. It's been part of their working vocabulary."

The program connects to research reports the students will complete about the food chain.

Atkinson applied the technology to an old-fashioned research project and found the interactive video inspired her students to use other library resources. The video doesn't replace school resources, but enhances them.

"It adds dimension to be able to view all of this," Atkinson said. After her students watch a one-hour video program in the Osgood IMC, they turn to the CD-ROM encyclopedia and library books to continue their research.

"When they're excited about what's going on, they can stay working on their research," Dunbar explained. But the program is not glorified television. Students need to learn to work with new forms of technology in order to cope with their world, she said.

"This is not a video kind of thing. This is the new technology. Because of the age they live in, they're going to have to be pretty savvy," said Dunbar.

But the interactive video will never take the place of hands-on field trips.

"I don't think anything can replace that," Atkinson said.

Teachers will take the initiative next month when they have their own teacher training program. The teachers will be able to watch the videos and when their number comes up, ask questions.

What happens at on early dismissal day?

Members of the Deer Hill School faculty used the Jan. 27 and Feb 3 early release days to work on theirprofessional development goals. This process will be ongoing throughout the year, culminating in in individual research projects presented to the entire faculty in May. This innovative approach to in-service time has teachers pursuing a wide variety of topics on early release days.

Six teachers are developing a teaching model called the One Computer Classroom. Hedrick Ellis, of Tom Snyder Productions, visited Deer Hill School and demonstrated how to incorporate the computer into the curriculum. The teachers working on this project are Ray Levine, Frank Deakin, Joann Magoun, Katherine Whitley, Larry Shultz and Margie Murphy.

The teachers at the Joseph Osgood School conducted parent conferences on Jan. 27 and Feb. 3.

No rest for tourney-bound wrestlers

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

He won't be having his wrestlers climbing stadium stairs, carrying a log on their backs like the fictional state champion in the movie "Vision Quest," but Cohasset head coach Torin Sweeney has every intention of putting his seven Division 3 state qualifiers through the ringer this week.

"Because of the competition next week," said Sweeney, "we have to wrestle really hard. Right now we're wrestling hard with good kids."

And Sweeney has pulled out all stops to get the best training partners for his grapplers. The Skippers worked out with Rockland and B.C. High on Tuesday, and '93 Division 2 State Champion Carver on Wednesday.

Sweeney said Cohasset's fifth-place finish at last weekend's Division 3 South Sectional at Foxboro was pretty much where he expected the club would wind up, if it wrestled well.

He was especially happy with the number of wrestlers who will be making the trip to Wilmington for the states this weekend.

"Based on what we lost last year, it's great to have that many go," Sweeney said.

Ryan Freeman led the way for the Skippers with his first-place finish in the 125-pound division. Freeman got off to a quick start with three pins in as many matches, before taking the finals on points, 6-3.

"It (final) sounds close, but he was in control the whole time," Sweeney said.

Freeman is the No. 2 seed in his weight class heading into the states.

Jeff Thompson (112) almost pulled off the biggest upset of the meet when he wrestled eventual winner Dan Kaul of Sharon to an 8-6 loss. Thompson had Kaul on the defense throughout the entire match, but couldn't put away the elusive wrestler.

"He had the No. 1 seed on his back," said Sweeney, "but he just couldn't pin him."

Third-place finisher Kevin Duffy (103) wound up with a 4-1 record for the meet with two pin victories. His brother, Brian, was fifth at 119 pounds.

Brandon Devoe was fourth in the 145-pound bracket, while Scott Theriault (152) and Andy Church (189) both finished second.

Theriault's road to the Division 3 states

Cohasset's Jeff Thompson is in complete control of Hanover's Scott Petit during the Skippers' 48-22 win. Thompson, who placed fifth in last weekend's Division 3 South Sectional in the 112-pound division, eventually pinned his Indian opponent.

Protulis nails all-around in season final

By Joe Reardon

Ruthann Sargent isn't expecting a miracle when her Cohasset High gymnastics team competes in the South Sectional meet, Saturday at Foxboro High School.

The Skippers' head coach knows there are teams in the South that have scored in the 130s during the dual-meet season, but Sargent is very much aware the co-champions of Pilgrim Conference 2 won't be joining the club this weekend.

"We can't pull ourselves up to 130," Sargent said.

It's as simple as that.

But the Skippers have been a goal-oriented squad all season and they accomplished what they set out to do. There's no reason to change the way they approach Saturday's meet.

"We are setting up a personal goal," said Sargent. "We're trying to hit in the 123-124 range. We've hit a 123.1 so we want to beat our best score. That's what we'll be pushing for."

Cohasset hardly had to push in its last two meets with ho-hum victories over Notre Dame (118.8-89) and Thayer Academy.

The Skippers swept first place in every individual event in both meets and took the top three in six.

Save for "Soldier of Fortune" magazine, it's probably safe to say figure skater Tonya Harding won't have a slew of endorsements coming her way once the Olympics end. But "Inside Edition" helped ease the blow just a little by offering an alleged $600,000 for a "tell-all" interview. "Playboy" has is also willing to put up $250,000 to show the world what she has under the hood.

A teary-eyed Harding tried to soften her crumbled image with a powder-puff piece in another interview, this time with Connie Chung. Chung was walking on eggs with Harding by asking nothing but marshmallow questions.

Harding might has well take the money "Inside Edition" and "Playboy" put up. For someone who isn't going to get any endorsements from Coke, Pepsi or Noxzema, an extra $850,000 is nothing to sneeze at.

Nancy Kerrigan, on the other hand, is set to be Disney's hottest commodity since The Little Mermaid.

What I'm waiting to see, though, is Harding reach out and give Kerrigan that loving hug she so desperately wants to give her rival. You can bet that act of "affection" won't be done in front of the thousands of reporters and photographers in Norway to cover Kerrigan...I mean the Olympics.

Oh, and as far as the actual figure skating competition is concerned, I believe this whole tiresome saga has affected each skater more than she knows. At least Kerrigan is surrounded by a supportive family and an entire country that adores her — Adam Oates included. Even some of the judges have commented that they loathe Harding, which leads one to believe Harding's chances for a completely objective score will go right out the proverbial window. Don't believe for a second favoritism is alive and well in Lillehammer.

Forget the gold medal Tonya. You should be happy with top-five finish and a not guilty verdict when you return to the states, although we all know better.

And don't think for a minute the judges won't remember back to the scene of Jan. 6 when Kerrigan was clutching her injured knee, sobbing, "why me." Kerrigan will get her share of sympathy points and wind up with a medal. But the gold is a long shot, even for America's new sweet heart.

"Tank" has been sunk.

Last Thursday night I attended sports trivia night at McCarthy's Pub in Hanson with my brother-in-law Jim and kicked some trivia butt.

"Tank" who is WBCN radio's sports guy, was the master of ceremonies at the pub and gave away Budweiser hats and T-shirts for correct answers to his questions.

Maybe it was the crowd or something in the water, but I was on fire. I answered the first question, "What college did Troy Aikman attend before transferring to UCLA?"-Oklahoma, and I was off and running.

Sharks attack

By Bob Hatch
Special to the Mariner

The Bay State Sharks Squirt Minor team continued its impressive tear through the Metropolitan Boston Hockey League as the team posted victories over two of the top clubs in the league. Both the Minuteman Flames and the Assabet Valley Patriots appear to be playoff bound, which means the Sharks could face one or both in the post-season.

First up were the Flames. In the first period, the Sharks played what many thought was the best period of hockey this team has ever played. The Sharks can hit and skate with the best of them. But what was most impressive in this game was the passing. It looked like the Sharks were playing keep away from the Flames. With the Flames chasing the puck, there were a number of scoring opportunities created. Brian Boyle (Hingham) found the range twice with help from his Hingham buddies, Pat Devine and Dave Saggese. Kenny Roche (So. Boston) scored once and assisted twice with some great stickhandling and passing from the point. Brain Lewis (Cohasset) finished the first period with a goal when he moved in through traffic and fired from 10 feet out.

The Sharks continued to dominate in the second period and ran the score to 5-1 when Boyle and Devine worked a pretty pass play back and forth and back again with Pat finishing it off with the goal.

The third period saw the Flames tighten things up with two quick goals, making the score 5-3. The Sharks regained control with a gutsy goaltending performance by Gabe Winer (Stoughton) and some great defensive work by Matt Bourassa (Somerset) and Scotty Sparks (Norwood). The Sharks wrapped up the scoring when Kenny Roche popped in his second of the day after some real hustle and muscle in the corner and behind the net by Slick Nick Dunn (Marstons Mills) and Scott McGinn (Hingham).

Next the Sharks faced-off against the always dangerous Assabet Valley Patriots. This was a defensive and goaltending gem. The Patriots had their opportunities but couldn't cash in. It was due to the aggressive forechecking of Greg Osborne (Stoughton) and Saggese, the relentless backchecking of Lewis and Dunn, the air-tight defense of Ryan Hatch (Hanover) and Sparks, the physical play of Roche and Garret Daigler (Hingham) and when all else failed goalie Winer's glove. Boyle gave the Sharks all they'd

I ended up winning two hats and six T-shirts. At one point, "Tank" shut me off and would not call on me. I simply gave the answers to Jim and he started to win some stuff.

However, we almost blew it on one question. "Tank" asked "Who was the first Celtic to score 40 points in a game?" I knew the answer was Bill Sharman and I told Jim. The crowd noise was building and he didn't hear me correctly.

"Sherman," he yelled after "Tank" called on him.

"Sharman, Bill Sharman," I quickly yelled to Jim.

"Um, I mean Sharman," Jim told "Tank".

Bam, another T-shirt.

The night was building towards the big prize, two Bruins tickets to the game against the LA Kings and Wayne Gretzky.

But "Tank" got cute and asked a dumb Gilligan's Island question seeking the Skipper's name on the show instead of a sports question. All I know about Gilligan's Island is that Mary Anne and Ginger were pretty hot. By the way the answer was Jonas something.

Needless to say, I did not win the Bruins freebies.

However, there will be other days and other sports trivia contests.

One more thing, "Tank" is really huge. We're talking four bills in the poundage department packed on a six foot frame.

He could run right over Patriot tackle Bruce Armstrong like he was a toy soldier.

How about that Temple coach John Chaney?

I've had to deal with a few wild basketball coaches and players in my time, (see last week's letters to the editor) but his actions take the cake.

Once again, we see a basketball coach who takes himself and the sport just a bit too seriously.

He threatened to kill UMass coach John Calipari at the post-game press conference for what? Arguing with the referees.

Or how about Indiana coach Bobby Knight kicking his son during a game after his boy made a bad pass in an Indiana blow out win?

Coaches at all levels should mellow out and enjoy life. You win a game or you lose a game. Big deal. In ten years, no one will even remember what happened?

Along with many other people, I think coaching is overated.

I once asked Silver Lake boys basketball coach Dick Arieta, who won the OCL title the past two years, what makes a good coach.

He answered very quickly.

"Good players."

Anthony McLaughlin of Norwell looks as though a recent illness hasn't slowed his game too much. A member of the Roger Williams University mens basketball squad, McLaughlin scored 10 points in his first game back, during a 76-65 loss to Eastern Nazarene on Feb. 1. McLaughlin is a major player for Roger Williams with a 15.1 average in 12 games. His highest scoring total this season was a 24-point outing against the Coast Guard Academy.

Locals Nancy Spring (Norwell) and Karen Callaghan (Hanover) continued to pile up the points on the basketball court for Curry College. Spring was the Lady Colonels' top scorer with 12 points in a 58-40 loss to Anna Maria on Feb. 1. Callaghan drained 19 points and added 12 rebounds and seven steals during a Feb. 3 loss to Wentworth, 52-46.

Curry is currently 8-8 overall and 3-6 in the Commonwealth Coast League.

Abington's Justin Murphy had a good day for himself in the alpine skiing event at the Bay State Games, held last weekend in Williamstown, Mass. Murphy finished sixth in a field of 62 finishers with a time of 1:35.85, a little over a minute behind winner Ben Johnson of Dalton, Mass.

In figure skating, Emily Cann of Rockland copped the bronze medal in the Ladies Artistic Solo 3, Age 12-14 Division.

(7.5) and Megan Pratt (7.3) swept the beam against Notre Dame. Pratt also won the uneven bars in 7.3, just in front of Lauren Genovese's 7.2.

Jodi Colwill placed second in the vault (7.7), and Tara Hettstrom and Maggie Goedecke tied for third with a 7.5 score. Erica Hettstrom and Pratt finished 2-3 on the floor exercise at 8.3 and 7.8 respectively.

Pratt (29.6) and Tara Hettstrom (28.8) wound up second and third in the all-around.

Sargent said Cohasset wasn't looking for a team-high score against non-league opponent Thayer, but rather wanted to feature the seniors, who were competing in their last home meet.

The move proved to be a good one as senior co-captains Kara Protulis and Aimee Mitchell finished 1-3 in 25.9 and 23.8 respectively.

Erica Hettstrom, Pratt and Christin Reynolds swept the bars and Kerry Dwyer set a personal best of 5.6. Pratt's sister, Carolyn, put on a strong performance in the beam as Colwill led the first of two sweeps.

Erica Hettstrom and Fiore followed in the beam, and Reynolds and Goedecke nailed down second and third in the vault. Caroline DeRose added a personal best of 5.6.

Cohasset dominated the floor exercise as Megan Pratt and Erica Hettstrom went 1-2, and Fiore and Genovese tied for third.

The top-teams at the South Sectional will advance to the the state meet at Algonquin Regional High School in Northboro.

wasn't an easy one. He injured his ankle in the Skippers' final meet of the season against Rockland and was still in pain at the sectional. Theriault won his first two matches, guaranteeing him a spot at the states, and forfeited his final match to avoid risking further injury.

Sweeney said he was confident Theriault would be between 85-90 percent ready for the meet. "He'll be ready to go," Sweeney said. "He should do pretty well."

As for working out with the various wrestling powers this week, Sweeney is a strong advocate of its advantages, both competitive and social.

"The kids develop super friendships that last forever," he said. "These kids will see each other at tournaments and in college. It's a unique sport because they'll kill each other one minute and they're the best of friends the next."

need when he scored off a nice pass from Daigler. Chris Coady (Hanover) got his first of two a few minutes later. Hatch walked in from the point and fired a pass to Bobby Noonan (Marshfield). Bobby's shot was blocked but Chris took care of the rebound. Next it was Greg Osborne and Scotty McGinn teaming up on a Lewis goal to make it 3-0 Sharks. Coady dashed any hope Assabet Valley had of climbing back into this game with his second goal of the game. Dunn and Noonan worked hard for the assists on this goal. Roche capped a fine individual performance with a sharp-looking unassisted goal. This was truly a team victory. All of the parents and coaches are proud of the way the team is playing. Keep up the good work boys.

Devils tie Flames

The St. Moritz Devils Squirt Minor hockey team defeated the highly-ranked Minutemen Flames 2-2 in a fast-paced, exciting hockey game Feb. 13.

After a two-week break, the Devils were more than ready to take the ice and play some hockey. The team skated extremely well, checked aggressively and passed to one another to set up play after play. These efforts paid off at the end of the first period when Corey Rosenfield of Sharon scored the first goal of the game. The period ended with the Devils holding a 1-0 lead.

The second period also flew by. Both teams tried very hard, but no goals were scored. The Devils had many near misses. Wing Kevin Lynch of Milton used his checking skills to stop the Flames time after time.

The third period was very exciting with the fans often on their feet. Paul Default of the Flames tied up the game. Devil wing John Segalla of Quincy, assisted by his brother, Steve, scored for the Devils and brought the fans' hopes up once again. About halfway through the period Donahue of the Flames tied up the game yet again. Devils' defensemen were impressive as they stopped play after play. Robbie Johnson of Duxbury and Richie Howe of Milton were especially good. Devil goalie Kevin Regan of South Boston once again made many spectacular saves. The final score was 2-2.

Skippers lose one to Hanover

By Kevin Lewis
Special to the Mariner

Before the largest crowd of the year, the Skippers lost to league champ Hanover, 3-0. The Skippers continue to play with a tremendous amount of heart and desire.

Kevin McKenna played a sound game between the pipes, frustrating several Hanover players with outstanding saves.

The defensive corps led by co-captain Charlie Endris played well in front of Kevin. The pairings were Endris and Anthony Wigmore, David Noble and Jared Graves.

Up front the forwards were led by co-capt. Mike Riley. The combinations were Nevin Bunstein, centering Riley and "Bubba" Kinchla. Pat Reynolds centering Brain Riley and Chris McKenna. Kevin Smith and Matt Lewis also saw action.

The Skippers finish the season this week against cross-town rivals Scituate and Hull.

JV's wind up this week

By Kevin Lewis
Special to the Mariner

Coach Eric Caldwell's junior varsity hockey team finish the '93-94 season this week with games against Quincy and Randolph.

The team is made up of predominantly seventh- and eighth-graders. On occasion, varsity coach Dennis Walsh allows some of the younger varsity players to play against some of the older junior varsity teams, such as Marshfield and Duxbury. The ultimate goal is to develop players for the varsity team. This dedicated group of athletes includes Jay Whoriskey, Brian Donovan, Ben Ketchum, Kate Muirand, Patrick Ridge, who play forward. Ted Goff and Andy Curran play defense.

Varsity members who have played some JV games include Kyle Bunstein, Geoff Tossi, Adam Donovan, Ed Hamilton, Nate Cotter, Brian Riley, Kevin Smith, Matt O'Connor and Matt Lewis.

All-Around winner Erica Hettstrom (second from the right) holds her Pilgrim Conference 2 award with the other Skipper gymnasts who won medals at the league meet. They include: Tafana Fiore, Tara Hettstrom, Jodi Colwill and Lauren Genovese.

school notebook

Early release day Feb. 17

Thursday Feb. 17 is an early release day for the Junior/Senior High School only. Buses will leave the school at noon. Lunch will be served.

Tutoring/Enrichment program

The Academic Express, a program of tutoring and enrichment in reading and writing or math is being offered to students in grades 1-6. the program features individual tutoring and small group instruction. Classes will be held on Mondays from 3:45 to 5 p.m. during February, March and April.

Children will be introduced to new books and work on strategies for learning. Writing activities will be in response to literature and will be process-oriented including work on revision and editing. Techniques to aid organization and comprehension will be taught and applied. Math concepts will be reinforced through the use of manipulatives. Math facts will be practiced for understanding and mastery. The Academic Express seeks to increase academic skills an help children gain confidence for learning.

Staff for the express is headed by Hingham residents Joy J. Turpie and Mary G. Aucoin. Both are Horace Mann scholars and have extensive backgrounds in teaching children at many different levels of need. Mrs. Turpie has been a special education and elementary teacher in Hingham for more than 10 years. Mrs. Aucoin has more than 20 years of teaching experience in the Hingham schools.

For information call The Academic Express at 749-1703.

Pilgrim Arena scholarships

Applications for sixteen, $1,500 scholarships are now available at the Pilgrim Skating Arena, 75 Recreation Park Drive in Hingham.

This is the 21st consecutive year that the Pilgrim Skating Arena is awarding college scholarships to area high school seniors planning to further their education.

Interested seniors must pick up and sign for the application in person at the arena pro shop. Completed applications must be returned by Friday, March 25.

Applicants will be judged by members of the scholarship committee of the board of directors at the Pilgrim Arena.

For more information, please call Hoby Taylor, (617) 749-6660.

public notice

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT NORFOLK DIVISION DOCKET NO. 94P0279E1

Estate of THOMAS S. DUGGAN, Jr. late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that MARTHA E. DUGGAN of HINGHAM in the County of PLYMOUTH be appointed executrix named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on March 23, 1994.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within fourteen (14) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, this seventh day of February, one thousand nine hundred and ninety-four.

Recreation dept. programs

The Cohasset Recreation Department will host a four-day school vacation program for children ages 4 through 12 at the Deer Hill School, Sohier St., from 9 a.m. to 3 pm. Tuesday Feb. 22 through Friday Feb. 25.

The program will be staffed by Mrs. Paulina McDonald and Mrs. Rebecca Bates McArthur. It is highly structured, including arts and crafts, sports and low-organized games, as well as special events and activities.

Children may register for all four days, one day, or part of any day. Special fee rates and family discounts are available. Register by calling the recreation office at 383-6791 or at Deer Hill School the day of the program.

Fund-raiser planned

The Junior League of Boston has planned a Star Share fund-raiser for Feb. 22-24 to benefit the Mary Martha Learning Center.

During these three days, participating Star Markets will donate 5 percent of your total grocery bill to MMLC if a Star Share certificate is presented at the register. Certificates are available at the Pratt Library, Mary Martha Learning Center, Main St., Hingham and the Quincy Crisis Center, 98 Phillips St., Wollaston.

The Mary Martha Learning Center is a residential educational program for homeless women with young children which provides training in life skills designed to help residents achieve positive, long-term changes in their lives.

For information call Kathie Caplain at 740-2376.

Museum plans activities

In addition to its regular Saturday and Sunday hours, the Hull Lifesaving Museum, 1117 Nantasket Ave., Hull will be open from noon to 5 p.m. Monday Feb. 27 through Friday Feb. 25.

"Hear and Do" story hour for ages 5 and up will begin at 2 pm. Thursday Feb. 24.

The discovery program, "I Can Find My Way," about navigating on land and sea, includes games, stories, crafts and outdoor orienteering for children in second through fifth grades will meet from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Monday Feb. 21 through Friday Feb. 25.The cost is $45 for non-members and $35 for members per session. Call 925-LIFE to register.

The "Snow Row" at Pemberton Point, Hull is set for Saturday March 5. Youth races begin at 10 a.m. The main race is scheduled for 1 p.m. Dories, peapods, sherries, whitehalls, surfboats, whale boats, gigs, ocean kayaks and shells will be on display before the main race. There will be an open house from noon to 5 p.m. at the Museum Life Saving Station for participants and spectators. For information call 925-4826.

The museum coffee house will feature Eric Brinkerhoff, song writer and guitarist, at 8 p.m. Saturday March 5. Call 925-LIFE for information.

Eva Marie Saint at dance

Continental Cablevision and the American Movie Classics cable network are bringing Hollywood screen legend Eva Marie Saint to Quincy's Neighborhood Club for a big band dance from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Tuesday March 1.

The Frank Shooshan Band will provide music. There will be refreshments and door prizes.

The dance is open to residents of the South Shore. Continental Cablevision is providing tickets for senior citizens to the councils on aging as well as free transportation to the event. Other residents should call Continental at 471-3200, ext. 3045 for information on how to get tickets.

The function is a way for Continental to introduce the addition of the American Movie Classics network to its lineup. AMC network is devoted exclusively to presenting Hollywood's greatest movies from the 1930s through the 1970s with all films shown unedited, uninterrupted and commercial-free.

Eva Marie Saint will welcome guests and take questions from the audience. She was the recipient of a Drama Critics Award for her 1953 Broadway role in "The Trip to Bountiful," and an Oscar for her film debut in "On the Waterfront." Her other film credits include "That Certain Feeling," Exodus," The Sandpiper" and Alfred Hitchcock's "North by Northwest."

In 1636 plumbing facilities in Scituate were undoubtedly very limited. Ad time marched on and the struggle for existence became less acute, the settlers of the Old Colony began to turn from their warfare with the retreating Indians to thoughts of personal comforts, health and sanitation.

In the year 1806 Caleb Bailey brought his bride, Debbe Vinal to the Waldo Bates house on Booth Hill Road. The tub shown in the center above was the object around which the family life centered on Saturday night in preparation for the restful and glorious Sabbath for it was their belief that "Cleanliness is next to Godliness." Generosity was an old Pilgrim virtue, so Caleb true to this impulse, shared his blessings with his neighbors and this tub was loaned out, being carried from house to house, serving those who made application for its use.

Caleb's family are still in the Plumbing business, making tubs available, rendering service for Health and Sanitation in the Massachusetts Bay and Plymouth Colonies.

The type of fixture has changed. Grouped around the "travelling tub" are modern fixtures which are sold and installed by the descendents of Old Caleb.

Hingham bites back on Cohasset Heights Ltd.

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

West Hingham wetlands and water sources are in jeopardy each day because they lie downhill from the Cohasset Heights Landfill, located across the Hingham/ Cohasset line. If the private landfill were to expand, as owner Paul Barry has been trying to do since 1988, it would affect the pond at the Hingham Skating Club, and other water resources, according to Hingham Conservation Agent Pine duBois.

However, the private landfill's owner, Paul Barry, is pressing for a permit to expand. He declined to comment on the proposed expansion. Calls to Barry's Lawyer, Anthony Moehrke. were not returned.

Barry proposes to expand his landfill about 14.2 acres and collect a minimum of 500 tons of trash per day. He hopes to renew a state permit to receive household rubbish to fill the expanded portion of the landfill. A prior permit expired several years ago, according to the Mass. Department of Environmental Protection (DEP). The estimated life of the expansion would be five years.

The Cohasset Heights Landfill is located about a half-mile from the Hingham Skating Club, which is not used for drinking water but feeds Turkey Hill Run Brook, and an irrigation source for an abutting nursery.

Runoff from the landfill impacts a fish run in the brook and other habitats supported in the Great Swamp,the Weir River Estuary and the Cohasset Golf Club.

Progress on the proposed expansion has moved slowly as the state rejected an environmental impact report last week. More than 200 citizens voiced opposition to the expansion at a Feb. 7 hearing before Cohasset selectmen.

Because of the wetland impacts, Hingham officials have made their position clear to the state: there is nothing Barry can do, save cancelling the expansion,

Greenbush opposition blossoms in local communities

Group wants train project side-tracked

By Jeff Cutler
Mariner Correspondent

As the possibility of South Shore train service looms on the horizon, a newly-formed group of local citizens is beginning to make a stand against the train.

Although the group is still forming, spokesperson Nancy Buckley of Bradford Road in Hingham said the group is, and will be, a "Coastal Coalition."

Included so far are nearly a dozen residents from Cohasset, Hingham, Scituate and Weymouth.

"It's pretty much the eleventh hour," Buckley said of the timing of the group's formation.

She has indicated that the decision time-table for the train will pass quickly and she wants all those concerned to join her cause.

According to Buckley, the Citizen's Advisory Committee to the MBTA will hand in their recommendations concerning the train during the next month.

After that, residents in any affected towns will have only one month to respond to the issue and make their voices heard.

Following the community response, Governor Weld will look at both sides and make a decision on how to proceed.

One local resident who has already joined Buckley in opposition is Merle Brown of Beechwood Street in Cohasset.

He thinks the train will be costly in both dollars and in lives.

"Whenever we've had trains someone's always been killed," he said.

And Brown added that cost "estimates are way off."

He is also uncertain of ridership figures and believes that while some new riders may take the train, some of the riders will only be moving from buses to the trains.

Brown asked, "Is it really taking the cars off the road?"

Peter Pratt announces candidacy

Peter J. Pratt has announced his candidacy for the Cohasset Board of Selectmen.

Pratt, 38, who served on the Board of Water Commissioners from 1983 to 1986, is a business owner, an experienced municipal administrator, and the son of former Selectman Burtram J. Pratt.

"I have entered the selectmen's race to offer the leadership and governmental experience which we now need to manage the critical issues of water resource protection, quality education, land use planning, and efficient municipal service delivery facing the Town," stated Pratt, a tenth generation native of Cohasset.

"Despite the significant public money expended, data now demonstrates that toxic materials are moving closer toward Lily Pond. I can not think of a clearer signal that our government has failed in one of its most basic responsibilities. I will work to identify and solve current problems before they become future crises."

Pratt pointed to the trend of increased school enrollment as presenting an important challenge to maintain educational resources in the face of revenue

Cohasset's week

Permits at town hall

Effective Friday, March 11, permits for the Cedar Street Recycling Transfer Facility (RTF) will no longer be sold at the facility.

All Cohasset residents must have a valid 1994 RTF permit for recycling or trash disposal. The annual fee is $65 per household. A family may purchase two permits at that rate for two vehicles registered at the same address if both registrations are presented at the same time. Purchase of a second permit at a different time is an additional $25. Residents who live alone will be charged $33. Permits will be sold only at the board of health office at the town hall after the deadline of March 11.

No vehicles will be allowed into the facility without a permit attached to the vehicle being used.

Office hours for MacDonald

State Senator Brian J. McDonald (D-Weymouth) will hold office hours Thursday, March 3, and Friday, March 4, at the following times and locations:

March 3: Scituate Town Hall, 9 to 10:45 a.m. Marshfield Town Hall, 11:30 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. Duxbury Town Hall, 2:30 to 4 p.m.

March 4: Hingham Town Hall, 9:30 to 11:45 a.m. Weymouth Town Hall, 10 a.m. to 11:45 a.m. Cohasset Town Hall, noon to 1:45 p.m.

"These office hours are a convenient way for residents to contact my office with individual questions or concerns, without having to spend the day traveling into Boston," stated McDonald.

Senator McDonald may be reached daily during business hours in room 416-B at the State House in Boston, 02133. He can be reached by phone at 722-1646.

constraint. "The answer is twofold," said Pratt.

"Long range fiscal and capital budgeting which accurately factors in the limited growth of the tax base which we may expect, and an unrelenting drive for municipal service consolidation and regionalization in order to deliver the maximum efficiencies from general government and public safety expenditures."

As a member and chairman of the water commission, Pratt successfully helped to author and pass into local zoning regulations the Town's Water Resource Protection District (1986), a model for such water supply conservation efforts in Massachusetts; began the legal negotiations and financial investigations which resulted in the Town's purchase (1992) of land adjacent to Lily Pond which had been targeted for private development; and initiated the first Town effort to retain engineering and legal assistance to investigate the impact of Cohasset Heights Ltd. on adjacent wetlands (1985).

"Despite the significant public money expended, data now demonstrates that toxic materials are moving closer toward Lily Pond. I can not think of a clearer signal that our government has failed in one of its most basic responsibilities.

From 1984 to 1990, Pratt served as Director of Telecommunications in the administration of Mayor Eugene C. Brune of the City of Somerville.

In 1989, Pratt was selected by his colleagues, affiliated with the National League of Cities, around the county to become the first municipal communications manager to testify to Congress on behalf of local governmental policies relative to the regulation of the cable television industry, and competition between cable and telephone companies.

A 1973 graduate of Cohasset High School, he holds a B.A. in Government from Bard College in Annandale-on-Hudson, NY, and has attended Boston University Graduate School of Management. He is president and consulting principal of The Pratt Group, Inc., a telecommunications engineering and consulting corporation based in Weymouth. Pratt and his wife Donna (Pentaleri), an elementary school teacher in the Brookline Public Schools, are expecting their first child in May.

The Committee to Elect Peter Pratt may be reached at 383-0060.

SAFE claims victory in continuing struggle against CHL

By Barry Svriuga
Mariner Correspondent

The owner of the Cohasset Heights Landfill will continue to seek expansion of the facility despite last week's rejection of the final environmental impact report by state officials.

Antone Moehrke, attorney for Paul Barry, the owner of the facility, said he and his client are evaluating their next legal step despite the setback suffered when Massachusetts Environmental Affairs Secretary Trudy Coxe announced that she would not endorse the project.

"It's something that he intends to respond to in the appropriate manner," Moehrke said of the report.

While Moehrke refused to speculate on what his client's next legal move would be, a spokesperson from the Office of Environmental Affairs said that he would likely file a supplemental review which better addressed the problems that expansion of the landfill would cause.

Coxe's action seems to be only a setback to the project, which would involve a 14.1-acre expansion of the facility that lies adjacent to Route 3A. In her statement, Coxe said that under the Massachusetts Environmental Policy Act (MEPA), she "has no authority to either approve or stop the project."

That decision is up to the local health board and the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP). Coxe's review under MEPA serves only to collect information about the proposal and any environmental impacts it might have.

Barry intends to use the extra space for disposal of municipal solid waste. However, Coxe's report questions the state's need for additional municipal solid waste capacity.

While Barry reloads to submit a new report, members of the Cohasset grassroots group SAFE (Stop Any Further Expansion) have already declared victory.

SAFE vice-president John McNabb thanked the 300 people who attended a February 7 public hearing and the 158 people who wrote to the state opposing the expansion, saying their work helped stop what he considered to be a project that is potentially dangerous to the people of Cohasset.

McNabb also praised Senator Brian McDonald and his staff for what he called "crucial" contributions to the cause.

"This decision is a clear win," McNabb said. "It is a big win."

Barry suffered another setback at the hands of state officials this month when he was fined $10,000 for failing to properly install, operate and maintain an odor control system at the landfill, according to a consent order signed by Barry and William Gaughan, the Regional Director of the DEP. The order stated that DEP officials determined during a review this past November that an odor control system approved in February 1988 did not meet the department's air quality regulations.

"This fine was long overdue," McNabb said. "CHL has for a very long time been a source of noxious odors and a potential public health threat."

But even opponents of the expansion conceded that the state report and fine were only two steps in what could be a long legal fight. Coxe's recent rejection will delay expansion for at least a year, McNabb said, but concerned citizens must be prepared for further battle when a new proposal is submitted.

"While we won this round, and won big, it's not over yet," McNabb said. "The people were successful this time, and can be effective again."

Hingham bites back on Cohasset Heights that would stop the risk to Hingham wetlands.

Barry's environmental impact reports and solutions have favored Cohasset waterways to Hingham's, said duBois.

"They seem to expend a tremendous amount of effort on Lily Pond," she said. "Well, that means (hazardous runoff) is going to come to us."

The runoff problem is ongoing, but duBois is also worried about Barry's plans to install two leachate tanks next to Hingham wetlands. While the state did not highlight the tanks, duBois was particularly concerned.

She has "no security" that CHL would ever remove or monitor leachate tanks after the expansion site is filled, she said.

"The 'out-of-sight, out-of-mind' adage rings too loudly here," she said in a report submitted to the Mass. Environmental Protection Agency (MEPA). "What is the life expectancy of these double-walled steel tanks. Longer than 30 years?"

And there are environmental impacts, she continued. Wood-chipping and stone-crushing machines make noise which would disturb residents and the wildlife of Whitney Woods.

"The (Hingham) Commission specifically objects to the assertion that the wildlife of Whitney Woods can adapt without adverse impact," duBois said. Noise and sediment from stone-crushers would put the habitat's water supply at risk, she said.

Hingham must also bear the truck traffic as materials are brought to Cohasset. Right now, the CHL accepts construction waste, such as building debris. In the expansion plan, it would take household garbage from other communities, but not from Cohasset, Hingham or South Shore communities.

Town officials have already expressed a concern that the expansion would cost taxpayers without benefitting them. The state Department of Environmental Protection agreed last week.

"The concerns of the town of Hingham are quite simply that the concern of getting to the landfill is in Hingham," said DEP engineer Doug Vigneau.

The Cohasset Health Board and MEPA have the final approval for Barry's project. Hingham would be allowed to comment on the landfill, but has no jurisdiction over property outside town limits.

"We would be invited to their conservation commission and participate in the public hearing process," duBois said.

While the review cannot stop the project, it will be used to make the final decision, according to MEPA Secretary Trudy Coxe.

"A finding that an Environmental Impact Report is adequate does not constitute approval of the project," she said.

Cohasset takes its place in history

By David Wadsworth
Senior curator, Cohasset Historical Society

In 1976 the Society's Caleb Lothrop House, an 1821 late Federal home, became the first Cohasset property to be listed on the National Register of Historic Places, the nation's "honor roll" of historic buildings, sites and areas. Established under the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966, later amended, the National Register is administered by the National Park Service, under the Federal Department of the Interior. In early 1994 the Lothrop House remains the only Cohasset property to be listed on the Register, but it soon may be joined by two other Cohasset landmarks: Government Island and Cohasset Common. Government Island is the site of the former U.S. Lighthouse Service Shore Station for Minot's Ledge Lighthouse, and is unique in its class in that respect. The Common is an original New England Town Common, dating from earliest colonial days. It is a remaining part of the original "undivided Common Lands" of the Town of Hingham. Both of these historic areas have been nominated for listing on the National Register by the town's Historical Commission.

From original nomination for listing on the Federal Register to final acceptance is a lengthy procedure, beginning at the local level, where the preliminary nomination forms are made and submitted by the local Historical Commission. These go first to the State Historical Commission in Boston, a branch of the Secretary of State's office. There the forms are studied and analyzed by the State National Register staff, and, if found acceptable, expertly edited and sent to the State Review Board for its approval. Once the state hurdle has been successfully passed, the nomination, now rewritten on National Park Service forms, goes to Washington for approval at the federal level. Only if the Park Service approves is the nominated property actually listed on the National Register and placed on the list by the Keeper of the Register. The Government Island nomination has passed the State Review Board and, having been transferred to the appropriate Federal forms, is about to be sent to Washington for final approval. The Common is at a more preliminary stage, the original nomination having been submitted to the Massachusetts National Register Office but not yet ready to be voted upon by the Review Board. Listing of Government Island could be expected within the next two or three months; the Common is perhaps a year or more away from State Review Board approval.

Submission of a nomination form for the listing of a property on the National Register is done by a local community Historical Commission where such a Commission exists. Included in the nomination is historical, geographical, sociological and, if appropriate, archaeological information about the site, accompanied by photographs, slides, charts and maps. The information required is quite comprehensive and has to be carefully prepared. As much as two years can elapse between the original submitting of forms and actual listing on the Register.

National Register listing places no restrictions upon property owners, but a provision in the Preservation Act requires federal agencies to submit proposed projects using federal funding, permitting or licensing to the State Historic Preservation Officer for review as a means of ensuring that no such project will diminish the historical value or importance of the National Register property . This is referred to as the "project review" provision of the Register, and only goes into effect when federal aid itself is involved. Perhaps the greatest general benefit derived from National Register listing is the distinguished nature of the honor conferred by being listed as part of the nation's most comprehensive compilation of its uniquely valuable historical assets.

Today the Caleb Lothrop House is poised to be joined on the National Register of Historic Places by two of Cohasset's most unique and important historic sites.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

A GREAT FUTURE

QUESTION: Why is the investment in land such a good, long term investment?

ANSWER: The law of supply and demand makes land the greatest "product" of them all. Its supply is fixed and the demand is ever-growing.

Although land is not expandable, population is. By the year 2000, the population of the United States is projected to be around 300 million. What this means is that every month from now to the turn of the century, we will be adding to the population enough people to fill a city the size of Toledo. By the year 2000, half of the population will be living in dwellings that have not yet been built and on land that has never been used for dwellings.

Volunteers needed to keep food pantry stocked

by Lorraine Palmer
Mariner correspondent

Five years ago, Stuart Pratt saw that some of Cohasset's own were struggling to make ends meet. He decided to help. Alone, Pratt delivered food to the doorsteps of everybody he knew who needed it; about five or six families.

"I thought I knew everybody," said Pratt. As the founder of the town-wide incorporated Cohasset Food Pantry, he found there were many residents he simply didn't know. All of a sudden people came out of the woodwork, he explained.

To date, 28 families comprising over 70 adults and children have been provided with food assistance since the food pantry opened last May. It took extensive planning by representatives of all local churches and social agencies to create a food pantry in Cohasset.

People think that just because it's Cohasset, the people don't need assistance. That's not true, said Pratt.

The storms in the last five years have been devastating for some Cohasset lobster men who depend on the lobster industry to support a family, explained Pratt. These are "mom and pop families with a couple of kids who need to avail themselves nine months of the year," he continued.

There are also some recipients who live in low income elderly housing who need more assistance than their Social Security checks accommodate. They also include people on Aid to Dependent Children, unemployment, or Workers' Compensation payments.

Singal mothers, with one to three children, on welfare are regulars at the food pantry, said Pratt. Since welfare provides food stamps, the pantry limits the visits to once every two weeks. That is the standard for all recipients.

"I'd let them come everyday if I could, but there has to be some fairness because of the food stamps," said Pratt.

Unlike some food pantries in the surrounding towns, the Cohasset Food Pantry also provides household supplies, such as diapers, toothpaste and other personal hygiene products. "It extends beyond food," explained Pratt.

Marjorie Steele, chairman of the food pantry steering committee said, "We just hope that any Cohasset family in need realizes that we are ready to help them with regular distribution of good and household supplies." All information concerning the food pantry recipients is kept confidential.

The Cohasset Food Pantry, located in the rear basement of the Second Congregational Church, has received grants from Project Bread and is eligible to purchase surplus food through the Boston Food Bank. Food is also provided through collections by local town churches, donations by local food stores, as well as purchases from the Food Bank with money donated by the churches, individuals and businesses, many of which have displayed cans for contributions.

There can never be enough volunteers. Volunteers are needed on Mondays to store the food and on Tuesdays to assist in intake and distribution.

Six volunteers are needed on Tuesdays, three in the morning and three at night, said Annette Sawchuk One person greets the people as they walk in, pulls their card from the card file and shows them the way downstairs. Two more volunteers help distribute the food and supplies in amounts scaled to the size of the family. "We can't get those same people every week," said Sawchuk.

Beginning March 1, the hours each Tuesday will be 9:30-10:30 a.m. and 7-8:30 p.m.

"I'm not in favor of the train as it stands now," he said.

Other residents in neighboring communities have also gotten on the opposition rails.

Gilman Wilder, a former Scituate selectmen lives on Gannett Road and is also against the Greenbush line.

"The first mistake was to take the thing away," he said. "The second was to try and put it back."

Buckley said the group's formation was prompted by "Three big issues": safety, aesthetics and noise.

She says that the commuter trains will travel through towns at an "average speed of 30 mph" causing safety risks to drivers and pedestrians alike.

Add to that the possibility of freight trains careening through town and the danger increases.

Buckley contends a freight train takes five or six minutes to pass and this time could severely impact the reaction of emergency personnel to fires and accidents.

"I'm concerned," she said.

Buckley is also concerned about the proposed parking garage behind Brigham's in Hingham.

That and the nine-foot-high noise barrier fences would be "prime targets for graffiti," she said.

All these things, said Buckley, would be "robbing the square of its unique village charm."

Brown said in Cohasset there probably would be some impact on property close to the train tracks but he wasn't sure how much.

Wilder also feels that the MBTA is not looking at the whole situation.

"I fault the MBTA for having tunnel vision" when it comes to looking at alternatives.

He said that the MBTA has only examined one commuting avenue at a time and, instead of spending more money on studies, they should "make some inroads now!"

Brown agreed and said the whole Greenbush project was lacking an "impact study."

Even though the issue has yet to be decided, Buckley has a number of suggestions for the MBTA.

"It seems like we need to have a coordinated effort," she said.

She added that commuting trouble could be eased by increasing efficiency in the bus system, expanding the existing commuter boat system, and using the high-occupancy lanes into Boston to their full potential.

"We insist that the government find the most sensible alternative," she added.

Although she agreed that there will be some financial impact, Buckley didn't think that property values would be affected.

"That's not the concern of this group," said Buckley.

For now the Coastal Coalition is making its tracks toward alternative means of transportation and Buckley says she doesn't see "any roadblocks."

To that end the group is holding an open meeting on March 3rd at 7:30 p.m. at the Sons of Italy Hall on Route 3A in Hingham.

League accepts consignment donation

Annette Sawchuk (l), president of the Cohasset Social Service League, accepts a semi-annual check from Andy Merrill, manager of the Cohasset Consignment Shop. (Lynne Layman photo)

The 82-year-old Social Service League of Cohasset is an organization which exists to benefit Cohasset and area towns. Financing for the Social Service League comes from two main sources: The Cohasset Consignment Shop, and a contract with the town of Cohasset which provides part of the funding for a Public Health Nurse. Recently, the SSL received the Consignment Shop's semi-annual contribution.

The 17-member SSL board could not continue to exist without the support of the 100 volunteers at the Consignment Shop. The relationship between the SSL and the Consignment Shop is a mutually beneficial arrangement. The Social Service League receives much needed funding while the shop volunteers gain satisfaction in helping others. A volunteer of many years recently stated, " I'm not sure what I would do without my weekly volunteer work at the Consignment Shop. It's social and I feel that I am helping someone else at the same time."

Statistics provided by the League for the year 1993 indicate the following: Judy Fitzsimmons, Public Health Nurse, conducted 345 home visits, 837 office visits, 810 Flu Immunizations and 107 Cholesterol Screenings. Also, 125 residents attended the annual Health Fair and 343 citizens were seen at Keep Well Clinics.

In addition to providing health care, the Social Service League employs Pat Carlton, an LICSW Social Worker, to service the towns of Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell and Hull. She offers confidential counseling and Support Groups to anyone requiring individual, family, geriatric, marital, teen, or grief related assistance.

Anyone wishing to contact the Social Service League for assistance may do so at 383-0771.

by Sallyann Chatterton

We want to commend Louis Bailey this week — what a guy! In the midst of the horrid snowstorm a few weeks ago, he knew that Harold Litchfield would need extra manpower on plows so he called and asked Harold if he could assist him! And, the day that he was plowing he was celebrating his 71st birthday! His concern was to help our town, and for that we thank you, Louis! And want to wish you a happy birthday too!

Speaking of birthdays, Bob Noonan celebrated his 50th last week! His friends and relatives held a surprise party for him at the Legion last Sunday with yummy food and tons of fun. The next time you see him, be sure to wish him a happy year, we sure do!

News comes to us from Babson College this week, and Peter Smith is the topic. Peter, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter W. Smith of Fisher Road, qualified for the fall semester dean's list. Congratulations, Peter. Keep up those good study habits!

Another Cohasset scholars makes the news this week, this time from the University of Massachusetts Dartmouth. Ann E. Dockray, who is majoring in management, made the dean's list, and we applaud her for her efforts.

The last of the college news for this week comes from Boston University, which awarded academic degrees to 1,002 students this winter. Receiving degrees from our town were Katharine G. Horn, a BA in political science, and Krista A. Kuhn, with a BS in communications. Hip hip hurray, you did a grand job! And, we wish you the best in this tough business world!

On the high school scene, are we proud of Andrew Henry and Alyssa McNamara, both of whom earned honorable mention in the Boston Globe Scholastic Art Awards. The competition is open to all students in grades 7-12 from public, private and parochial schools across Massachusetts, and is sponsored by the Globe. It is designed to recognize and reward promising young artists and encourage them to continue. We surely hope that Andrew and Alyssa will keep up with their fine talents!

Be sure to set aside Wednesday, March 9, when you write in your calendar next week! At 7:30 p.m. at the South Shore Art Center, there will be a candidates' night for our local offices that are "on the blocks." You will have the opportunity to learn what their thoughts are on the issues that may be of concern to you, so if you care, be there!

Gould Academy junior Daniel Varisc, son of Mr. and Mrs. David C. Varisco of Cohasset, was named in the honor roll for the mid-winter term. Daniel is also a member of the alpine ski team, so you know he is one busy student! We commend you!

Did you know that CHS's own assistant principal, Jack DeLorenzo, had hip replacement surgery last week? He will be out of commission for a while, but he is home and recovering nicely! After all, when was the last time that he has ever even sat down, much less been in bed?!! Jack is at home (10 Cedar Acres) and I'll bet he would love a card from all of his friends! Here's hoping that you are on your feet rapidly, Jack!! Everyone at school and around town misses your cheer and smiling face!

Another patient, Burt Pratt, is reported to be a little better this week, and we are all rooting for Burt to get home ASAP. Burt is in Ocean Manor Rehab in Scituate, and we miss him!!

Don't forget to tune into Pierson to Person this week, Thursday, Feb. 24, when Wig will have the Mass. House of Representatives Republican Minority Leader Peter Forman. Should be very interesting and informative.

Did you know that you can burn your brush, cane and driftwood now? Through May 1st, thank heavens, because who can find it right now? Well, if this snow ever goes, be sure to call the Fire Department before your start that fire! Especially if you still have to burn that Christmas wreath that you couldn't reach for the last month!

To all of you CHS seniors, don't forget to apply for the Pilgrim Arena scholarships. They have 16, $1,500 at the arena...just fill out the forms and you could be a winner! That is a lot toward your education fees, do it!

That is all that you have given me for news this week! If you would like to tell your story, please call me!!

editorial

This place is home

They're so wrong.

Cohasset, according to many people in many neighboring towns, is referred to as the 'gold coast' of the South Shore.

And although that depiction is true of the spectacular physical attributes of this town, most people tend to view the community as a "country club' resort, habitated by idle rich, yuppies who yacht off the coast in the summer and head for the ski slopes in the winter.

People who don't know better (and therefore have no right to say so) view the residents of this town as one homogenous group, composed of white, wealthy, two-parent families who are immune to the devastation of divorce or the deprivation of a inadequate income. As far as they are concerned, when it comes to Cohasset, we have it all.

But like most generalities, their assumptions are not only offensive, they are dangerously inaccurate.

While Cohasset does include families of material wealth, it welcomes residents regardless of their social standing or monetary status.

The Cohasset we have come to know is a close-knit community where people are committed to making this the best home for their families. Some possess riches, but that is hardly true of most.

And therefore, it may shock our neighbors that the community of Cohasset would need a food pantry.

What does not shock us, however, is the response by the people of Cohasset to create this service. The fact that neighbors once again are helping each other is so typical of the people who labor exhaustively to make Cohasset a superior place to live.

Yes, there is a need to help families right here in town. Single-parent families are struggling to make ends meet. Out-of-work parents frantically search for ways to pay the rent and feed the kids. Even in Cohasset, there are people who simply can't afford to keep the refrigerator stocked.

As residents of this community, you must not believe the false illusion that depicts Cohasset as an exclusive town of affluence. There are people who need assistance and we must always respond to their painful pleas for help.

We know this town.

We know there will always be people who care about their neighbors in need.

Citizen of Year is humbled by the honor

To the Editor:

I feel greatly honored at being named the first Cohasset Mariner "Citizen of the Year." At the same time I feel equally humble because I know that this award is really an acknowledgement of the good work of the many volunteers who have assisted me over the years.

To you and your fine selection committee for bestowing on me this great honor, my sincere thanks. To those good people who were kind enough to write letters of support, I shall be forever grateful, and to all you wonderful volunteers who seem never to get sufficient credit, thanks for making it all possible. This is one of the great moments of my life.

Blow the whistle on obstructionists

By Jack Hoey
Special to the Mariner

After a week of four hour-long, daily commutes using the Hingham boats, I curled up Saturday morning in a comfortable chair only to read a local newspaper columnist who lives next to the Greenbush Line right-of-way proclaim that restoring rail service "never made much sense since the ocean was right there and ferries offered a much less expensive and less cumbersome alternative."

Less expensive? Less cumbersome? You must be kidding. Occasionally I take the MBTA Commuter Train from Wellesley Hills. Folks, this isn't the Red Line. You not only have seats, you have large comfortable seats with a hook for your coat! It takes 30 quiet minutes from Wellesley and costs $2.10.

I love the commuter boat and have been using it for eight years. But I have to drive 20 miles from Marshfield to take it. During storms, the drive can take nearly an hour, and ice has lengthened the usual 40-minute ferry trip to almost another hour! Moreover, the boat isn't cheap — $34 a week, a stiff price for many.

Quite simply, the boat is a pleasant, reliable piece of what should be a comprehensive transportation mix for the South Shore. However, you don't need a fancy study to determine that commuter boats from Scituate, Marshfield or Plymouth aren't practical on a year-round basis. Come down to Lighthouse Point on the next Nor'easter and watch the 15-foot groundswells pummel the jetties. This isn't the pond the Hingham boats plow. This is the real ocean where the next stop is Portugal, not Pumpkin Island. Want more proof? Talk to those of us who remember the Etrusco or those of us who were on the boats the night of the No Name Storm — and remember, we were tossed around like a cork in the harbor!

Let's start talking reality. The South Shore is the third-world suburb of Boston when it comes to transportation. We can't let 20 people thwart the will of 200,000 hard-working South Shore residents who desperately need at least transportation parity with their counterparts west and north of Boston.

Two weeks ago, it took me one hour to travel on Route 3 from Route 139 in Marshfield to Route 18 in Weymouth. Last week, it took me just as long using Route 3A. And by the way, the biggest snarls were between the Hingham Rotary and the Shipyard. I can't imagine why anyone in Hingham would want drivers from further south clogging their roads.

As for this nonsense about ruining historic Hingham Centre, the trains are a part of Hingham's history. They were running before the handful of obstructionists bought their houses and businesses at reduced rates because they were located next to easements. These whiners remind me of the people who buy new houses at bargain prices next to landfills and then immediately sue to close them. Maybe our state legislators and town officials should file a suit against the stop-the-train crowd, arguing that they are contributing to a violation of the Clean Air Act.

Finally, let's talk about safety. You don't hear residents of Wellesley worrying about safety. They aren't risking life and limb on the Southeast Expressway. And even though they don't have beaches, their homes are worth a heck of a lot more then comparable properties south of Boston.

The silent South Shore majority needs to start making some real noise. For too long we have accepted second class citizenship. It's time to blow the cover on the self-proclaimed whistle blowers.

Cohasset COA update
Tax Counseling to start

A free income tax service for older taxpayers to assist in preparing tax returns is now available. This yearly service is sponsored by AARP and is in cooperation with the Internal Revenue Service and the State Department of Revenue. A tax counsellor will be available through the COA every week through April 15. You must call the COA for an appointment, 383-9112. Please be prepared to bring with you documents pertaining to taxes and income, including interest statements and the 1099 form you get from Social Security; and, of course, last year's returns, 1992. Please remember, appointments are necessary.

The Mariner welcomes letters to the editor. Please include address and telephone number for verification.

Question of the week

Each week, the Cohasset Mariner will pose a question to the candidates. Responses to the question may be mailed to the Cohasset Mariner, 165 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield, MA. 02050. Or, they may be faxed to our editorial office: (617) 837-4843 or (617) 740-8955. All responses must be submitted by Tuesday noon. There will be no exceptions to this deadline.

Responses by the candidates must be brief - a 200-word limit. Be specific and make every word count.

If you have any questions about this election policy, please call editor Mary Ford at 749-0031.

The Question of the Week is: What makes you the most qualified candidate for the office you are seeking?

The following candidates responded to last week's Question of the Week:

What is the most important issue facing the town department (or board) you would like to represent? How will you make a difference?

Peter Pratt, selectmen candidate

The priority issue of the Board of Selectmen is to manage the functions of town government in an integrated manner so that the problems of today stop becoming the crises of tomorrow.

The structure of our government provides for a pure form of democracy. It is, however, its decentralized nature that often gets us into trouble. We need to do far better to provide for adequate long-range planning in land use policy, and multi-year municipal budgeting. We need more effective inter-agency coordination, departmental consolidation, and enforcement of conflict of interest guidelines.

The ongoing disaster of Cohasset Heights is where we see the reality of the weakness of our system, and the need for strong leadership on the Board of Selectmen. My accomplishments as a former official of the town, and my professional training and experience in government give me the skills to provide the kind of leadership and management ability we need.

JoAnne Chittick, school committee candidate

The most challenging issue facing the School Committee is planning for a program that will meet the needs of students today and in the future. The school's primary responsibility — preparing children for a rapidly changing world — is becoming more complex and expensive as more demands are placed on the school system. Facilities must be kept up to date; curriculum and extracurricular offerings and staffing requirements consistently must be evaluated; particular needs of individual students must continue to be addressed. Increasing enrollments will be an important factor as the School Committee plans ahead for teaching the wide range of "basics" essential in the 21st century: academics, computer skills, the arts, athletics, health issues, the ability to think and to adapt. It will be ever more critical to work creatively within limited financial resources, supporting efforts to devise additional sources of revenue. To make a "difference" on the School Committee, I can offer a common sense approach, a parent's sensitivity to children and their needs, an interest in finding creative solutions, and a standard of excellence in education.

Daniel Evans, school committee candidate

School systems across our country are struggling to respond to new and increased demands on our schools. Technology is multiplying, job markets are changing, educational philosophies are evolving and budgets are tight. Our school committee must respond to this changing environment in a way that best serves the needs and desires of our children, their parents and the rest of the town.

As a parent of three young children, I will insist that our schools encourage all the children of Cohasset to realize their best potential, both in and out of the classroom. I also will insist that our schools continue to deliver the fiscal efficiency the voters have a right to expect.

Meeting these competing objectives will require careful analysis, attention to priorities and creativity from a range of perspectives. Tough choices must be made in a way that considers the needs of our children in the context of the needs of the entire town.

I grew up in Cohasset, and know and value the diverse views within our town and our schools. I am committed to Cohasset, and would welcome the opportunity to serve the town on the School Committee. Please support me April 2nd.

James Kirk, school committee candidate

Finding and using new resources to achieve our goal of excellence — this is the critical challenge facing our schools and the School Committee in the 1990s.

We must first commit ourselves to helping our children not just survive but succeed. Reaching for excellence is an investment for both their future and all of our property values. The families buying homes in Cohasset are looking for excellence in the schools which matches the environment of the town. The key to reaching this goal is to make the best use of available resources:

- Involving an even broader base of parents through PSO and the School Councils
- Extending our curriculum and purchasing resources by leading cooperative efforts with neighboring school districts
- Expanding our ability to undertake meaningful improvements through the efforts of the Cohasset Education Foundation

My energy and experience in leading a variety of business, education, and civic efforts will help achieve these goals. I believe that the responsibility of the School Committee is to build a vision and a plan for continuously improving our schools, while at the same time continuously improving our efficiency. The bottom line is to do more, and spend smarter.

Mark Bell, water commission candidate

The most important issue facing the Water Department is the present management group.

The commissioners, with a combined total of 24 years experience, are not accountable for our precious water.

To wit:

They were not able to appear before the advisory committee with their budget without assistance from the town accountant.

The three commissioners ousted a remarkably expert superintendent, lowered the requirements for the job and then hired Ron's cousin, Duncan, who had, remarkably, no prior expertise.

During my introductory call to Chairman Ron, he said he was "trying to talk [Friend] into running for the position." He succeeded in getting [Friend] to run. Will this effect change? I believe not!

I will effect immediately, the re-building of integrity back into the department, utilizing experience of the employees who are there and know the town system well, and plan for the future of the town water supply.

These plans include:

Monitoring for infiltration of CHL components to Lily Pond and associated waterways.

Metering and monitoring the entire town accurately.

Replacing filter media that are years beyond typical replacement time.

Remember: If we stay in the direction we are headed, we will end up exactly where we're going.

Fred Koed, water commission candidate

The most important issue facing the Water Department is watershed protection. Without clean water, the other issues are irrelevant.

However, I strongly believe that professional management ranks as a close second issue. The next Water Commissioner should have the ability to get to the bottom of the current problems in the Water Department. The people of Cohasset need to elect someone with the proper judgment to determine the right course of action for the town.

Five years on both the Cohasset Housing Authority and the Advisory Committee have prepared me to take on the challenges facing the Water Department. As Chairman of the Advisory Committee, I worked with other town leaders to establish the budget for town meeting approval and would bring strong budgeting skills to the position of Water Commissioner.

In addition, my many computer skills would be beneficial in improving services at the Water Department. Computer network administration is my profession and my strength.

I believe I have demonstrated the kind of leadership in town government over the last ten years that is now needed at the Water Department and would enjoy the challenge of this important position.

Dean Rizzo, planning board candidate

I believe that the most important issue facing the Planning Board concerns the commercial growth of route 3A and the Village. I feel growth is inevitable and necessary to insure a healthy community. Economic growth will bring many advantages to this community such as added jobs and tax revenues. There are also many disadvantages to growth such as traffic, congestion, and aesthetic considerations. There is a fine balance which must be maintained to ensure a strong and viable economic and social community. We need to ensure strong growth through a diverse development plan which will contribute "unique" businesses to the area and which will attract new people to provide the economic support businesses need to survive in this economy.

If elected to the Planning Board I will try to initiate a cooperative study with the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce to create a development plan which will carry Cohasset into the 21st century. I think the Planning Board should also initiate a town questionnaire so that all the residents and businesses have input in establishing the priorities which will allow for balanced growth. All aspects of the community must share our vested interest in the integrity of Cohasset and I hope I am given the opportunity to help lead us toward common goals.

What is the most important issue facing the town department (or board) you would like to represent? How will you make a difference?

Candidates meet March 9

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce has scheduled its annual "Candidates Night" forum for March 9.

The forum will be held at the South Shore Arts Center beginning at 7:30 p.m. Each of the candidates for elected office will be given the opportunity to outline their positions and those presentations will be followed by open questions from the audience. The forum will also be televised live on cable and will be taped for later showing.

Evans a candidate for school committee

Daniel S. Evans is a candidate for the Cohasset School Committee. He believes his experience, philosophy and age will complement the rest of the Committee and help him make a significant contribution to the schools. "The fundamental goal of our school system," he stated, "is to give all Cohasset children the benefit of the first-rate education. I want the School Committee to continue to provide the leadership needed so that Cohasset children can realize their best potential, both in and out of the classroom.

"Increasing enrollment, changing technology, aging facilities and tight budgets will continue to require tough choices. These choices will require careful analysis, attention to priorities and creativity from a range of perspectives. The most important factor in producing an encouraging educational environment is the quality, dedication and inspiration of the teachers. The School Committee must foster an atmosphere in which our teachers can excel, and at the same time must deliver the fiscal efficiency the voters have a right to expect."

Evans, 34, grew up in Cohasset and attended the Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill schools before attending Milton Academy.

He graduated magna cum laude from both Dartmouth College and Harvard Law School, and played varsity lacrosse at Dartmouth. While in law school, he taught a legal writing class for first-year law students.

He and his wife, Grace, have three children, ages two to six, the oldest of whom is in kindergarten at Joseph Osgood. He is a lawyer at the law firm of Ropes & Gray in Boston, and is active in a number of civic organizations, including the American Bar Association, the United Way, and the Dartmouth and Harvard Law School alumni funds. He currently is Chairman of the Race Committee and member of the Executive Committee of the Cohasset Yacht Club.

Koed announces candidacy

Frederick R. Koed of 92 Pleasant St. announced his candidacy for a three-year term as a commissioner on the Cohasset Water Department.

Koed is 42 years old, married to Lisa R. (Herstad) Koed and is the father of two daughters; Ashley, age 11, and Mariel, age 7. He has lived in Cohasset for 33 years, is a graduate of Cohasset High School (1969) and has a BA from the University of Massachusetts at Boston.

Frederick R. Koed

Over the past 10 years he has been a chairman of the Cohasset advisory committee, later a commissioner on the Cohasset Housing Authority, and served on the tenant selection committee for the Habitat for Humanity.

Koed works for the Executive Office for Health and Human Services, Office for Refugees and Immigrants as a computer network administrator.

"I would like the opportunity to serve the Town of Cohasset in this important position. I can offer my experience in budgeting gathered from five years on the advisory committee. I have an understanding of many of the management, public health and public safety issues pertaining to this department. While I do not propose to offer the prescription before the patient has been examined, I believe I have the skills and abilities that are needed."

Young Nawn runs for re-election

In announcing her candidacy, Cohasset Housing Authority incumbent Joanne Young Nawn said, if re-elected to a second five year term, she intends to respond to grant notice of funding availability (NOFAs) to develop new programs and support services for senior housing.

"Because the Authority's staff is small, the board members have traditionally handled many of the day-today functions of the housing units. We have also been amenable to cooperative efforts with other local housing entities, including support for the congregate concept of housing for the elderly.

Young Nawn has been employed as the Director of Support Services of the Quincy Housing Authority since 19~4. She served as Homeless Coordinator for Quincy Community Action programs, and was Project Coordinator and Designer of a state and federal Transitional Housing Demonstration project.

As a member of the Cohasset Housing authority, she hired an executive director and was on the board's oversight committee for completion of architectural plans and property acquisition for family public housing units. Additionally, she was on the oversight committee for rehabilitation and the building of two adult DMR facilities. As a member of the Cohasset Fair Housing Committee for three years she helped to develop a mission statement for the town.

Currently, she is completing her doctoral dissertation research with regard to public policy as it applies to housing issues.

She received her MA degree in sociology from the University of Texas.

Young Nawn is the mother of five children. She has two grandchildren.

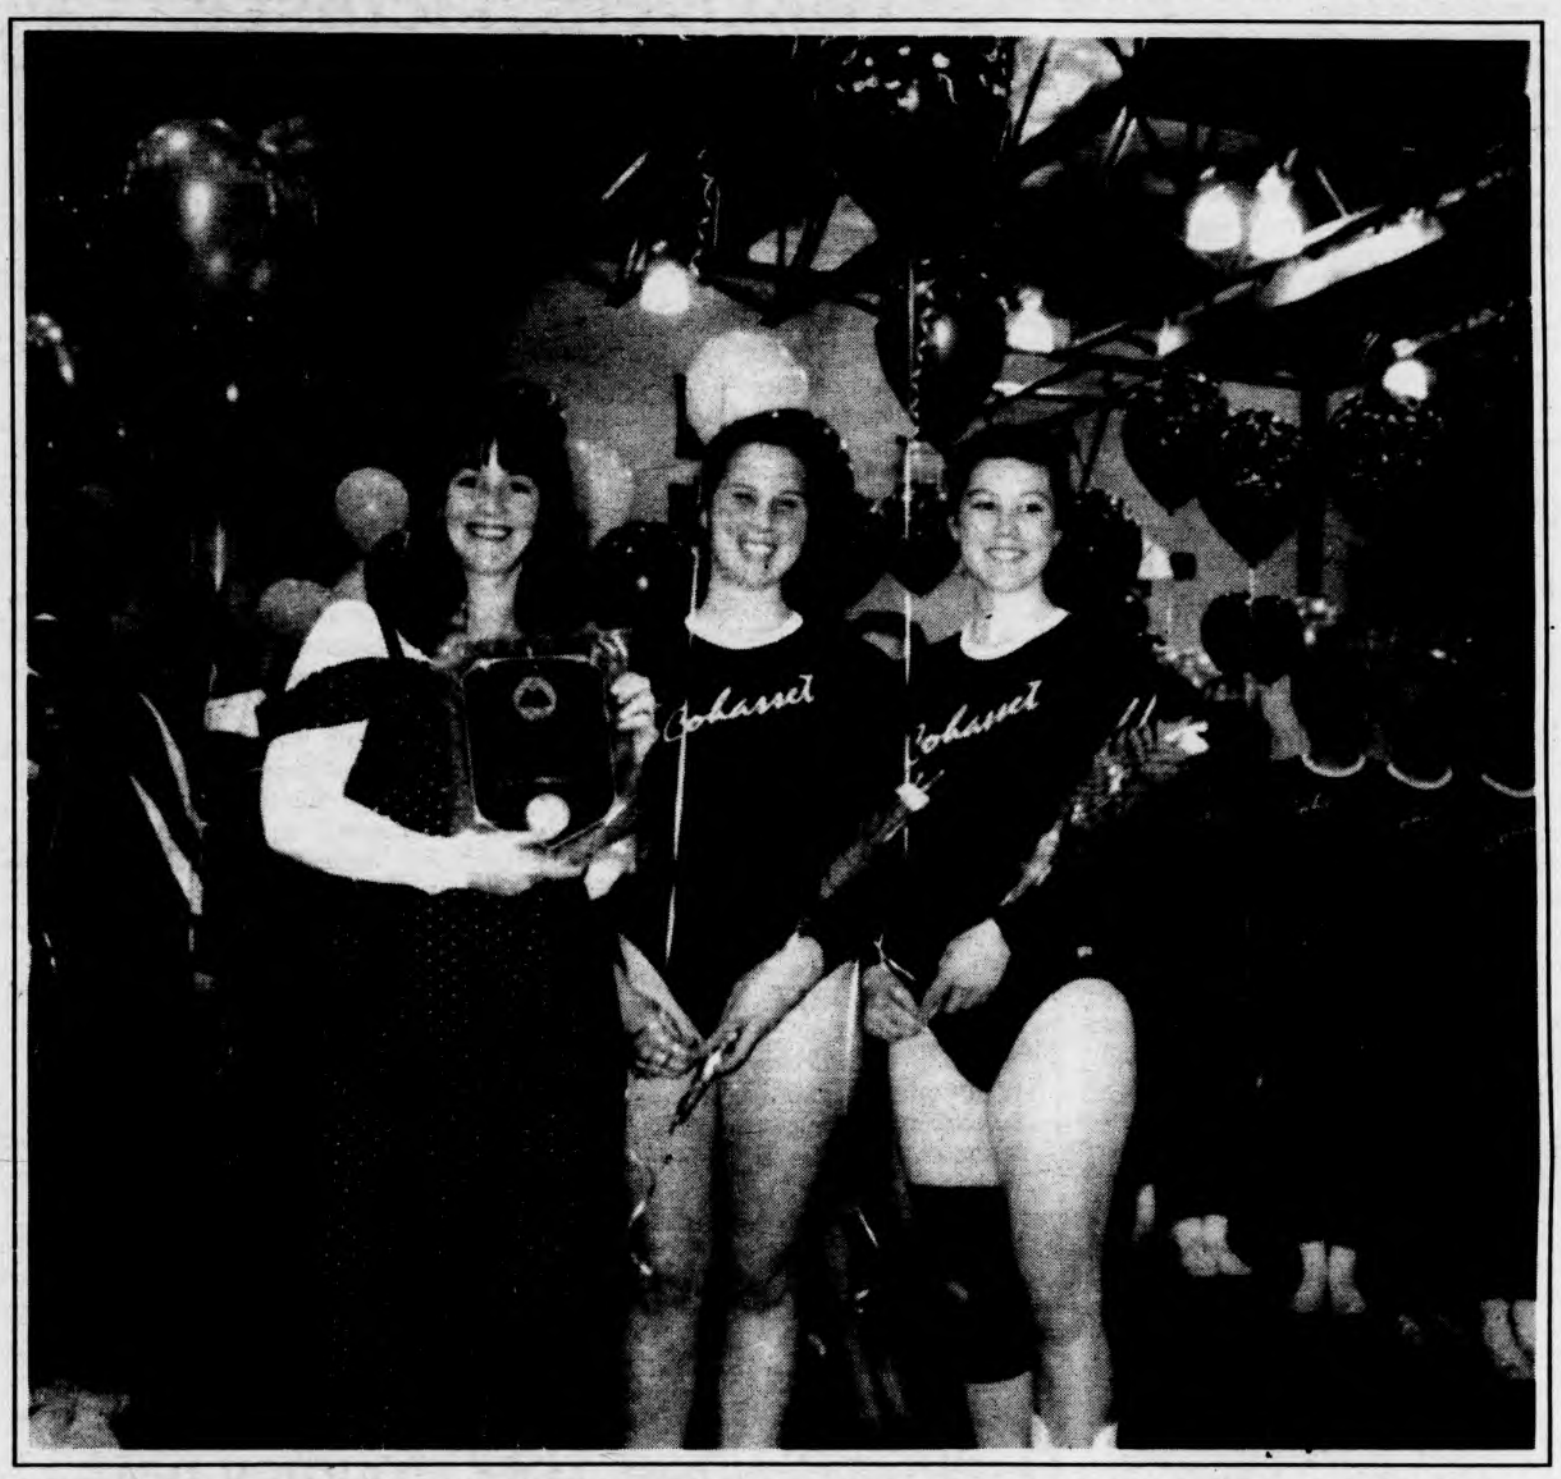
Hettstrom is off to Individuals



Cohasset High gymnastics coach Ruthann Sargent and co-captains Aimee Mitchell and Kara Protulis hold the co-championship plaque the Skippers won in winning the Pilgrim Conference 2. The plaque was presented to the team at the league meet.

By Joe Reardon

Because of the higher level of competition and competitors, the scores at invitational meets tend to be lower than those in dual meets, despite little variation in the routine.

Take Megan Pratt's beam routine in Saturday's South Sectional meet. Pratt laid out what Cohasset High coach Ruthann Sargent believed to be in the 8.5 range. Pratt was awarded a 7.9.

And although the scores were lower than usual, the Skippers wound up with a more than respectable 118. The score, which garnered Cohasset ninth place, was not too far off from the 121-plus they averaged during their Pilgrim Conference 2 championship season.

"With the highest-rated officials you're not going to ge the best scores," said Sargent.

Cohasset did have a notable performance in beating co-champion Scituate in the overall scoring. The fact they beat the Sailors made the afternoon that much more worthwhile for Cohasset.

"We were pretty excited about beating Scituate because we had tied them for the league championship," said Sargent.

Aside from the bars, where Cohasset scored well below its average in the 28s, the Skippers put up solid marks in the rest of the events. Sargent's gymnasts finished with a 30.75 on beam, 30.25 on floor and a 30.40 in the vault.

Sargent recently learned that freshman Erica Hettstrom qualified for the March 5, Individual meet. Hettstrom, selected the best all-around gymnast in the league, was the only gymnast from Pilgrim Conference 2 picked. She will compete on the beam.

In Saturday's meet, Sargent recorded a fine 8.05 on the beam, despite a fall that kept her from an 8.55 score.

"She's real excited about that," said Sargent of Hettstrom qualifying for the Individuals.

Sargent said Hettstrom would like to hit an 8.5 or better and can see her putting together a superb routine.

"She's very capable of an 8.6 or 8.7 and being solid as a rock," Sargent said.

Hoopsters finish 18-2, tourney next

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Cohasset's boys basketball team has made it a habit of putting together deadly scoring runs this season by utilizing its dominant rebounding and equally effective inside game.

But in Sunday's 69-47 drubbing by Cardinal Spellman in the opening round of the Ninth Annual Hall of Fame Tournament at Massasoit Community College, the South Shore League champs found out the hard way that putting the ball in the hoop is far more satisfying than having the opposition running its offense to near perfection.

"We just weren't ready to play today," said Skippers' head coach Ron Ford, minutes after watching his squad almost surely drop from the No. 1 slot in the Division 3 rankings. "We were flat.

"They beat us in every aspect of the game," Ford said. "Just pick a stat and they beat us."

The Skippers (18-2) picked up where they left off on Monday when they fell behind early in their 56-50 win against B.C. High in the consolation game, but played one of their better defensive games to hold off the Eagles.

Joe Slotnick (13 points), Jim Magner (12), Tom Allen (12) and Pete Bishop (10) all scored in double figures. Cohasset's Dorian Bryant was named to the All-Tournament team.

"I was very impressed with the way we played," said Ford, whose squad recorded a 5-1 record in a 10-day stretch. "We needed a big win and we got one."

Dave McKee

by Joe & Dave

It wasn't the NBA All-Star weekend but it was quite a show Saturday night at Marshfield High as the Atlantic Coast League took on the South Shore League in all-star basketball action.

Let's start with the winners.

The SSL topped the ACL in the girls' all-star game in the first game.

Standouts for the SSL team included:

Carver's Kate Murphy. Only a junior, she has already scored 1,000 career points and was deadly from the outside.

Norwell's trio of seniors Lisa Brazauskas and Jessica Lincoln and freshman Meg Barao.

Lincoln, who was the best athlete on the court, showed great form on her jumper. Brazauskas played her usual steady game and Barao, the lone freshman on the team, showed her talent inside.

Scituate's Beth Giovannini also played a solid game for the SSL showing a strong inside game.

For the ACL team, Marshfield's Kate Harrington, Hingham's Cristi Gigon and Duxbury's Alison O'Neil played well.

However, it was a crime that Hingham High forward Debby Elsden did not make the all-star team. She was one of the best all-around players in the league.

As for the boys' game, it was an awesome battle between the ACL and the SSL that went to overtime before the ACL pulled it out 87-80. The ACL scored seven unanswered points in the OT to win the game.

The star of the game was Duxbury's Mickey Curley.

The 6'9" center, who will attend Boston College on a basketball scholarship, had several dunks, including a half-court alley oop off a pass from Marshfield senior Bill Deftos.

Curley was the go-to guy down the stretch for the ACL and blocked the SSL's final shot at the buzzer to end regulation.

Deftos had at least a dozen assists and was the best guard on the court.

Other standouts for the ACL included:

Rockland's Steve Capone, Sandwich's Matt Jenkins and Dennis-Yarmouth's Dave Hoffman.

Hoffman, a 5'11" white point guard, was the star of the warm-ups as he repeatedly threw down two-handed dunks to the delight of the crowd.

For the SSL, Scituate sophomore Chris Brown played a great all-around game at the point. He scored, passed and rebounded with the best.

He will be a fixture at future all-star games.

Other standouts included:

Hanover's Ed Sullivan, Cohasset's Joe Slotnick and Norwell's Frank O'Brien.

Here's a list of the all-stars from this area.

Girls' ACL- Kate Harrington, Marshfield; Alison O'Neil, Duxbury; Kim Kelsey, Rockland; Cristi Gigon, Hingham.

Girls' SSL- Erin Murphy, Cohasset; Lisa Brazauskas, Norwell; Jess Lincoln, Norwell; Kelly Boyle, Abington; Laura McGlynn, Scituate; Kate Murphy, Carver; Beth Giovannini, Scituate; Kerri Shaughnessy, Abington; Meg Barao, Norwell.

Track, field revamping to go before Town Meeting

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

An all-weather track for high school athletes and citizens, along with additional playing fields, are just part of a proposal the track study committee plans to present at the March 26 Town Meeting.

The six-lane, all-weather track would allow Cohasset High's boys and girls track teams to host meets for the first time in seven years. The Skippers currently hold their home meets on Scituate High's track.

It would also give runners and walkers a safer option than working out along the town's roads.

"It's a track for everyone in the town," said committee member Larry Shultz. "From the young to senior citizens."

The proposal, which was approved 5-0 by the board of selectmen at last Monday's meeting, also includes the addition of three soccer fields, and a baseball field to be constructed in the southwest corner of Milliken Field.

The current track would be removed, adding more land area and room for 2-4 fields.

The estimated cost of the project is $700,000, which would be paid over the course of 15 years, committee members said.

If approved by Town Meeting, construction could begin during the Spring of '95 and be completed by the time school opens, later that fall. The project would be done in phases so as not to disrupt scheduled recreational programs.

The original proposal called for the track to be built between the water tower behind the high school and Milliken Field. But it was decided there would be too great an impact on the wetlands and conservation area.

The addition of the the fields would give more space for the town's recreational programs and eliminate the overlapping of fields which currently exists at the high school.

The fenced-in track would circle a designated game field for football, field hockey and possibly lacrosse. The current field hockey field, adjacent to Pond St. in front of the high school, cannot be used for tournament play because it is smaller than regulation size under MIAA rules.

"Teams are practicing on an inadequate amount of space," said Shultz. Because of their constant use, Shultz said the fields cannot be properly maintained. "They can't hold a blade of grass," he said.

"The driving factor is that all the fields are taken up and there is no designated game field," said committee member Gary Vanerweil.

The current track is not usable for the first two or three weeks of the season. The new track would be made of polyurethane, an all-weather material which drains well and requires less maintenance than a cinder surface.

Cohasset is the only town among 10 surveyed on the South Shore with no permanent game site or rest room facilities. The proximity of the new track would allow easy access to the high school rest rooms.

Cohasset would join Norwell, Hingham and Scituate as schools with all-weather tracks, if the project is approved. Hull, Abington and Hanover all have cinder tracks, making it practically impossible to train on during the early season because of poor drainage.

Endris, Goodman, Leahy, Devoe to lead 1994 Skippers' lacrosse

Coming off Cohasset's most successful lacrosse season ever, the Skippers and head coach Ken Ekberg face a rebuilding challenge for 1994, a task made more complicated by the toughest schedule in the six-year history of the Cohasset High School program.

Cohasset (15-2 in '93) opens its 13-game slate at newcomer Sandwich on April 5, and faces in succeeding weeks such Eastern Massachusetts powers as Barnstable, Falmouth, Austin Prep and Boston College High School. Two preseason scrimmages against Hingham and Xaverian fill out the Skipper calendar.

"Boston College and Austin Prep, like us, were state tournament qualifiers a year ago," said Ekberg. "We know they'll be tough. And Duxbury, new to league play, along with Sandwich, may be one of the top two or three teams in the South Division. In fact, I don't think there's an easy game on our schedule."

Cohasset will be led by six-year starter Charlie Endris, an attackman who became the first Cohasset player to break the 100-point mark last season. With 124 career points, Endris will continue to add to his record in '94, aided by Patriot-Ledger All-Scholastic crease attackman Chris Goodman. Goodman's 53 goals last year, and 11 in one game (against Waltham) were also both Cohasset records. Other returning attackmen are juniors Chris Adams (20 goals, 42 assists) and Ben Redfield (11 goals, 14 assists).

Two-time Bay State Games all-stars Dave Leahy and goalie Brandon DeVoe (111 saves, 63-percent save percentage) bolster the defense. Sophomores Todd Harrington and John Whitehouse move up from the 133 junior varsity.

At midfield, sophomore Chris McKenna (21 goals, 13 assists) is the lone returning letterman. Classmates Brett MacQuarrie, Ken Leahy, Brian Thompson, Andy Collins, Kevin Smith, Schuyler Doten, Greg Schultz, Ed Hamilton and Dave Hansen offer some depth at that unsettled spot.

"We may ask both our veterans and newcomers to experiment at other positions," said Ekberg. "There's no doubt we'll be rebuilding, but that's an exciting challenge."

The schedule: (Varsity) March 28, at Hingham (scrimmage); March 30, at Xaverian (scrimmage); April 5, at Sandwich; April 8, at Boston College; April 11, Wellesley; April 14, at Masconomet; April 15, at Falmouth; April 18, Sandwich; April 26, at Bedford; May 3, Austin Prep; May 7, Duxbury; May 10, Masconomet; May 12, Barnstable; May 17, Bedford; May 20, Xaverian.

(JV) March 31, at Cape Cod Academy; April 5, at Sandwich; April 8, at Duxbury; April 11, Wellesley; April 13, Austin Prep; April 18, Sandwich; April 29, at Austin Prep; May 2, at BC; May 4, at Andover Academy; May 12, Barnstable; May 18, Cape Cod; May 23, BC.

Kinchla scores pair for Skippers

By Kevin Lewis
Special to the Mariner

The Skippers ended the '93-'94 hockey season last week with losses to Scituate and Hull. Wednesday the Skippers were defeated by Scituate 3-0 and Thursday Hull defeated the Skippers 4-3. Bubba Kinchla scored two goals and Mike Riley tallied the other.

This marked the last career high school hockey game for Mike Riley and Charlie Endris. With only two seniors graduating, head coach Dennis Walsh and his staff, Rich Evans and Donny O'Neil, look forward to next season.

Congratulations to Kevin Bunstein and Charlie Endris who were recently elected by the league coaches to the all-star team. They will join players from Hanover, Abington, Scituate and Hull on the team.

Indoor beginner golf lessons offered

The Cohasset and Scituate Recreation Departments are co-sponsoring indoor golf lessons for beginner players scheduled to begin Thursday evening, Feb. 17, at the Cushing School, Scituate.

Lessons are five weeks, meeting one hour weekly. The fee for the five hour session is $60 per person.

Should you wish to register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791. Classes are limited in size and registrations are accepted on a first call basis. Available class times are 6, 7, and 8 p.m.

Local golf professional and head golf pro Dan Neary will be instructing.

Aerobics at the center

The Community Center offers an hour of aerobic step, strength and flexibility training in a fun, non-competitive class Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday from 9 to 10 a.m. and Saturday, 8:45 to 10 a.m. Babysitting available. A 10-class card is $40. Drop in fee, $5. Call 383-0088 for more information.

Hoopsters finish 18-2, tourney next

With its 18-2 record, Cohasset is almost guaranteed a bye in the first round when the South Sectional seeds are picked on Friday. Ford said he expects the Skippers' first game will be next Thursday or Friday.

Ford said he'd just as soon begin tournament play earlier in the week, but expected to "get in some scrimmage games" to keep the team sharp for its opening game. Ford also said he disagrees with the tournament set-up of all games, played from the quarterfinals on, being held at neutral sites.

"This is what's wrong with the tournament," Ford said. "We go 18-2 and don't get to play at home."

Cohasset hardly looked like a squad heading for the tournament in its game against Spellman on Sunday.

Much of the Skippers' woes fell squarely at the feet of Spellman's Joe Sullivan, who led both teams with 24 points. The fleet-footed guard, whose 21-points-per-game-average makes him Spellman's most dangerous offensive weapon, was untouchable from outside; making good on five 3-point shots. He also made driving to the hoop between the taller Cohasset players look easy, compared to the SSL opponents who were thwarted all season.

The Skippers looked confused early as turnovers led to a quick, 7-0 Spellman lead. Slowly, though, Cohasset began to work its way back into the flow of play that has characterized its entire season.

Ford said it was important for the squad to play aggressive, consistent ball, heading into the Division 3 South Sectional. "We need to get some momentum going," he said.

The Skippers trailed 30-19 with 1:52 to play in the first half and the contest was beginning to look more and more like a typical Cohasset comeback when they cut were able to cut the defecit to six (31-25) on a 3-point play by Slotnick and Bryant's (14 points) foul shot.

The Skippers came out sharper in the second half and finally evened the score at 36 when Slotnick grabbed a rebound and banked it in at 10:50.

Cohasset, though, would come no closer to Spellman as the tournament-bound squad took over the momentum of the game and held it until the final buzzer.

On the strength of a trio of Sullivan 3-pointers, Spellman smothered the Skippers with a 19-2 run, giving them a 55-38 lead with 6:08 left. Sullivan wound up scoring 14 of the 19 points to easily clinch the win.

He saved his best for last, however, when he spotted Adam DeChristopher 25 feet down court and whipped a behind-the-back-pass. With nothing between him and the basket but empty space, DeChristopher scored unmolested on a layup.

Fund-raiser planned for Mary Martha Learning Center

The Junior League of Boston has planned a Star Share fund-raiser for Feb. 22-24 to benefit the Mary Martha Learning Center.

During these three days, participating Star Markets will donate 5 percent of your total grocery bill to MMLC if a Star Share certificate is presented at the register. Certificates are available at the Pratt Library, Mary Martha Learning Center, Main St., Hingham and the Quincy Crisis Center, 98 Phillips St., Wollaston.

The Mary Martha Learning Center is a residential educational program for homeless women with young children which provides training in life skills designed to help residents achieve positive, long-term changes in their lives.

For information call Kathie Caplain at 740-2376.

Talk on maturing women

A presentation on "Exploring the Journey into Maturity and Wholeness" will be offered by Catholic Church Women of the South Shore Wednesday, March 9, in Cohasset.

Although people over 80 constitute the fastest-growing segment of the population, many damaging stereotypes persist, obscuring our capacity for meaningful, useful, and satisfying lives.

The program will be led by Marie Sheehan of Stoughton, who is a core member of the group and is also active in Massachusetts Women-Church. Sheehan was for many years director of the Community Services Division of Catholic Charities in Brockton and was a founder of the Mainspring Shelter for the homeless. Since her retirement, Sheehan studied at Emmanuel College in Boston, where she received her master's degree in pastoral counseling.

She will note some of the cultural and societal stereotypes and myths of aging and look at the challenges and potential of elderhood, especially in retirement, with emphasis on wholeness and optimism.

The program, which is open to all ages and denominations, will take place at the Sisters of St. Joseph Retreat House, 339 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset. A supper will be served at 6 p.m. and the program will start at 7:30 p.m. For details and reservations, please call the Retreat House at 383-6029 before March 7.

Support for spouses slated

Hingham VNA and Cohasset Council on Aging co-sponsor a support group for spouses and adult children caring for elders at home. Meetings are held second Friday of the month from 10 a.m. to noon at the Cohasset Council on Aging, 3 No. Main St., Cohasset. Call Sue Connolly at 383-9112 for further information.

Good vibrations at community center

Good Vibrations is the theme of the Cohasset Community Center's fund-raiser dance at 8 p.m. Saturday March 19.

Local band, Dad's In The Garage, will provide music at the Frosty Frolic dance. A disc jockey will also be on hand to play music from the 60s.

Prizes will be awarded for the best 60s costume, best lip synching performance and best dance couple.

Tickets are $15 per person and include sandwiches and dessert. A cash bar will be available.

For information and tickets call the community center at 383-0088.

Local traffic enforcement is up

Cohasset police are getting tough with speeders and those who don't obey traffic signs, Sgt. Robert W. Jackson said.

The department has issued 40 moving violations in the past two weeks alone, he said. That's roughly double the usual rate.

"We've instituted extensive traffic enforcement," Jackson said. "And we're sending radar out there for more."

He explained that speed is the primary contributing factor to automobile accidents.

A recent traffic study also determined that many drivers aren't obeying the speed limits in town. Traffic enforcement efforts are targeting areas of high traffic and high speeds, Police Chief Brian W. Noonan said.

He added that the department is now up to a full complement of officers with the two new recruits Jeffrey Treanor and Richard G. Abbadessa on board enabling police to direct more attention to traffic problems.

Speeders and other traffic law violators not only have to pay the fine but moving violations go on the insurance record.

Noonan said money from the tickets goes right to the town treasurer's office to be deposited in the town's general fund and does not go directly to the police department.

Cemetery access is up in the air

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

It's still not clear just how access to the town's proposed new cemetery off Rte. 3A near the Super Stop and Shop will be gained.

An article for the town warrant asked voters to authorize an easement over 150-feet of Red Fox Lane, a driveway leading up to a three-lot subdivision was withdrawn by selectmen Monday.

But town meeting voters will be asked to approve borrowing of up to $150,000 to build the cemetery on 10 acres of town owned land between Red Fox Lane and the Super Stop and Shop.

The board took the action to withdraw the easement article following considerable wrangling over just what the article meant and if it could be re-drafted into broader language allowing for other possible easements.

In a majority vote, selectmen decided to withdraw the article over the objections of cemetery committee chairman Glenn Pratt. In a display of frustration, Selectman Michael Sullivan cast the swing vote to withdraw the article after previously voting to let it stay because Pratt would not rule out possible access through Red Fox Lane. Selectmen Martha K. Gjesteby and Merle S. Brown voted with Sullivan.

Two weeks ago the owner of the Red Fox Lane subdivision, David G. Mitchell, told selectmen he is opposed to an access road to a cemetery through his property. He was perplexed that an article asking for an easement over his property could be placed on the town warrant without anyone contacting him to discuss the matter first.

Pratt said Monday that alternative plans for an access to the cemetery were in the works and that an engineers' drawing would be completed this week.

Cohasset home sales soar in 1993

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Sales of single-family residences in town soared in 1993 compared to 1992 levels, according to the Plymouth County Multiple Listing Service, which tracks home sales in the area.

One-hundred-and-one single family homes were sold in Cohasset in 1993 as compared with 76 in 1992 — an increase of about 30 percent.

The average sale's price of a home in Cohasset rose to $297,634 in 1993 up from $268,724 in 1992.

Tom Hamilton, principal with Prudential Prime Properties which as an office on Elm Street, said the hike in the average sales price is deceiving.

"Home values have stayed the same," he said adding that in 1993 more buyers in Cohasset were not first-time buyers but were moving up to more expensive homes.

But he said the increase in sales is a sure sign that the economy is on the rebound and that consumer confidence is high.

Hamilton said Cohasset has unique appeal.

"It's an absolutely beautiful town to live in and to look at. And part of its charm is its great diversity in architecture from fisherman's cottages to oceanfront estates," he said.

Cohasset's neighbor Hingham also saw a rebound in sales from 196 in 1992 to 231 in 1993. The average selling price in Hingham was $257,291 in 1993 as compared with $230,561 in 1992.

Cohasset's week

Hagerty meeting, March 10

Hagerty committee members urge Cohasset citizens to attend a public meeting on potential uses for the Hagerty Property at 7:30 p.m., Thursday March 10 in the selectmen's office.

The committee welcomes any suggestions on what should be done with the house and land. The site used to house Cohasset Colonials, a furniture kit manufacturer which relocated to Hingham after the town purchased the harborfront property last year.

Money is transferred

Selectmen authorized transfer of $674.83 from the town's reserve fund to the town buildings account to pay for expenses associated with the Hagerty property such as a recent water bill, plumbing work, November electric bill, gas bills, and money for a contingency fund. The town buildings account is the "catch-all" account to cover maintenance of buildings not under the jurisdiction of a town department, Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon explained.

Snow deficit soars

As of Feb. 17, the town's snow removal account was "overspent" by $75,330.69, Highway Supt. Harold Litchfield said. In a letter to selectmen, Litchfield said he would continue to provide the board with weekly updates. Under state law, towns can deficit spend their snow removal line items but the funds must be made up in the next year's budget.

Helmet Law in effect

Police Chief Brian W. Noonan notes that the state Bicycle Helmet Law takes effect March 4.

Noonan said flyers explaining the new helmet law are being sent home with students at the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools.

"Any person 12 years of age or younger operating a bicycle or being carried as a passenger on a bicycle on a public way, bike path, or on any other public right-of-way must wear an approved helmet," the law states.

More information about helmet standards may be obtained from the state Dept. of Public Health, 1-800-CAR-SAFEor by contacting the Cohasset Police at 383-1055.

Drama club makes request

Due to circumstances beyond its control, the Cohasset Dramatic Club is in the midst of hard times, acting club president Joseph Rota said.

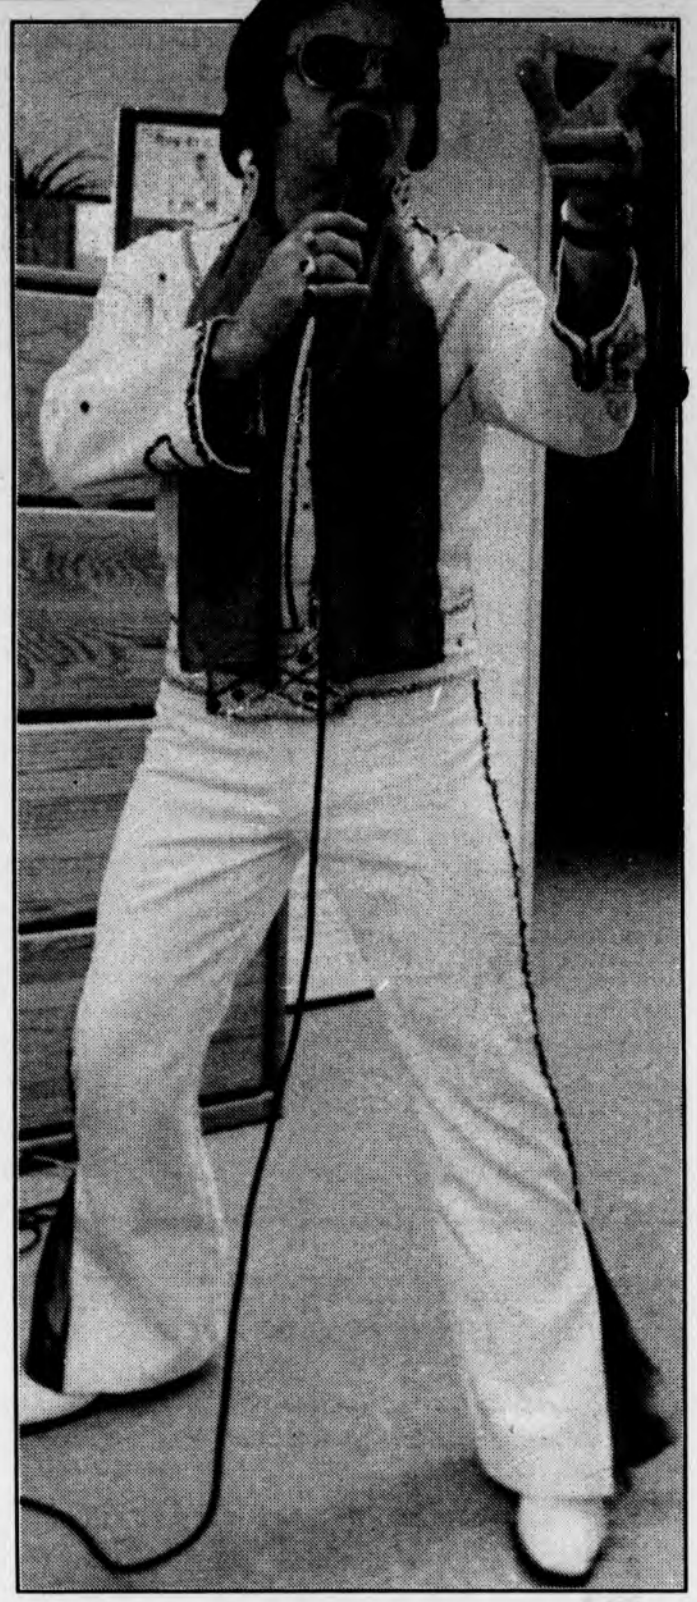
In a letter to Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon, Rota said the club would be unable to move ahead with capital improvements to the town hall promised last year in lieu of rent.

"We ask that the selectmen allow us to finish our season with a spring performance that will assist us in recovering lost revenues. For the rehearsals and performance we would like to pay $400 in lump sum for town maintenance, our good faith check enclosed," Rota said.

He explained that next summer following an audit of their books and development of an annual plan including fund-raising activities and selection of plays for next season, the club would be prepared to meet to discuss a specific schedule and a binding agreement for payment.

The past two seasons for the 72-year-old club have been ill-fated, Rota said, and included "a litany of misfortunes including storms, cancelled performances, hurried 'reschedulings', personal hardships, and volunteer burn out. He explained that a major benefactor, the South Shore Music Circus "has had to make adjustments in its giving practices" and that advertising revenues have also fallen.

Selectmen granted the request for cash payment instead of the club's making town hall repairs and praised the groups' continuing contribution to the town.



'Viva Cohasset!' says the Elvis at Eastern Atlantic Financial Group, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (across from Cushing Plaza), last Thursday (Feb. 24). Elvis (aka Doug McIntyre of Rockland) made an appearance for the mortgage company's open house for potential clients.

Cohasset's week

Outside contractor wanted

Water Commissioner Ronald Goodwin told selectmen Monday that an outside contractor would be hired on a temporary basis to run the water department following the recent resignation of water superintendent Duncan McCormack.

Monday Goodwin said the water commissioners would meet Wednesday, March 2 (after the Cohasset Mariner went to press) to discuss possible vendors. He said commissioners may eventually opt to hire an outside contractor to run the department on a permanent basis.

COLA, wage-hike ok'ed

Selectmen acted on the Cost of Living Allowance for full-time elected officials and nont-union personnel as well as wage hikes for casual labor at their board meeting Feb. 28

Non-union personnel as well as full-time elected officials like the town clerk and highway surveyor will receive a 3-1/2 percent COLA this year. The pay rate for casual labor will go from $6.50 to $7 an hour, selectmen said.

Food license gets nod

Selectmen have approved James McCormack's request for Common Victualler and Sunday licenses for Atlantic Bagel Co., 166 King St. pending the appropriate sign offs from various town boards and officials.

McCormack, who owns the Atlantic Bagel Co. in Hingham plans to sell bagels, sandwiches, coffee, soft drinks and other related items. The hours of operation will be from 6:30 a.m. to 9 p.m., seven days a week. The restaurant has seating for 19, McCormack said.

Liquor license ok'ed

Selectmen approved issuing a one-day liquor license to the Community Center of Cohasset, March 19 for the center's annual fund-raiser. In the application, Susan G. DiPesa of the community center said liquor would arrive at about 5 p.m. and be removed by 1:30 a.m.

Palmieri steps down

Michael P. Palmieri has resigned from the Drug and Alcohol Committee because he is moving out of town. Selectmen accepted his resignation with regret at their board meeting Monday.

Bill payments approved

Selectmen approved payment of $3,197.51 to architects John M. Sheskey & Associates, Inc. for professional services regarding the proposed Dept. of Public Works garage for the month of January.

Payment of $127.84 to sewer counsel Goodwin, Procter & Hoar for services provided in December was also approved Monday.

Firefighter gets raise

Effective April 5, Firefighter/EMT John J. Dockray's annual salary will increase from the minimum step $28,383.10 to the first step $29,088.51 per the firefighters' contract. Selectmen approved Dockray's raise at their board meeting Feb. 28.

Neighbors disagree over dog's personality

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Dog owner Matthew Fitzpatrick of Pleasant Street and his neighbor and dog-lover Amy Argus say Fitzpatrick's Boxer-mix is as gentle as they come.

But some of Fitzpatrick's other neighbors, Martin and Jane Corry and Margaret Stoughton tell a different story.

To them Fitzpatrick's dog is a vicious animal.

Selectmen have the task of weighing testimony on both sides before determining what should be done with the dog.

The matter came before the board following a series of complaints from Martin Corry, 81 Pleasant St., that Fitzpatrick's dog was loose which is a violation of the town's leash law. The leash law requires that a dog must be under a person's visual or verbal command whenever off a leash. Fitzpatrick lives at 60 Pleasant St.

Following a complaint last fall, Fitzpatrick agreed to construct a pen but later built a stockade fence instead to contain the dog. However, with the drifting snow, the dog was able to climb over the fence and escape, Fitzpatrick explained.

Animal Control Officer William P. Quigley recommended the dog be kept on a leash when being brought in and out of the house and be tied to a run within the fenced yard. He said there had been no reported bites from this dog. Quigley described the dog which is 1/4 Rottweiler, as "scary looking."

Stoughton said the dog grabbed her hand and nearly bit her last spring.

"I pulled back and he leapt back and growled and showed his teeth," she said.

Argus, who walks her own dog in the neighborhood, said Fitzpatrick's dog has never been aggressive to her.

"Something must have scared her," she said about claims the dog had acted aggressively.

Selectmen took the matter under advisement.

Pierson to Person update

Wigmore Pierson will host Massachusetts Treasurer and Receiver General Joseph D. Malone from 8 to 9 p.m. Thursday March 3.

The Pierson to Person show is broadcast live from the studio of Continental Cablevision, Gannett Rd., No. Scituate. The show airs on Channel 53 in Hingham and Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset. The public is welcome to be part of the studio audience.

For information call Robert Belliveau at 545-2500.

Railroad meeting rescheduled

The 'Coastal Coalition' has re-scheduled a meeting on the restoration of the Greenbush Line of the Old Colony Railroad planned for tonight to 7:30 p.m., Thursday March 10 at the Sons of Italy on Rte. 3A in Hingham due to the forecasted Northeaster.

The Coastal Coalition is against the train. Nancy Buckley of Hingham who organized the coalition said the opposition is based on safety, aesthetics and noise. She feels commuting problems could be eased by increasing efficiency in the bus system, expanding the existing commuter boat system, and using high occupancy lanes into Boston to their full potential.

The meeting next week is open to the public.

Red Cross Month declared

Selectmen have declared March as "Red Cross Month."

In a letter to the board James L. Chiccino, chairman of the South Area Council for the Red Cross, asked that selectmen "urge Cohasset citizens to support their local American Red Cross chapter through volunteer activities and financial contributions."

Quilt show benefit slated

A quilt show and luncheon to benefit DOVE, center for abused women and children, will be held from 11 to 1 a.m. Saturday March 5 at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave.

Penny Redfield will speak at 1 pm. on "Two Cohasset Quilts."

Tickets are $5. For information and tickets call 383-0345 or stop by the church any weekday morning.

Support group to meet

The Hingham Visiting Nurse and Community Service, Inc. and the Cohasset Council on Aging co-sponsor a support group for caregivers.

Meetings are held the second Friday of the month at the Cohasset COA, 3 North Main St., from 10 a.m. to noon.

The date of the next meeting is March 11.

Karen Farmer, LICSW, and Sue Connolly, Outreach, are group co-leaders.

If you or someone you know would benefit from sharing experiences and concerns surrounding the issues of caring for an elder, please join us.

For further information, call Sue Connolly at 383-9112.

School board wraps up FY'95 budget hearings

By Sean P. Sweeney
Mariner correspondent

A public hearing held by the Cohasset School Committee regarding the proposed budget for fiscal year 1995 drew little interest from local citizens Monday, Feb. 28. The meeting is required by state law in order to ensure that town residents have an opportunity to comment on the proposed budget and ask questions about it before town meeting.

The final budget proposal for fiscal year 1995 stands at $6,476,084, which represents a 5.65 percent increase over fiscal year 1994. The budget allocates $1,262,058 to the Joseph Osgood School, $1,168,800 to the Deer Hill School and $3,212,566 to the junior/senior high school. An allocation of $832,660 to the All District portion of the budget rounds out the total figure.

Supt. Stephen Hart presented the projected enrollment figures for the 1994-1995 school year at the public hearing. It is expected that the total enrollment for next year will increase by approximately 50 students over this year to a total expected enrollment of 1,193 students.

The increased enrollment will be particularly evident at the first grade level where the expected class will total 102 students as compared to 84 this year. The 1995 budget calls for the addition of a teacher at the Osgood School in order to accommodate the increased enrollment.

Vice Chairman Ralph Kidder pointed out that the increased enrollment is becoming very significant when one considers that total school population over the past five years has increased by almost 20 percent.

Hart believes that Cohasset's increasing enrollment parallels that of other area towns, many of which have been forced to reopen schools that had been closed in years past.

The sparce attendance at the public hearing should not be viewed as indicating that the citizens of Cohasset are not concerned about the school budget but, rather, seems to suggest that most of the major issues surrounding the budget were addressed at the many school committee meetings devoted to discussing the budget which have been held over the past few months.

"Part of this reflects the number of meetings that we have had and the great deal of input we have already received from the community. We have met with the Advisory Committee on the budget and it has approved our budget. There hasn't been controversy over the budget but there has been interest," Hart explained.

Committee Chairwoman Nancy Sandell also credited the input and active participation of the various school councils in the budget process this year and cited it as still another reason for the low turnout at the public hearing.

"I am pleased to say that this budget represents somewhat more than just a maintenance budget. We have added some new positions throughout the system. We will have a curriculum coordinator at the elementary level. We will have a technology aide at the Osgood School and we have added an additional foreign language class at the high school," explained Hart.

Hart also pointed out that approximately 80 percent of the total budget is made up of salaries and that this leaves little room to maneuver. Despite that, according to Hart, the budget reflects the committee's and the department's commitment to constantly improve the level of education throughout the system.

Hart also pointed out that Cohasset will receive $27,000 in state aid, the minimum amount available under the Education Reform Act.

At the hearing, Sandell, Kidder and committee member Barbara Bliss voted unanimously to approve the final proposed budget for fiscal year 1995.

Release day update

The jr./sr. high school faculty used the recent release day to work on their professional development goals. This process will be ongoing throughout the year, culminating in individual research projects presented to the whole faculty in May. This innovative approach to In-Service time has teachers pursuing a wide variety of topics on Early Release Days.

Some examples of these topics include: several staff members used this release time to plan, organize and develop activities for Project School Family. This new program is for all ninth graders who meet monthly in school as "families" with other ninth graders, a teacher and a peer counselor. Another group of teachers is exploring the possibility of developing an eighth grade team. They are reviewing the curriculum requirements and social needs of 14-year-olds, to see if this age group would be better served in a team format.

Watch this space for further updates.

Young artists excel

Cohasset has once again put forth some outstanding works of art for the annual Boston Globe Scholastic art awards. Eight students for the junior/senior high school have had their work accepted into the regional competition.

The competition, which began in 1927, is organized by the New England Art Education Conference and the Massachusetts Art Education Association. High school students from across the commonwealth are invited to submit work which is previewed and judged by local art educators.

this year's entrants are: Alyssa McNamara, Andrew Henry, Susana Candia, Jarod Ford, Jessica Hurley, Christa Ansbergs, Renee Prisble and Holly Brennock. Two of the artists, Andrew Henry and Alyssa McNamara, were awarded honorable mentions for their work.

The show will be on exhibit through Friday March 4 at the transportation building gallery, Park Square, Boston.

PAC to meet

The PAC will meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday March 8 in the Deer Hill cafeteria. Clare Vann from the Federation for children in Boston will speak to the group.

For information call Ava Whiteley at 383-9310 or Velma Begley at 383-1541.

Health ed council to meet

The Cohasset Health Education Advisory Council will meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday March 15 in room 206 at the high school.

Any Cohasset resident interested in the K-12 comprehensive health education program in the Cohasset public schools is welcome to join the committee.

PSO phone-a-thon

The PSO will hold its annual phone-a-thon fundraiser Wednesday, March 16, from 7 to 9:30 p.m. and is encouraging the community to support this event by pledging a donation to help continue the many enrichment activities the PSO provides for our students during the school year.

The phone-a-thon is the PSO's primary fundraiser. Proceeds received fund the teacher grant program, one of the major projects supported by the PSO and many ongoing PSO activities and special events. The teacher grant donations are used by teachers for supplementary programs and materials and aids not covered by the school budget, including Artist of the Month program, field trips, purchase of various library books and supplemental classroom enrichment materials.

A few of the special events brought to our schools through curriculum enrichment include Opera-to-Go, Great Books Program, Michael McNamara: Money Management, and Chinese Acrobats. Dues are not charged to support the organization which relies heavily on member contributions. The PSO is hoping for 100 percent member participation. Anyone interested in a full mid-year report of the PSO activities should request one from their PSO representative March 16.

Upcoming town elections

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce is hosting a candidate's night at 7:30 pm. Wednesday March 9 at the South Shore Art Center. Candidates for all local offices, including school committee, will speak followed by a question and answer session.

Town meeting will be held Saturday March 26 at the high school.

Elections for town-wide offices will be held at town hall Saturday April 2.

Voter registration is being held at the town clerk's office in town hall during regular business hours Thursday evenings until 7 and from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday March 5. Residents must be 18 years of age by March 26 to be eligible to vote.

The PSO has gathered this information to encourage parent participation.

around town

by Sallyann Chatterton

❑ Attention all of you young artists! Congressman Gerry Studds invites all high school students in his district to enter his ninth annual art competition, part of a national congressional competition.

Entry forms, available at the art department, must be submitted by March 18, the actual artwork by April 1. Every student is going to be allowed one original entry, and to be eligible the artwork must be two dimensional (paintings, drawings, collages and prints) and no bigger than 30" by 30" before framing. No photos!

Be sure to enter, then call me to tell me that you did! We would all love to hear about it.

❑ Did you wonder why you haven't seen Vi Tuthill walking around town lately? Well, she has moved to the New England Friends Home just over the Hingham line on Turkey Hill Road. From all reports she loves it there, she says it is delightful! We wish you well in your new home Vi, and hope that you will drive over just to walk so that we can see your cheerful face! You are special!

❑ I spoke to my sister Ricki (Troy) Aikau, recently and she wanted to tell all of her fellow classmates and friends that she misses Cohasset but is very happy in Hawaii.

Ricki has four grandchildren now, so between working full time and caring for them when she can, she is one busy (but happy) person!! Everyone loves Ricki!

❑ We hope that Walter Wheelwright, who is in South Shore Hospital, continues his recovery and is home real soon.

❑ Same thing goes for Ruth Silvia, who is in the Deaconess Hospital. Get well soon Ruth, and remember, Spring is coming. Oh what a winter!!

❑ Have you heard what the Second Congregational Church is planning to do this week (March 5)? From 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. 50 handmade quilts will be displayed and luncheon will be served, then Penny Redfield will talk on the subject of "Two Cohasset Quilts."

Penny has done a lot of research on two Cohasset Album quilts circa 1860, she has done a remarkable job doing so! As this goes to press there are a limited number of tickets available ($5) and the really great news is that all proceeds will go to DOVE, a shelter for abused women and children.

If you are an admirer (or maker) of quilts, you really should make the effort to go and see the quilts and hear Penny, we are sure that you will enjoy it.

❑ We hope that Jen Coley is feeling better as she reads this! And that she is up and walking (when this dumb snow ever goes away) very soon, without pain.

❑ Hats off to Andy Merrill and her able crew for making the Cohasset Consignment Shop what it is today. They sure do a lot for the Social Service League (one of two main sources of financing) to help with funding, and recently Andy gave the League a hefty check. Andy always makes sure that everything is just right, and with all of her mighty volunteers, it is!! Take the time to go up there and see (and buy of course) you will really be impressed by what Andy and her gals do!!

❑ We wish Erica Hettstrom every bit of good luck that we can muster as she goes to the gymnastics March 5 Individual meet. Erica was selected as the best all-around gymnast in the league and was the only gymnast picked from the Pilgrim Conference 2. The beam will be her speciality and we know that she will be awesome!

Erica is a freshman at CHS, what an honor to even be there!!

❑ Yes!! The kiddos are back in school!! And, they will probably be there until July 4 if this darn snow keeps on coming! Oh well, good news after this week Spring should be here!!

Won't it be nice to see a crocus?

❑ Rita Dirrane has news for you, she is going to hold a class on decorating at the Community Center for $15. A wonderful winter break, go!!

❑ If this column seems a little skimpy this week, it is because everyone was on vacation, right? That means that all of you must have tons of news to report, and I surely hope that you do so! After all, your news is our news, and we all love to read about your latest happenings!! So, call me and I will print it!!

The Grand Tour —— with Ginger Ferenz, 383-2863

Brrrr! These icicles at 312 King Street caught the eye of Mary Friedman. Mary described this home as "the quintessential New England Farmhouse" and she tells me that during the holiday season the owners usually have a sleigh in the front yard. Mary called just in time as the recent warm weather melted these beautiful formations.

A change of season

We surrender.

In the words of the immortal Popeye, "We've had alls we can takes, and we cans't takes no more."

Sure November and December were no problem. They rarely are. January was a test, but let's enjoy it, we said. Strap on those cross country skis, build a snow man, live a little.

Even as February's grip squeezed us blue in the face, packing the Arctic landscape with a layer cake of snow and ice, we vowed to stand strong. Hey, this is New England after all. What right do we have to complain?

At least this isn't Saskatoon, or Moose Jaw, or Point Barrow where even your anti-freeze needs anti-freeze. We're in a temperate zone for crying out loud. Words like "tundra" and "blubber" and "igloo" just aren't in our vocabulary.

But slowly, inevitably we're wearing down. The shovel grows heavier with every new application. Each snow flakes looms larger.

We've enrolled in dogsled classes.

The Winter Olympics offered wan respite. Hearty Norwegians, smiling bare-headed in sub-zero weather gave us some small comfort. Athletes revelling in snow and on ice made us wonder if we weren't missing something.

But then we heard that Lillehammer, with all it's winter bravado, with it's outdoor oompah bands and reindeer-drawn sleighs, has only gotten 55 inches of snow this year. That's about two-thirds what we've had to endure.

We really used to love this season. We just never imagined it would take such liberties. The optimistic among us know it can't last forever, and March may well break the back of Old Man Winter.

As the saying goes, "Spring hopes eternal."

Oddly enough, there are those of us who will miss the inclemency.

This summer, when we've traded in our balaclavas for piña coladas, and have heard, for the thousandth time, "It's not the heat that gets me, it's the humidity," thoughts will drift back to New England winter, and we'll remember that it's the change of season that makes living here so special.

Will Route 3A become our hallmark?

letters

To the Editor:

How many more supermarkets does Cohasset need?

Chief Justice Cushing Way (Rt. 3A) was constructed to make easier access along the South Shore. Cohasset, coming late to adopt zoning, zoned much of this largely treed and open farm area for business and light industry, thinking it would broaden the town's tax base. Hingham and Scituate chose not to do so.

Cohasset, smaller than any of those towns that surround it, (their combined population is over nine times that of Cohasset) has become the ideal location for retail developers. With its ease of access and available land space it is well suited to serve an even broader area with markets of ever increasing size, geared to quantity distribution at attractive prices.

From the original 20,000 sq. ft. Tedeschi's (bought out by Stop & Shop) to the present 45,000 sq. ft. Stop & Shop it looks like the town may have at least one additional 60,000 sq. ft. and perhaps two (Shaw's and Star). That translates into 2-1/3 or 2-2/3 times the shopping area that we have now.

If these markets are to be successful, it means at least doubling or perhaps tripling the traffic that we now have — an interesting prospect come summer. Doubtless the state would eventually enlarge 3A, but the town must take care of the roads that feed into it.

Success generally breeds success. Could this lead to a Walmart (98,000 sq. ft.) or a Home Depot? Kingston has done so well that proposals are in the works for a 240,000 sq. ft. building plus one 36,000 and one 23,000 as a possible alternative to a "two story building housing two 160,000 sq. ft. stores (Patriot Ledger 2/8/94). Unbelievable, but not impossible, here.

Should these enterprises not succeed, the companies can close the doors and write off the loss. The town gets to salvage a white elephant.

Many bemoan the empty storefronts in the village. Unfortunate, and 3A has played a part — witness the recent regrettable loss of Colonial Pharmacy. Do we want it this way?

Our concern hasn't altogether to do with "shopping" nor with "convenience". It has to do with what sort of town we want to have. It has to do with what sort of town we want to be, for we are the town, and the town is our hallmark.

Many people only know Cohasset from driving through and shopping along Route 3A. Will 3A become our hallmark?

We have inherited a town of unique natural beauty, a working harbor industry, a genuine New England central village, a town with a history, and a comfortable place in which to live. Will we be able to pass along this heritage, the heritage that was given to us?

Daniel C. Cotton
27 King St.

Community help is appreciated

To the Editor:

We are writing in an attempt to publicly thank the Cohasset Firefighters. Thursday, Feb. 3, assisted by firefighters from Hull and Scituate, they saved our home and possessions from a fire which threatened to ravage the entire structure.

These men performed their task with skill and bravery. They were considerate of our belongings, our treasured home (the grand old lady that she is), and our feelings. Several times during the ordeal the Chief took time to check on us, and to update us as to what was being done and why. The Cohasset Fire Department always has and will continue to have our complete support.

We would also like to take this opportunity to publicly thank the "mystery" lady, who while driving by the house, noticed the fire. She stopped her car and called the fire into the station on her cellular phone. She also rang our door bell and awoke our son, Ryan, who was asleep in the house. She quite likely saved his life and our home. We are all forever grateful to her and wish she would come forward so that we could thank her in person. We now affectionately refer to her as "Ryan's Guardian Angel."

Before closing we would like to thank all the people in Cohasset who took the time to express their concern for our family. It meant so much to us to receive the offers for lodging, help in cleaning up, the emotional support, etc. Our hearts are brimming over with gratitude and affection for each of you.

The John Bishop Family

Question of the week

Each week, the Cohasset Mariner will pose a question to the candidates. Responses to the question may be mailed to the Cohasset Mariner, 165 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield, MA. 02050. Or, they may be faxed to our editorial office: (617) 837-4843 or (617) 740-8955. All responses must be submitted by Tuesday noon. There will be no exceptions to this deadline.

Responses by the candidates must be brief - a 200-word limit. Be specific and make every word count.

If you have any questions about this election policy, please call editor Mary Ford at 749-0031.

The Question of the Week is:

- For school committee candidates: the public perception is that the school department is anti-DARE. Do you agree. Why or why not?
- Selectmen: the town could lose several popular stores currently in Cushing Plaza if Shaw's Supermarkets Inc. is successful in razing the shopping center in order to build a Shaw's there. What can you do to help alleviate the public's concern that popular stores like the Consignment Shop, Buttonwood, and Sea 'N Cheese may have to relocate to other towns?
- Planning board: what can the planning board do to see that Cohasset's character is preserved in light of the development planned for Rte. 3A?
- Water commission: should the water department be run by an outside contractor. Why or why not?
- Health board: do you think Cohasset should follow Norwell's lead and enact a total ban on smoking in all public places?

The following candidates responded to last week's Question of the Week:

What makes you the most qualified candidate for the office you are seeking?

Peter Pratt, selectman candidate

My professional experience in municipal management, education in governmental policy, record of achievement as a former town official and deep caring for Cohasset make me the most qualified candidate in the current contest for the Board of Selectmen.

Cohasset has moved beyond an era in which we can be governed successfully by colorful local characters, however well tolerated, or by our own equivalent of a political machine, however well entrenched. The important issues facing our community — the need for ever increasing fiscal efficiencies in town services, an intensifying pattern of commercial development along Route 3A, substantial threats to our public water supply, and the budgetary requirements produced by an expanding school age population — have to be managed strategically and professionally.

As a selectman, I will add my voice to those of our leaders who have a strategic vision for Cohasset. I will work with those who understand how the choices we make today in land use, taxation, regulatory and infrastructure developmental policies define our quality of life for tomorrow.

As a selectman, I will advance the professionalism with which we operate municipal agencies. We need a proactive plan to regionalize our fire, emergency medical, and new 911 services. We need management information systems which can deliver corporate style "customer service" support to taxpayers, and water/sewer ratepayers. We need personnel practices which reward achievement rather than perpetuate nepotism. We need a consolidated Department of Public Works, centralized purchasing processes, and competitive bidding for all contracted services.

Cohasset needs a strong modernization and reform effort. We need the strategic vision and management professionalism which I have represented in the past in Cohasset, and have been recognized for in my own governmental service.

JoAnne Chittick, school committee candidate

My experience as a parent, a volunteer in the Cohasset schools, and as a textbook editor make me exceptionally well qualified to serve on the School Committee. My three children (ages 21, 19, and 16) have been educated in the Cohasset schools, so I have seen the system from the perspective of a parent who wants our children to receive the best education possible.

I am aware of both strengths and areas that need improvement. Every year since my oldest child was in kindergarten (she is now a college senior), I have volunteered my time to a variety of school projects (the arts, reading, Great Books, P.S.O., athletic programs) to enhance the learning environment for students. While advocating the best interests of children, I have enjoyed good working relationships with teachers, principals, and other personnel at the Osgood, Deer Hill, and Jr./Sr. High Schools.

My experience as an editor of educational materials (primarily textbooks) at the elementary and secondary levels has given me a knowledge of curriculum issues and effective teaching approaches.

I can put all this experience to good use as a member of the School Committee.

Daniel S. Evans, school committee candidate

The state Education Reform Act of 1993 made sweeping changes in the management of Massachusetts public schools. However, the fundamental issues facing our schools remain, and are difficult. My analytical skills, judgment, creativity and legal training and experience best qualify me to contribute to meeting these challenges within the new framework.

The Education Reform Act generally diminished the power of local school committees in favor of superintendents, principals and school councils. The School Committee's responsibilities now include hiring the superintendent, approving the budget, negotiating union contracts, establishing teacher performance standards, approving school development plans, considering school choice participation, and establishing goals

Within this new framework, the School Committee must provide the leadership to produce schools that encourage all children to reach their potential, and that prepare them for the challenges of the future. Aging facilities must be maintained. Teacher development must be encouraged. Curricula must focus on basics, yet evolve to meet changing needs. Technology must mesh with curriculum. Extra-curricular activities must complement the lessons of the classroom.

Meeting these goals while maintaining fiscal efficiency will require careful analysis, attention to priorities and creativity. My skills and experience will make a valuable contribution.

James C. Kirk, school committee candidate

Cohasset will benefit from my experience, my skills, and my motivation if I'm elected to the School Committee.

My experience is extensive in both business and education. I hold a graduate degree in curriculum development, have taught high school science for five years, and continue to be active in developing new educational programs. My 20-year business career includes managing major departments and budgets in both large and small companies. I have been responsible for leading numerous committees, including the Cohasset Regional School District Planning Committee.

My skills include the ability to analyze complex problems and to organize and lead teams to solve those problems. My ability to get the most from a team effort will be critical to helping Cohasset make the best use of its key resources: involved parents and competent teachers.

My motivation to contribute to the Cohasset school system stems from both the excellent experience my two older daughters have had while in the Cohasset schools, and the fact that my youngest is now a first-grader at Osgood. I would like to say "thank you," and at the same time help the schools offer the greatest possible value to both the students and the town.

Dean Rizzo, planning board candidate

I feel the education I received in college and the many building and planning experiences I have obtained through my current work gives me a unique balance of knowledge which I am eager to contribute to the Planning Board and the Town of Cohasset.

I am a graduate of the Univ. of Massachusetts with bachelors in economics and sociology. The combination of these degrees gives me the unique understanding of the importance to have a successful balance of economic and social growth within a community. I have been self employed in the building industry for the past seven years and currently own Aquarius Sunrooms, Inc., located in Braintree. In my involvement in the residential and commercial building and land development industry I have attained a wide array of experience working with clients and cities and towns regarding such issues as building permits, zoning variances, DEQE, and conservation guidelines. My experience has shown me the value of compassion, fairness, and compromise when dealing with the many delicate issues regarding building and planning.

Bill Good, planning board candidate

As an active member of the planning board during the past five years, I have gained tremendous knowledge working closely with former member Dan Cotton as well as the current board. Because I study the issues and listen carefully to all sides, it has been noted that I exhibit professionalism, leadership, excellent communication skills and an outstanding commitment to the town.

Clearly there is no substitute for my experience on the board coupled with my demonstrated ability to look objectively at the planning and development issues facing Cohasset. Additionally, I am considered to be an excellent listener, strong problem solver, and focused planner.

Going forward, I will continue to be very accessible. I will continue to take the necessary hard look at the issues. Most importantly, I will continue to make studied recommendations which take into consideration the respective interests of the highway business, light industry, downtown business and residential districts.

I hope to be re-elected and prove once more my unfailing dedication to the make-up, well-being and character of Cohasset. I am grateful for my first successful term and I trust that my enthusiasm, energy and credentials make me most qualified to serve the town again.

Mark Bell, water commissioner candidate

Bell is employed by Boston University in the Technical Operations department. He designs and installs equipment for systems as well as trains and supervises operators in B.U.'s communications facilities.

For 20 years, Bell has worked as an overall systems engineer in electric, electronic a l electromechanical applications. The nature of his work, and success, requires him to be a "buck-stops-here" problem solver.

When water department employees talk to Mark about the system, he knows what they're talking about. In fact, he's applied to patent a water regulation device for homeowners.

Bell has a B.S. degree in communications from Emerson, is a certified speech teacher, and writes monthly for Television Broadcast magazine, a top industry publication.

Bell is registered with two EPA computer bulletin boards providing state-of-the-art information about water use issues, is an INTERNET user (mbell@acs.bu.edu), as well as an integrator/instructor of computer operations to computer information administrators.

Since 1992 he's served as Chairman of the Cohasset Title 5 Transition Study Committee. Bell spoke at the State's T-5 hearings and maintains an ongoing relationship with DEP personnel.

Bell was the only water commission candidate present at the last three public, controversial water department meetings.

(See page 12)

Question of the week

What makes you the most qualified candidate for the office you are seeking?

Fred Koed , water commissioner candidate

The Water Department is in turmoil. Watershed protection is vital. Water Department customers and Cohasset taxpayers rightly deserve, and should demand, clean water and quality service.

Tough times demand both strong leadership and broad experience. There is no question that the next Water Commissioner would benefit from having served on several town committees, such as my combined ten years of service on two town boards: the Advisory Committee and the Housing Authority.

In addition, I firmly believe that the next Water Commissioner should have extensive budgeting experience. My five years on the Advisory Committee, the last two as Chairman, provided me with this experience. I have literally spent hundreds of hours in Advisory Committee meetings discussing budgets, making revenue projections, and deciding critical issues facing the town, including those of the Water Department.

Nor am I a stranger to Town Meeting. As Chairman of the Advisory Committee, I represented this board on the floor of both Annual and Special Town Meetings, gaining invaluable public speaking experience in the process.

Candidates meet March 9

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce has scheduled its annual "Candidates Night" forum for March 9.

The forum will be held at the South Shore Arts Center beginning at 7:30 p.m. Each of the candidates for elected office will be given the opportunity to outline their positions and those presentations will be followed by open questions from the audience. The forum will also be televised live on cable and will be taped for later showing.

Bill Good, candidate for planning board election

Planning Board Vice Chairman Bill Good, a sales and marketing executive in the health care industry, has announced his candidacy for re-election. A resident of Cohasset for the past eighteen years, Good has been involved in many community activities over the years and served the town as a member of the Personnel Committee for three years prior to his election to the Planning Board. He has currently served on the Planning Board for five years and has been Vice Chairman for the past two years.

In his re-election statement, Good said he has accomplished much of what he set out to do in his first term and has shown vision and leadership. "I wish to serve another term on the Planning Board because I believe my background, knowledge of the town, and five years' Board experience qualify me uniquely for the position," he said. "It takes anyone a couple of years on the Board before one is fully effective and learns the intricacies of the Zoning Bylaw as well as the Board's inter-relationship with other town boards and the community. I feel I can continue to give the time, experience and energy that the townspeople and the Board deserve right now.

"There are several important issues coming before the Board in the near future, including the supermarket face off on Route 3A, and how these issues are addressed is of significant importance," he said. As a public service to the town, the Planning Board needs members who are relentless in their attempts to learn the facts, listen to all sides and address the considerable issues of the 3A Business District, the village community and the citizens of the town, Good said. "I always try to be completely objective in dealing with issues such as the prospect of two supermarkets coming before the Board. I feel that I can fully appreciate and represent the various interests of the population because there are three generations of our family living and working in town, regularly discussing the major issues affecting Cohasset. Additionally, I have lived in three different areas in town over the past eighteen years, allowing me to feel very knowledgeable of the common interests of Cohasset today and the Cohasset of fifty years from now," he added.

In talking with people throughout Cohasset, Good stressed that he has continually heard people saying that they want to live in a town with a healthy economy, with controlled growth and development and particular consideration of the town's aesthetics, traffic patterns, and common grounds. "I also want to live in that sort of a town, and I know it can be achieved through good planning," Good enthused. "What the Planning Board decides during the next five years is what the town will look like years hence, so the Board literally shapes the future. The Planning Board members must satisfy the very demanding and, not coincidentally, very well-regarded town of Cohasset and understand the value of that old cliché about delivering tomorrow today."

Bill Good graduated from Boston Latin School and Saint Anselm College. He and his wife, Betsy Reardon Good, a teacher at the Cohasset Community Center Nursery School, live at 269 Atlantic Ave. with their three children, Julie, 17, Elizabeth, 15, and Billy, 12, all of whom attend Cohasset Schools.

Mary Noonan Grassie, housing authority candidate

Mrs. Betty Grassie is a lifelong resident of Cohasset.

See seeks, through this election, to become a member of the Cohasset Housing Authority as a Tenant Advocate.

According to Mrs. Grassie, "The Commonwealth's Department of Community Affairs encourages town housing authorities to appoint tenants as Members of the Local Housing Authority."

Mrs. Grassie says most surrounding towns presently have a resident of their complex as a representative on their local board. "I believe we should have a responsible voice in the day-to-day business activities of the board."

Mrs. Grassie graduated from Cohasset High School in 1939. She attended the Perry Kindergarten Normal School, married Paul A. Grassie of Cohasset in 1941. Mr. Grassie, a Cohasset Firefighter, died in 1975.

Mrs. Grassie is a former town election officer of Cohasset, retired with 30 years of service. She was the first director/teacher of the Cohasset Community Center Nursery school, with 17 years of service. She was Director of Wilder Memorial Nursery School in Hingham for 20 years. And she was employed as a customer representative with the Talbots for 8 years.

A resident of Harborview apartments at 60 Elm Street, she is active in the COA and Friends of COA as a liaison from Harborview.

She has two children, Richard and Carol, and six grandchildren.

Her father, Maurice R. Noonan, was a former Cohasset Town Treasurer. Her mother, Catherine D. Noonan, was a former Assistant Town Treasurer. Her nephew, Brian Noonan, is Cohasset Police Chief.

Hoopsters await first tourney opponent

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Cohasset High may find itself matched against an old nemesis when the No. 1 seed in the Division 3 South Sectionals takes the court on Saturday in the quarterfinal round in its first game.

The Skippers (18-2) will be playing the winner of the March 2 game between South Shore League champion Norwell and Medfield. As of Wednesday morning, the location of the quarterfinals had yet to be announced.

Norwell beat Cohasset 65-62 in their first meeting during the season, but the Skippers came back to whip the Clippers by 20 points to win the second game decisively.

But no matter who Cohasset is paired with, head coach Ron Ford knows his squad will have to jump out of the gates early and avoid falling behind in the opening minutes.

"We have to come out very strong in our games and establish ourselves early," Ford said.

The Skippers got off to slow starts in both games of the Hall of Fame Tournament during February vacation, losing to Cardinal Spellman 69-47 in the opening contest, before putting together a strong comeback to down B.C. High in the consolation game.

Ford fully expects the games to be more defense-oriented compared to those of the regular season. "We're going to see more pressure defenses in this tournament," he said.

The Skippers' strengths lie in their size and the balanced scoring attack. Joe Slotnick led Cohasset with 13 points per game and seven rebounds. Matt Pearce had a 10-point average off the bench, while both Pete Bishop and Dorian Bryant were good for nine points and nine rebounds each outing.

Cohasset will have to bide its time looking for the open man and try to work the ball into the low post as much as possible. The full-court press, Ford said awaits his team, could make getting the ball down low all the more difficult.

If Medfield beats Norwell, Ford anticipates a close game against a squad that matches up well with Cohasset.

Unlike last year's open tourney when they had to win three games to reach the semifinals, Cohasset needs one victory

Pembroke's Eric Flaim is not going to Disney World just yet but he did turn in a solid performance at the '94 Winter Games at Lillehammer, earning a silver medal as part of the 5,000 meter short-track skating relay team.

It was Flaim's second silver medal. In the '88 Olympic Games at Calgary he finished second in the 1,500 meter speedskating event.

In this Olympics, Flaim switched from speedskating to short-track skating, an entirely different sport.

On Saturday, Flaim skated the anchor leg in the relay and his performance gave the USA its 13th medal, the most ever for a Winter Olympics.

He was also entered in the individual 500 meters and 1,000 meters. He did not medal in either.

However, he was pleased to gain his second medal in his second sport.

Flaim told the Boston Globe, "Two silvers in two different sports is definitely exciting. Somebody said I now have to switch to figure skating and go for the Triple Crown."

Flaim may have had more Olympic medals if it wasn't for a case of food poisoning at the '92 games in Albertville. His poor showing at the '92 Games led to a switch to short-track skating.

In the 5,000 meter relay, Flaim was grouped with Randy Bartz, John Coyle and Andrew Gabel.

Flaim's anchor leg ensured the silver for the USA as he held off a furious late charge by the Australian skater.

"I just said, 'No way he's going to get by me," Flaim said.

Flaim, 26, and an '85 graduate of Silver Lake, probably competed in his last Olympic Games. He is not certain if he will be physically and mentally able to compete in the next Olympics, which is four years away.

With the United States hockey team's abysmal eighth-place showing in the Olympics, it has become clear the "Dream Team" format must be looked into soon by the N.H.L. and Olympic officials.

For several years now, the N.H.L. has tried desperately to promote the league and increase its popularity among television viewers. A "Dream Team" would be the perfect vehicle.

For starters, the N.H.L. would receive a portion of the T.V. revenue generated by the Olympic coverage. Not only would the interest be huge in this country, but around the world as well. The Russians would be in the medal hunt again, while Canada's roster could possibly include Patrick Roy, Ray Bourque, Wayne Gretzky, Cam Neely, Mario Lemiuex (if he recovers from his back injuries) and Mark Messier.

And don't count out the Americans. Tom Barasso, locals Kevin Stevens, Jeremy Roenick, Kevin Stevens, Tony Amonte and Ted Donato, Joe Sacco, Bob Sweeney and Ted Drury would surely make a better showing than the team that represented the U.S. in Lillehammer.

Sure, the Olympics come just past the Freeman, Church on to New Englands

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

The first battle will be getting through the battering of snow that's supposed to blanket most of New England.

The second, and more important, fight will take place on the mats for Cohasset wrestlers Ryan Freeman and Andy Church at this weekend's New England Wrestling Championships in Essex Junction, Vermont.

Freeman, who finished 2-2 in the New England meet last year qualified for this winter's competition by taking sixth place in the 125-pound weight division during the Feb. 26 All-States in Wayland.

Head coach Torin Sweeney said the 125-pound class is considered the toughest in the state because of the number of wrestlers who returned from last season.

"He (Freeman) just proved he's one of the best in the state," Sweeney said of Freeman's top-6 finish.

Church finished fifth in the state meet and eighth in the All-States, qualifying him as an alternate for the trip to Essex Junction.

All five of Cohasset's wrestlers won at least one match at the Feb. 19 state meet.

Freeman lost a close 2-1 decision in the finals to the defending state champion and Church was eliminated in the quarterfinals by the eventual state champ, 4-2.

Kevin Duffy (103) split his four matches, 2-2, while Brandon DeVoe (145) and Scott Theriault (152) each won a match.

Four swimmers selected to All-Star team

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

It was a bitter-sweet end to the Cohasset High swim team for head coach Linda Henderson as the Skippers finished a strong third in the six team Pilgrim Conference championship at the Lincoln-Hancock Pool in Quincy.

"It was a very exciting season," said Henderson, who expects up to 18 swimmers back for next winter's season. "In a way it's very sad because Dave Leahy's leaving marks the last swimmer on the original team, five years ago.

Leahy made the most of his final meet as he lowered his own conference record in the 100-meter Breaststroke, surging to a 1:06. Leahy was one of four Skipper swim team members picked for the All-Star team.

Tim Brister, Greg Bilton and Lauren DeVito were also chosen to the squad.

Just an eighth-grader, Bilton almost gave Cohasset its second league record of the meet as he came within one second of the mark in the 200-meter Individual Medley. Bilton also finished second in the Butterfly.

DeVito competed in both the 200-meter and 500-meter Freestyles and went on to finish sixth and fourth, respectively, in each event at the Eastern Mass. Sectionals.

Henderson also has high hopes on seventh-grader Brendan Boyle, who finished sixth in the diving competition in the conference meet.

Becky Golden, who co-captained the team with Leahy, was acknowledged by Henderson for her performances as a member of the boys squad.

"I really feel Becky hasn't received the recognition she deserves because she's a girl swimming in a boys league," Henderson said.

Henderson said she hopes the swim program continues to grow, and with the town's strong summer program, believes the team will flourish in the coming seasons.

Henderson went on to say she would like to eventually see a cover placed on the town pool.

She explained it would serve as a good place for teenagers to congregrate on Friday and Saturday nights. Activities could be planned for teenagers and adults alike, and the pool would be an excellent training facility for the swim team.

Lewis hat trick leads Sharks

By Bob Hatch
Special to the Mariner

The Sharks express continued its roll through the Metro League with victories over the Lowell Jr. Chiefs at home and then on the road against the Worcester Crusaders at Holy Cross College.

Against Lowell, the Sharks were simply awesome. As has been the case throughout the season, it's never the same line two games in a row doing the bulk of the scoring. This week it was the Bay State Blue Line of Greg Osborne (Stoughton), Brian Lewis (Cohasset) and Scott McGinn (Hingham). The Sharks scored early when Osborne converted a pass from Lewis and McGinn. When "Thumper" got his second goal of the shift from Lewis and Scotty Sparks (Norwood), the flood gates were opened. The defensemen got very much involved in the Sharks scoring spree, too. Kenny Roche (South Boston) went point to point with Garret Daigler (Hingham). Garret walked in and fired from the top of the right circle for the score.

Defenseman Ryan Hatch (Hanover) got his first of three assists when he sent a streaking Pat Devine (Hingham) in alone for the Sharks' fourth tally. The Blue Line got back into the scoring action when Matt Bourassa (Somerset) and McGinn helped Osborne complete his hat trick followed by two more Blue Line goals by Lewis. The first was from Sparks and McGinn, the second from Bobby Noonan (Marshfield) and Hatch. Brian Boyle (Hingham), after landing one of the biggest hits of the day, sent Roche away for the Sharks' eighth goal.

The Sharks continued the onslaught. Lewis completed his hat trick and Dave Saggese (Hingham) had a beautiful unassisted goal late in the game.

While his teammates were loading up one net with pucks, "Dr. Zero" a/k/a John Lynch (Hingham) was busy at the other end, keeping every shot out of his net. Lynchy came up big and so did his teammates with a 12-0 win.

When the Sharks went on the road to Holy Cross, they did so knowing they were going without high scoring centers Dunn and Boyle as well as solid defenseman Daigler. What they didn't know is they were also going without a goalie. With both Sharks' goalies at home thinking the other was playing, the team was faced with a major problem: No goalie.

As it turned out it was no problem. Noonan stepped in between the pipes and it looked like he'd been there all his life. After a shaky start, while getting used to his new equipment, Bobby was nothing short of magnificent. Bobby came up big in the third period when he stopped Worcester twice, point blank. Up until that point it was anybody's game.

The Sharks tied the game at one when Devine and Osborne teamed up for Pat's first of two goals. McGinn tied the game 2-2 after the Hanover duo of Chris Coady and Hatch combined to get the puck to McGinn.

Devine got his second of the game with help from Osborne and Roche to knot it up again.

Defensemen Bourassa and Sparks were doing a great job containing the Crusaders in their own end, but the Sharks needed some goals. They got them as the Sharks were on a rapid fire assault scoring five unanswered goals, one by Ray Ortiz (Charlestown), two by Osborne. And when Chris Follett (Hanover) and Coady assisted Lewis on his second goal the Sharks won 8-3 and moved back into sole possession of first place atop the MBHL.

The league championship is up for grabs. It will probably come down to one of three teams. The Bay State Sharks, South Shore Kings, or North Shore Raiders. The Sharks' remaining home games are: North Shore Raiders, March 5, 11:40 a.m. at Hobomock Arena; Boston College Jr. Eagles, March 13, 9:10 a.m. at Pilgrim Arena; South Shore Kings, March 20, 9:10 a.m. at Pilgrim Arena.

half-way point of the N.H.L. season, but why not have a three-week break from games. What's the difference? Injured and battered players would have an opportune time to heal (see Joey Juneau) and coaches could work on their team's weaker areas, making them better squads when play resumed. It appears to be a win-win situation all around.

The N.H.L. has to act fast. Four years is not a long time and the next Winter Olympics will be here sooner than we know.

The Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association showed its true colors last week when it suspended the Weymouth High girls' one-mile relay team from competing in the state championship because its uniforms weren't all identical. Apparently, one of the uniforms had an extra stripe or something.

When the ruling was handed down, the MIAA said the Weymouth runners couldn't even appeal their ruling. See ya, thanks for the effort girls.

However, once the incident hit the papers and State Education Commissioner Robert Antonucci called the decision, "fundamentally absurd," the MIAA sang a different tune and overturned its decision.

The MIAA also reinstated the Medford girls' one-mile relay team and the Dedham boys' two-mile relay team who also had uniform violations and were suspended. Their crimes were wearing spandex shorts underneath their regular shorts. Oh my gosh.

The MIAA ought to look at the big picture in high school sports as opposed to being mean meter maids who hand out tickets just as the quarter runs out.

There are bigger issues, such as the need for a shot clock in boys' hoop, that the MIAA should be dealing with. Silly little things like suspending someone for wearing spandex only erodes its rice paper credibility.

Silver Lake senior Amy King notched her 1,000th point in her final regular season game on Thursday against Bridgewater-Raynham.

The 5'11" Pembroke center reached the milestone on a jumper from the right baseline early in the second half.

King started all four years at Silver Lake and led the Lakers to a 14-6 record this season and a second place position in the Old Colony League. The Lakers open in the Division I South state tourney this week.

She is the first female at Silver Lake to hit 1,000 points. King also scored all her points with defenses geared towards stopping her.

She has a full scholarship to Assumption College.

In addition to her skills on the court, she is in the top ten in her class and is an all-star in softball.

When Amy King attends Assumption College in Worcester in the fall she will be taking the place of Marshfield's Jen Harrington.

Harrington, a 5'11" senior center, leads the Lady Hounds in scoring with 15.7 points per game, rebounding at 12.8 per game, field goal percentage with a .503 mark and 57 blocks.

Harrington has 1261 career points, second in school history, and 1071 rebounds, third in school history.

Like King, Harrington, also excels in the classroom. She has a 3.6 GPA with a major in Politics and a minor in History.

This week Harrington leads the Lady Hounds into the first round of the NE-10 Playoffs.

How can anyone honestly believe Stoneham's Nancy Kerrigan was slighted when she had to settle for the silver medal after the Ukraine's Oksana Baiul's performance?

All we heard about leading into these Olympics was Nancy's knee, Nancy's mental toughness, Nancy's single-minded determination and Nancy's composure.

I agree that Kerrigan's comeback was a courageous one, no doubt.

But what about about Baiul?

There was hardly a peep from that ingratiating Kerrigan sympathizer, Scott Hamilton, about Baiul's collision with another skater the day before the long program. Scotty was too busy gushing over Kerrigan to bother much with Baiul.

And if I had to see Kerrigan's mother viewing the figure skating on the special T.V. monitor one more time, I was going to put my foot through our family's own T.V.

As for handling pressure, Baiul was every bit the equal to Kerrigan. All the 16-year-old Ukranian did was get a blast of Olympic-approved pain killer and go out and beat Kerrigan with a near flawless performance. I don't know much about figure skating, but it looked to me like Baiul won.

Kerrigan finally put her foot in her mouth when, on the medal podium, complained that Baiul would just start crying again when she accepted her medal. She was experiencing back pain, Nancy. You didn't exactly hold back the tears when you got the pipe off the knee.

By that point though, it really didn't matter much to me anyway. I was heating up the popcorn in anticipation of Katarina Witt's final Olympic performance.

Only Witt could keep me tuned in on a Friday night, waiting patiently while that dredge Tonya Harding made a fool of herself for the umpteenth time.

But it was all worth the wait when Katarina finally took the ice and skated her routine. And yes, I had plenty of Diet Coke on ice.

to reach that round.

But despite the Skippers' No. 1 seed, Ford is by no means approaching the tournament with a laissez—faire attitude. More than anyone, he is aware how tough the Carvers, Norwells, Rocklands and Cardinal Spellmans can be.

"Of the 13 teams, 10 are very solid," Ford said. "There are few very easy games in front of any team in this sectional.

"You have to come out and play."

Youth baseball sign-ups

Registration for all levels of youth baseball including Farm League, Minor League, Major League, Senior Little League, Senior Babe Ruth League and/or American Legion Baseball for youngsters ages 6 to 18, will be held at Cohasset High School from 10:30 a.m. to noon Saturday, March 5 and 12.

All registrants should be prepared to complete the application, pay the application fee and produce a non-returnable copy of his or her birth certificate. These will be the final opportunities for registration. Registration was rescheduled due to inclement weather.

Swim for Sight' slated for March

'Hundreds of swimmers will take the plunge for the Sixth Annual Swim for Sight pledge swim, benefiting two organizations devoted to eye research. Swim for Sight '94 will be held at three Greater Boston sites Saturday, March 12 and Sunday, March 13 from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Proceeds will benefit The Schepens Eye Research Institute, which pioneered the event, and this year for the first time will also benefit the Massachusetts Lions Eye Research Fund, Inc. The event is a fun way for families, friends and coworkers to enjoy some activity for a good cause — fighting blindness.

Swimmers of all skill levels will "get in the swim" by collecting pledges and swimming laps at one of the three Swim for Sight '94 locations: Boston College, Chestnut Hill; Salem State College, Salem; and Bridgewater State College, Bridgewater (Sat. only). Individuals and teams may obtain pledge forms or register by calling 1-800-577-SWIM before March 1. There will be special prizes for individuals and teams gathering large pledge totals, and all swimmers bringing in the $50 minimum pledge will receive a Swim for Sight T-shirt.

Annual Tour de Cure set

Area cyclists are already hitting the road to "gear up" for the American Diabetes Association's Annual South Shore Tour de Cure. This cycling event for all ages and abilities will take place Sunday, May 22, starting at the Marshfield Fairgrounds at the junction of Route 3A and South St. in Marshfield.

Tour de Cure offers participants a choice of three loops with distances of 25 miles, 50 miles or 100 kilometers. Rider check-in is from 8-9:30 a.m., with a "Show and Go" starting format. The South Shore route follows the back roads of Marshfield, Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell and Duxbury, with beautiful scenes of the coastline.

There is a $15 registration fee for Tour de Cure, plus a $50 pledge minimum. To sign up as a rider or volunteer for the tour, call 1-800-888-TOUR.

TOWN MEETING AND ELECTION

Whether March comes in like a lion or a lamb, the COA knows that it brings with it Town Meeting Saturday, March 26, at the Cohasset High School and Town Elections the following Saturday, April 2, at Town Hall. The Town Meeting and elections mark critical moments for all of us. We ask for your continued support both by attending the Town Meeting and voting on Election Day the following week. We can all benefit by participating in the process of Annual Town Meeting. If anyone is in need of a ride to either the Town Meeting or to the polls, please call the Council on Aging, 383-9112, and we will arrange transportation for you.

Also please plan on attending the Candidates Luncheon Tuesday, March 29, from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Reservations can be made by calling 383-9112.

LUNCHEONS TUESDAY & THURSDAY

Come to the Center and enjoy good food and friendship. We would like to remind everyone that the meal policy states that reservations for congregate meals must be made by noon of the previous day; late reservations will be taken if food is available. The policy also states that cancellations should be called in by 9 a.m.

There are some problems with late cancellations or "no shows" (people who never even call to say they can't come). Weather is a big factor, but please let the COA know. If you have made a reservation for lunch and are unable to attend, please call Marguerite so your spot can be filled. The Council has to pay for all meals, even if people don't show up. Meal donation is $1.50.

TUESDAY LUNCHEONS PROGRAM

March 8

Dawn Burbank from Walgreens Pharmacy. Video about "Living With Angina."

March 15

Noon, St. Patrick Day luncheon. Glenshane Irish Folk Duo, Jean McIntosh and John Nesbitt.

March 22

Martha Hurtig, Chairman of Costumes and Textiles, Cohasset Historical Society, will bring six quilts and tell about their history.

March 31

Birthdays of the Month.

SAINT PATRICK'S DAY SPECIAL CELEBRATION

COA will again this year host our annual corned beef boiled dinner with cabbage, potato, carrots and onion, topped off with a Leprechaun surprise. Dinner will be prepared by our own Carmine and will be followed by a wonderful concert of Irish music by the Glenshine. John Nesbitt hails from the lovely County Derry in Northern Ireland and Jean McIntosh is a native New Englander. The Glenshane's striking vocal harmonies are enhanced by their own use of several instruments including guitar, bass, harmonica, penny whistle, and piano melodica. This program is supported, in part, by funding from the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

Save this date: March 15, 11:30 a.m to 2:20 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Avenue. Tickets are $10 and include full luncheon, entertainment, dancing and prizes. Tickets are available through COA, 383-9112.

Workshop for children

Artist Nancy Connolly will conduct a two-part workshop at the library Tuesday, March 8, and Thursday, March 10, from 3:30 to 5 p.m. The workshops will involve creating rod-puppets from Chinese folktales. which will be read to the children.

These stories, rich in detail, delight the active imaginations of schoolchildren. The Weaving of a Dream, for example, depicts the character of an old Chinese woman. After listening to the folktales, children create puppets with rods, fabric and clay. Children for the first to the fifth grade may sign up at the library. They must attend both sessions to complete their puppets. Class size is limited to 20.

The workshop is provided by the Paul Pratt Memorial Library and the Cohasset Arts Lottery. Admission is free. Call 383-1348 or sign up at the library.

Photos on display

A reception was held at the library Feb. 12 to celebrate the opening of a photography exhibit by Lynne Layman. The exhibit, United Germany in Transition, will be on display through April. Ms. Layman's friends provided refreshments, flowers and music for the reception.

Daffodil days for cancer, March 22-27

As many as 150,000 golden daffodils will burst into bloom in nine South Shore communities to greet spring, March 22-27, as the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society stages its annual Daffodil Days to benefit the research, education and service programs to cancer patients throughout the area.

"Last year people here bought over 130,000 daffodils, plus attractive vases to help us raise $66,000 and we hope to do better this year," said Pauline Sweeney of Quincy, who with her husband Dennis, again heads this year's effort. "It is a wonderful way to greet spring with the flower of hope and help fight cancer."

Many businesses and professional people support the effort by purchasing the flowers and giving them to customers and clients. Schools, nursing homes and public offices also find them an attractive way to brighten up the premises while aiding a good cause.

Advance orders are being taken up to March 11 for the bright yellow blooms and volunteers will be delivering and selling them beginning March 22. Orders may be placed by calling the South Shore Unit office, 341-4210.

A bouquet of 10 is $5, and a box of 500 is $250. A custom-designed vase is also $5. Orders for five or more bunches will be delivered by volunteers March 22 and 23, while pickup of smaller orders may be made at 15 CVS pharmacies in the area and other pickup spots beginning March 24.

The South Shore unit of the society carries on a program of help for cancer patients in Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Scituate and Weymouth. Some 1400 businesses and individuals have been called by volunteers for support.

Statewide it is expected that three million blooms will be sold with a goal of raising more than the nearly $1,000,000 raised last year. For the past several years, the South Shore Unit has topped all others in the state in Daffodil Days results.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
NORFOLK DIVISION
DOCKET NO. 94P0405E1

Estate of ARNOLD H. JENKS late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that CAROLYN JENKS of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK and DEBORAH JENKS of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK and EDWARD B. HAMLIN of LEXINGTON in the County of MIDDLESEX be appointed executors named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on April 6, 1994.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within fourteen (14) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, this twenty-second day of February, one thousand nine hundred and ninety-four.

Local artists part of celebration

International Women's Day is being celebrated by the Boston chapter of the Women's Caucus for Art and the Bunting Institute of Radcliffe College with an art exhibition. "Converging Paths," a display of small works, will be on view in the Maurine and Robert Rothschild Gallery at the Bunting Institute, 34 Concord Ave., Cambridge, until Friday March 18. Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 5 pm. Monday through Friday; and noon to 4 p.m. Saturday.

International Women's Day honors the talents and concerns of women worldwide with lectures, seminars and cultural events.

Exhibiting artists have made this show possible by contributing their work which will be on sale for $150 or less. Money raised will go to the Boston chapter of the Women's Caucus for Art and to Rosie's Place.

An opening reception will be held from 4 to 6 p.m. Sunday March 6.

Syma of Hingham and Claffy Williams of Cohasset are exhibitors.

"Driving Miss Daisy" auditions

Stetson Underground Theater will hold auditions for its spring production of "Driving Miss Daisy" at 3 p.m. Sunday March 13 at Wilder Memorial Hall, Hingham. Auditioners will read from the script.

Parts to be cast are one woman to play the elderly, elegant Miss Daisy, one mature black man to play the chauffeur Hoke and one middle-aged man for the part of Miss Daisy's son.

Production dates will be April 22, 23, 29, 30 and May 6, 7 and 8.

For information call Sherry Campbell at 383-2530.

Drama club auditions

Auditions for the spring production of the Cohasset Dramatic Club will be held at Cohasset Town Hall Saturday, March 5, 2 to 5 p.m., Sunday, March 6, 2 to 5 p.m., and Monday, March 7, 7 to 9 p.m.

The cast includes five men and three women for Neil Simon's "Prisoner of Second Avenue." Performance dates will be April 29, 30 and May 5, 6, and 7. Call Stephanie at 925-3648 for more information.

C.D.C. board meeting will be Monday, March 14, at 7:30 p.m. at the Grange Hall in Scituate.

Come to the cabaret!

Thirty talented adults and children will present a cabaret-style review featuring a variety of entertainment at 3 p.m. Sunday March 20 at the First Parish House, Main St.

this production will include the comedy team of Dick and Sally Wheeler; a Class A barber shop quartet; and music from "Aladdin."

Well-known local soloist Jeanne Scammel is teaming up with fellow singers in three duets. Musicians in the pit include pianist Carolyn Curtis, drummer Mike Selig and clarinet-playing man Dave Whipple. This is a show for the entire family.

Saturday night's performance and dinner are sold out but tickets will be available at the door for the Sunday show.

Call the First Parish Church for information at 383-1100 between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

For more information about the trip, please call Joan Carr at 749-8103 or send your check made out to Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 1112 Main St., Hingham, 02043, by April 1.

Eldred Wheeler's Dining Room Packages
A Board Above the Rest

In order to create visually attractive surfaces, Eldred Wheeler uses only wide board construction. We search throughout New England for giant logs. These logs are then sawed to obtain maximum board width.The wood is carefully stacked and dried and only after it has reached the proper moisture content, is it ready to be used.

This time honored tradition is the thing of the past with most manufacturers.
This tradition is what puts Eldred Wheeler a board above the rest.

Override needed for fields, garage

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Residents could be asked to increase their taxes to pay for a new highway garage and high school athletic field.

Selectmen will decide at their meeting March 21 whether or not to schedule a special election for a debt-exclusion Prop. 2-1/2 override of close to $1.2 million to cover the combined cost of both projects, which must first be approved by town meeting.

There is not enough time between the March 26 town meeting and April 2 election to add the override questions to the ballot, selectmen explained.

A special election will cost the town about $3,000.

The new school field estimated to cost $800,000 would include an all-weather

Skippers on fast break to South title

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

The only time all winter, teams have had even a smidgen's chance of defeating the Cohasset High basketball team was when the Skippers got off to a slow start and weren't able to get in gear fast enough to get back into the game.

Cohasset's lackluster play in the early going resulted in both its losses. Cardinal Spellman got the better of the Skippers in February vacation's Hall of Fame Tournament and Norwell pulled it off earlier this season in South Shore League action.

So when the Skippers, a notoriously strong second-half club, led the Clippers 23-17 at the half of Saturday's Division 3 South Sectional quarterfinals, the outcome was inevitable.

Effort to be made to resuscitate cemetery committee, officials say

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

There may be a flicker of hope the town's cemetery committee could be brought back to life.

Three committee members, including chairman Glenn Pratt, sent letters of resignation to selectmen last week.

But after hearing an appeal from Richard Silvia who spoke to selectmen Monday about the cemetery committee's ongoing commitment and leadership in trying to solve the town's need for additional burial space — selectmen tabled acceptance of the resignations.

"I suggest you hold off on voting to accept the resignations until the possibility of getting interested parties to sit down and go over all things and options," Silvia said.

Two weeks ago, in a majority vote selectmen withdrew an article placed on the warrant asking for an easement over Red Fox Lane as access to a proposed new cemetery on town own land which abuts the new cul-de-sac.

The Rte. 3A subdivision owner David G. Mitchell opposes the easement. Pratt urged selectmen to leave the article in the warrant so it could be re-drafted in time for town meeting. But since Pratt could not guarantee there would be no easement over Red Fox Lane, selectmen voted to withdraw the article.

In his letter of resignation, Pratt wrote, "after careful consideration I have come to the conclusion that the purpose and

Hagerty meeting, tonight

Hagerty committee members urge Cohasset citizens to attend a public meeting on potential uses for the Hagerty Property at 7:30 p.m., tonight (Thursday March 10) in the selectmen's office.

The committee welcomes any suggestions on what should be done with the house and land. The site used to house Cohasset Colonials, a furniture kit manufacturer which relocated to Hingham after the town purchased the harborfront property last year.

Cohasset's week

Car, bike accident reported

A 17-year-old local youth was cited for failing to slow down for a bicyclist following an accident Sunday afternoon on Rte. 3A.

Tanya DeGeorge of Scituate struck Paul Trayers, 447 Beechwood St., at 12:47 p.m. March 6 as Trayers was riding a bicycle along King St.

Sgt. Robert W. Jackson said DeGeorge who was travelling north on Rte. 3A passed the bike but hit Trayers when she turned right into the Jonathan Livingston Seagull Square parking lot.

Trayers was transported to South Shore Hospital where he was treated and released.

Sidewalk plow sidelined

Highway Supt. Harold Litchfield said with any luck the town's sidewalk snowplow will be back in service by Friday (March 11).

He recently obtained approval of $9,000 in a transfer of funds from the advisory board to cover the cost of rebuilding the undercarriage and replace the track assemblies with new ones on the Bombadier Sidewalk Plow.

He explained the machine is 20 years old and is now only used for plowing sidewalks. Years ago it was used to backfill trenches and spread gravel but the town now has two loaders to do this, Litchfield said.

By rebuilding the tracks and adjusters on the old sidewalk plow, Litchfield doesn't think the town will need to purchase a new $60,000 Bomabdier in fiscal year 1996 or 1997.

Snow budget reddens

Highway Supt. Harold W. Litchfield said the town's snow deficit is now running close to $90,000. Towns can legally overspend their snow budget line items but the money must be made up on next year's budget.

Litchfield said this winter is a real record-breaker snow-wise.

"It's the worst I've ever had in 33 years," he said.

The Massachusetts Municipal Association, a cooperative organization representing its member cities and towns in legislative matters, notes the combined snow deficit for communities this year will easily exceed $25 million.

Live evergreen offered

Selectman Jane O. Goedecke has proposed that the town plant a live evergreen tree on the town common in the vicinity where the temporary tree was installed during the Christmas holidays.

She said the town may choose to decorate it for the different festivals that may occur.

Goedecke suggested the purchasing of the tree be accomplished through private donations but that may not be necessary. Robert V. Davenport, who attended the selectmen's meeting, offered to donate the tree.

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle suggested the board get input from the townspeople before going ahead with planting a tree.

Goedecke suggested people contact board members and let them know if they like the idea.

She noted that spring is the optimal planting time.

Bank buy-out could be good for commercial loan business

March 2, Cohasset Savings Bank (CSB) and Shawmut National Corporation announced an agreement that continues a takeover trend.

Smaller banks continue to be bought out by larger lending institutions.

The Bank of Boston recently purchased Multibank and other companies like Fleet Financial Group and Citizens Bank are trying to get into the action, industry officials say.

Shawmut tendered an acquisition offer to CSB for $16 cash per share for a total of $16.9 million. CSB has $78 million in assets and operates two branches in Cohasset and North Scituate.

Shawmut currently operates over 250 branches in three states and has holdings of nearly $27 billion.

The deal could eventually make CSB extinct and expand Shawmut's growth in the area.

But the current officers of CSB hope that the Shawmut takeover will be the right move for their towns.

Donald E. Bates, president and chief executive officer of Cohasset Savings Bank, thinks the move will be good for the area.

"They (Shawmut) offer a larger variety of services" than we do, he said.

And he added that Shawmut's ability to handle more commercial loans could provide for more growth in the area.

Bates added that the combination of resources "represents a very good business and community fit."

Bates declined to comment if he would remain with the bank after the transaction is complete.

Shawmut Chairman and CEO Joel Alvord said the agreement "neatly compliments Shawmut's branch network in the attractive South Shore.

"For Cohasset customers, we will offer the convenience and full product menu," he said.

Last fall there were reports of a possible merger of CSB with a number of local banks but none of those deals materialized.

The stockholders of Cohasset Savings will have to vote on future staffing and organizational changes before the agreement is finalized. The transaction is also subject to various regulatory approvals.

The closing date on the acquisition is scheduled for Sept. 30.

Ambulance billing update

In February the fire department billed for 31 actual ambulance transports for a total commitment of $9,615.12. The town received $5,729.01 during the same time period. For the year-to-date the town has $75,673.17 in commitments for ambulance service and has received $57,939.97, a collection rate of 76 percent, according to billing clerk Jane Henderson.

Sandy Beach activities

Robert Martin of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce told selectmen that this year's Harborfest, June 17-19 will include lots of activities on Sandy Beach. he said a sand castle contest is planned to be followed by an in-line skating demonstration, an ice cream festival, and boat races. The Hull Lifesaving Museum may also set up a breeches buoy demonstration. Martin said about 1/2 dozen vendors have already indicated they would like to participate in the ice cream festival.

Harry Trask leads the pack in a warm-up during an exercise class for senior citizens. The Council of Aging is surveying local men 60 and older to see what programs they'd like to see offered at the senior center. (Staff photo/J. Paul MacDonald)

Survey to find out what senior men want

The Cohasset Council on Aging hopes to find out why more men don't take advantage of the many programs and services offered by the senior center.

COA program coordinator for special projects Pat Ryan said last year 47 percent or 700 Cohasset residents over the age of 60 "came through the doors." Of that number the women outnumbered the men by about two-to-one, Ryan explained.

This week the COA is mailing a questionnaire to all Cohasset men 60 and older asking them to check off areas of concern and interest and any activities they would be like to participate in.

"We're not sure if men just don't need the senior center or if we're not offering what they need," Ryan explained.

The Cohasset COA isn't unique in attracting more females to its services and programs.

"It's a state-wide problem," Ryan said. She explained, however, that towns offered different programs which are popular with men and what works in one town may not work in another.

"There is no, one successful program being offered in the state for men," said Ryan who called senior centers in other towns for her research.

In Cohasset the most popular program with men is the Wednesday Breakfast Club in which a group of up to 30 men go out to breakfast every week. The Weymouth senior center has a pool table which is a hit with men, Ryan said. Another town has an investment club.

Ryan said the COA encourages all men 60 and older to fill out the questionnaire and mail it back as soon as possible. If anyone did not receive a survey, they should call 383-9112 to get one.

The Cohasset Social Service League paid for the cost of mailing the surveys.

Pleasant Street boxer to get one more chance

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

'Maui' a boxer-mix who lives on Pleasant Street, won a reprieve Monday from selectmen.

The dog can stay in town as long as it never roams loose outside its yard again.

"One call from the dog officer about it being loose and it will be removed from town," Selectman Merle S. Brown said.

Last week selectmen heard conflicting testimony about the dog's personality. Several of dog owner Matthew Fitzpatrick's neighbors said the dog acted in an aggressive and threatening manner while Fitzpatrick and another neighbor said the dog was gentle. The board took the matter under advisement.

Since the hearing, selectmen received two more letters regarding the dog.

Lisa Costa, 76 Pleasant St., said the dog had come into her yard on several occasions and had been aggressive.

"It seems crazy I can't let my children play in their own yard without having to worry if the dog is going to show up," she wrote.

Linda Keller, 2 Cushing Road, wrote that on two occasions her children had been frightened by the dog. Keller said she is a former boxer owner and is familiar with the breed. She said her dog "had to be tied up at all times when outside."

Over the objections of Costa, selectmen did not allow anymore testimony about the dog at their board meeting Monday because they had closed the hearing a week before.

The board decided to go along with the recommendations of Dog Officer William Quigley that the dog be on a leash at all times while being taken into and out of the house and that it be kept on a run in a fenced yard or pen.

"This is not something the owner can be at all casual about — this is it," Selectman Jane O. Goedecke said.

Goedecke also stressed that if people have complaints about dogs in town that they file those complaints with the dog officer.

"When you speak to us after the fact and with no contact with the dog officer, it is difficult for us to act," she said.

Town Counsel Richard A. Henderson explained that selectmen would not have to hold another hearing before banishing the dog from town should the dog get loose again.

Override needed for fields, garage

track and is proposed for land adjacent to the high school. Upwards of $350,000 will be needed to construct a public works garage on North Main Street near the Little League Fields.

Selectman Jane O. Goedecke stressed that the override questions are not intended for voters to decide on the merits of the projects but to ask their approval to pay for the cost of the projects through an override of the Prop. 2-1/2 tax levy. By law, towns can only raise their taxes by 2-1/2 percent without an override. A debt-exclusion override raises taxes only for the term of the debt while a general override is a permanent tax increase.

Advisory Board Chairman Nan Roth said this is a good time to borrow money for big projects. She explained that in two years the town's current debt service drops off considerably.

"We are in favor of going ahead and letting everyone have a chance to say they like (projects) or not," she said.

If funding of both projects passes muster with voters in the special election, the tax rate would increase by 20 cents per $1,000 of assessed valuation for the first year. That means the property taxes on a home assessed at $300,000 would increase by $60 in FY'95. That figure would gradually decline thereafter until the debt is paid off.

Roth suggested that a change in the town by-law is needed to spread the town election and town meeting further apart which would eliminate the need for special override elections.

Roth added that the town's $15 million operating budget will increase about 3 percent or $418,000 in FY'95. Other capital items will be paid for through borrowing and free cash, she said. The town does not need a general override this year to pay for increases in the operating budget, she said.

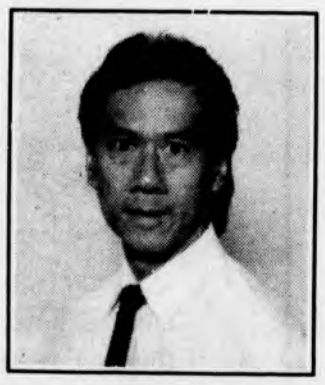
New help for children with learning problems

Norwell A free screening may find the cause of your child's learning problems. Some of the many symptoms displayed by children with learning disabilities often include:

- clumsiness
- concentration
- letter reversals
- forgetting what has just been read
- doing work slowly
- trouble copying
- careless errors
- avoidance of reading
- inability to sit still
- poor hand-eye coordination

HELP IS AVAILABLE
Now a team of professionals in the fields of vision, psychology, and education has developed a remarkable therapy program called VIP. This intense, one-on-one program attacks the causes of these problems and dramatically improves a child's ability to learn and the speed at which he learns. This unique program is now available by Dr. Han Dong, a practicing optometrist for 25 years.



Dr. Han Dong

FREE EVALUATION
There is a free screening for children between the ages of six and 16. It includes a series of 18 tests that measure concentration, visual memory, letter reversals, eye-hand coordination, visual learning, focusing, and sensory integration. After the screening is completed, you receive results and recommendations.

THE TIME TO ACT IS NOW
If your child is between six and 16 years of age, call us today at (617) 659-1444 to set up an appointment for a free screening. Can you afford to pass up the possible explanation for your child's baffling lack of success in school? This therapy is covered by most major insurance policies.
Call (617) 659-1444 to schedule screening.
Next screening dates: March 16 and 24.

Story hours at library

Registrations are currently being accepted for the spring story hour series at Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The series will begin March 24 and last for six weeks.

Sessions will be offered at 10 a.m. Thursdays and Fridays. Each 45-minute program consists of several picture book stories and simple fingerplays, songs and crafts. Children must be at least 3-1/2 to participate. To register, call the children's librarian at 383-1348.

Prize-winning books

There is a collection of Pulitzer Prize-winning books in the main lobby. The selection includes a number of popular works of fiction such as The Color Purple, Lonesome Dove and A Thousand Acres.

Photos on display

Lynne Layman's photography remains on display in the reading room.

Winter library hours

Hours at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library are: Monday and Tuesday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; closed Wednesday; Thursday and Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Sunday, 2-5 p.m.

Computer catalogs ready

All information formerly contained in the card catalogs at the Paul Pratt Library has been transferred to Public Access Catalog Terminals (PACT). There are explicit instructions next to the PACT and library staff are available to help those who resist anything and everything involving computers!

Financial aid info at library

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (D-Cohasset, Hingham, Hull) has distributed the "Handbook on Admission and Financial Aid at Independent Colleges in Massachusetts" to the town libraries.

The handbook informs students and parents how and when to apply for financial aid. It describes the state and federal programs and has admissions information and application deadlines.

Effort to resuscitate cemetery committee goals of my committee are at a variance with that of your board.

"I feel the dedication, time and effort the committee has expended over the last eight years have been a boondoggle," Pratt said.

Prior to the Red Fox Lane site, the cemetery committee investigated using a parcel of school property near Pleasant St. Problems arose with use of that property for cemetery purposes and the committee started looking for an alternative site.

"I'd hate to see all the work they've done and all their knowledge go down the drain because of frustration and deadlocks," Sylvia said.

'I feel the dedication, time and effort the committee has expended over the last eight years have been a boondoggle.'

— Glenn Pratt, cemetery committee chairman.

around town

by Sallyann Chatterton

❑ Get well soon wishes go to Gerard Keating! Gerard is one of the reasons why Cohasset is a such a special place. We hope to see you up and about soon, Gerard!

❑ We must begin by giving the Cohasset Skippers a huge ovation, they played an outstanding game last Saturday and will have played another when this is published for the week. Let's hope I'll be writing more winning news next week, but if not, you guys are already winners to us! Coach Ford and his wonderful team have given everyone a season to remember.

❑ How about thinking spring and one of its annual harbingers? Every year the Beechwood Congregational Church holds an Election Supper, candidates present, and this year on March 24 they are featuring roast beef, mashed potatoes, green beans, Harvard beets, cole slaw, rolls, dessert and beverages. All home-cooked, folks.

The cost is $6.99 for adults, $3.50 for the children. It will begin at 6:30 p.m. at the Congregational Church. Perfect idea, talk to your candidate and have a wonderful meal, and the kiddos always have a grand time too.

❑ It is sad to think of our town without George Hinchliffe in it. Remember how he walked that teensy dog all over the place (he was a tall man with a lot of presence)? George, we will miss you.

❑ We hope that Noel Edwards is feeling chipper these days, he loves to have visitors, so go see him.

Speaking of visitors, my husband Clark went to see Burt Pratt last week and Burt said that he is ever-soo-much better. Keep up the good work, Burt.

❑ Saw all of the George McCullough family the other day. Unfortunately under sad circumstances (his wife Anne's dad had just passed away), but they all looked like a million dollars. Joe is engaged, Jack has a beautiful girlfriend, and Meg looked so happy with her husband, Rick.

George and Anne are fine, and cannot wait to get to Ireland, where they own race horses. It was a happy-sad day, but so nice to see all of them.

❑ Oh boy, our own CHS artists have done it again! The annual Boston Globe Scholastic art awards is going to have eight students competing, having had their work accepted into the regional competition.

Andrew Henry, Susana Candia, Alyssa McNamara, Jarod Ford, Jessica Hurley, Christa Ansbergs, Holly Brennock and Renee Prisble were the students invited to submit their work, and two of the artists were awarded honorable mentions for their work.

Drum roll please, Andrew Henry and Alyssa McNamara, we applaud you! And all of you for your artistic talents and recognition for the same. Be proud.

❑ Attention everyone, Joyce Hoffman is going to be arrested March 16. She will be held at the Chart House Lock up, with her goal being to raise $500 for her bail, with all donations going to the Muscular Dystrophy Association to provide patient care for children and adults with muscle disease in the greater Boston area.

Help set her free. Send Joyce a donation at Hunneman/Coldwell Banker, 11 South Main St., Cohasset, 02025, Attn. Joyce Hoffman, or drop a donation at her office. Get Joyce out of "jail." Joyce is a good sport of course.

Good luck in your quest for bail, a most worthy cause.

❑ Polly Logan had a busy week. She met with Gov. William Weld and lots of Republican and civic leaders from Barnstable, Plymouth, Bristol and Norfolk Counties at the Plymouth Sheraton Hotel.

Gov. Weld spoke with civic leaders on issues concerning economy, crime, welfare and the environment.

When you see Polly, ask her to fill you in on the details, she is a governmental genius. And, one grand lady.

❑ Another newsworthy note about CHS sports, this time accolades 90 to the Swim Team. Under the direction of Linda Henderson, four swimmers were selected to the All-Star team. Da[illegible] Leahy, Greg Bilton, Tim Brister a[illegible] Lauren DeVito were all chosen for the squad, and we are truly in awe of you and your efforts. Wouldn't it be wonderful if we could cover our town pool someday soon, to enable them to practice and hold meets here.

And take a swim in mid-winter? Let's all work on that dream.

Sallyann

Freedom of choice

In a recent article on the phenomenon of "Generation X" — the demographic grouping of people in their 20s and early 30s — a Boston newspaper furnished an example of a young woman who didn't conform to the prevalent media stereotype of her generation.

Unlike her peers, who are portrayed by Hollywood, MTV and CNN as apathetic, nihilistic, disenchanted, and disenfranchised, the young woman presented herself as an example of a committed, engaged member of society. In fact, she told the paper, she had solemnly resolved "never to work for a company that makes a profit."

So she accepted a job at a "grassroots" non-profit group which puts pressure upon multinational corporations to be "socially responsible," social responsibility being defined as caving in to the constant carping of left-wing interests.

The latest illustration of their influence was the recent flap over R.J. Reynolds' "Joe Camel" advertising campaign.

Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders, armed with a dubious study of scientific pretensions, climbed atop her bully pulpit to denounce the campaign, stopping just short of calling for a ban on cigarette advertising altogether. In Elders' world, it is legal to advertise tobacco products, but should a campaign do its job too well, it will be singled out for public scorn.

Since cigarettes are a legal product, the tobacco industry long ago should have loudly announced that it is their goal to convince every person over the age of 18 to smoke like a chimney. But by letting the Perpetually Indignant define the debate, the manufacturers will forever be backpedaling.

Fast-food restaurants should also be learning this lesson. Caving in to the Food Police, McDonald's, Burger King and Wendy's agreed to lower the saturated fat content in their sauces and switch to cooking their french fries in vegetable oil.

Their reward for this good-will gesture? The militant vegetarian group Beyond Beef picketed McDonald's restaurants to demand the restaurant introduce a vegetarian burger, despite the fact that vegetarian meals such as salads already were part of the menu.

Anheuser-Busch ran afoul of the Perpetually Indignant for its "Spuds MacKenzie" campaign, which allegedly was recognizable by children. (Commercials which are persuasive to adults but remain undetected by minors watching the same TV set being, apparently, the Perpetually Indignant's preferred type of advertisement.) In outraged tones, the Perpetually Indignant informed us that studies determined that more tykes could identify Spuds MacKenzie than the president.

The obvious question being, so what? Most kids also recognize the Michelin Man, but you don't see mobs of toddlers making runs on steel-belted radials.

Miller Brewing Co., manufacturers of Molson Ice beer, is the subject of a recent FCC complaint that their latest brew is being marketed upon its elevated alcohol content — an FCC no-no. And with good reason: most people suck down a 12-pack so they'll be more lucid, articulate and mentally alert. Thank heavens we have the good bureaucrats at the FCC to alert us benighted consumers to the earth-shattering news that... beer makes you drunk.

The Perpetually Indignant long to patrol the lives of others. They are eternally hostile to the concept of society being shaped by the individual decisions of millions of consumers. They would prefer that a handful of bureaucrats dictate policy based upon pseudo-scientific studies reflecting the prevailing ideological trends.

Better to live in a society where some people make the wrong decisions, then in a society where no one is given the opportunity to exercise their freedom of choice.

Have 'duck feeders' gone south?

letters

To the Editor:

I hope your readers will remember back to last summer and fall when there was an issue raised which was quite important to some of us in town and was never resolved due to various reasons, some of which will be mentioned below.

The issue was feeding the ducks on the pond in the common.

This practice is not good for a number of reasons. First, it discourages the normal pattern of migration south which these black and mallard ducks have evolved over eons of time as a reliable survival strategy — to avoid having to spend a winter under the conditions we have experienced this year so far.

Second, it causes birds to bunch up and increases the spread of disease, and according to H. Heusmann of the Mass. Div. of Fish and Wildlife, encourages hybridization between black and mallard ducks which weakens the birds and effects their reproductive success.

Third, obviously the type of food fed is usually of little nutritional value and can often cause build up of grease in the bird's digestive track which can result in the death of the bird as the New England Wildlife Center in Hingham can attest to.

Fourth, the feeding activity can start quite simply with a few birds and feeders involved, then suddenly increase to include hundreds of birds which have caused traffic problems and fouled the area with their feces.

The thing which bothers me most as I sit here in Cohasset looking out on snow banks and frozen harbors and see small flocks of black and mallard ducks swimming around in whatever open water there is looking for food, is where are the people who may very well be responsible for the birds being here? Florida — some other nice warm place?

There are a few people in town who are helping as much as they can. A lady in the Lagoon section of Little Harbor, and someone living around the overflow parking lot belonging to the motel. You folks are doing a great job.

Late last summer the board of health rightfully tried to have some signs put up around the pond to educate the people as to the harm done by feeding the ducks and the potential health problem caused by a concentration of the birds.

Then the selectmen became involved and they were going to do something, but all of a sudden at a meeting of the Cohasset Common Historic District Commission, the chairlady decided they would have to look into the matter of what the signs should say, where they should go and whether they were really needed, and a simple attempt to put up a few signs to educate the townspeople was "shot down in flames"!

No one will know whether this lack of positive action has resulted in increased duck mortality or not, but I believe it has significantly.

Perhaps this year the people who should be running the town will do the right thing early enough to prevent a replay of last year's fiasco.

Kerrigan cartoon was in bad taste

To the Editor:

The Olympics are supposed to encourage and display sportsmanship, and surely that includes respecting the conclusions of the judges. Your cartoon showing Nancy Kerrigan presenting her near-blind mother's special TV set to a panel of judges wearing blinders was in the same bad taste as was the Kerrigan family's reaction to the judging.

Her skating may have been flawless, although all but one of the judges concluded that the Ukranian teenager, Oksana Bayul, was equally good. And one judged Oksana to be slightly better, (as did many watchers) thus giving the gold to Oksana. That should have been accepted with good grace, just as we would have expected Oksana or any other non-American competitor to have accepted the judges' conclusion.

To imply that the judge from the former East Germany favored Oksana just because she is from another former USSR satellite is childish nonsense, just as it is to picture the judges as wearing blinders.

If Americans are to compete in the Olympics, they need be mature and cultured enough to understand that being American doesn't impart a devine right to be judged the winner.

Furthermore, both winning and losing bears a responsibility to represent America with grace and class, such as foreign athletes usually display. Patriotism isn't well demonstrated by pettiness. The world is watching!

Thanks to a thoughtful driver

To the Editor:

I'd like to pay tribute to a particular driver for his/her special consideration and courtesy.

At dusk last week I was headed home when I found myself on High St. in Hingham trying to make a left turn on to Main St. (Route 228). Two days of snow plowing had produced a snow bank so high that I could not see the fast-approaching cars until they were virtually upon me. I waited and waited, cautiously inching my way out, when an on-coming car, realizing my plight, graciously stopped, allowing me to make a safe entrance on to the highway.

To this thoughtful person I wish to say "thank you".

Question of the week

Each week, the Cohasset Mariner will pose a question to the candidates. Responses to the question may be mailed to the Cohasset Mariner, 165 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield, MA. 02050. Or, they may be faxed to our editorial office: (617) 837-4843 or (617) 740-8955. All responses must be submitted by Tuesday noon. There will be no exceptions to this deadline.

Responses by the candidates must be brief - a 200-word limit. Be specific and make every word count.

If you have any questions about this election policy, please call editor Mary Ford at 749-0031.

The Question of the Week is:

- For school committee candidates: what is the school AIDS education policy? Does AIDS education start too young in Cohasset or does it not start young enough?
- Selectmen: could the current brouhaha resulting in the cemetery committee resignations have been avoided? How would you have handled the situation?
- Planning board: what can be done to attract more shops and businesses to Cohasset Village and keep them there?
- Water commission: what will you do to restore public confidence in the water department?
- Health board: is the town doing enough to promote recycling? If not, what would you suggest?

The following candidates responded to last week's Question of the Week:

• For school committee candidates: the public perception is that the school department is anti-DARE. Do you agree. Why or why not?

JoAnne Chittick,
school committee candidate

The school department has resisted accepting the DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) program for the 5th/6th grades because the schools already have a comprehensive health education program in place. The school curriculum teaches students in all grades, K-12, about a wide variety of health issues — from brushing teeth (1st grade) to understanding HIV/AIDS (10th grade) and includes information about substance abuse. The DARE lessons would duplicate much of the material already offered, would not touch on many important health issues, and would take class time away from academic subjects.

A unique characteristic of the school curriculum is that it was developed by a health education professional, with input by parents and other interested residents — the Health Education Advisory Council (of which I am a member), specifically to meet the needs of children in Cohasset. DARE does have valuable features — such as the involvement of police officers in the schools — which should be introduced into our health ed. curriculum. At present, Chief Noonan and Dr. Gill are developing a "PALS (Police Assisting Local Schools) for Wellness" program, which will bring police into our K-8th grade classrooms to speak about issues like safety, substance abuse, and violence prevention. The goals of DARE and PALS are the same — (1) to educate the children and (2) to improve police-youth relations. The important difference between the programs is that Cohasset's curriculum is designed particularly for our community.

I believe that the schools must be responsive to community needs and wishes. However, I also believe that decisions about educational policy and curriculum issues should be made not according to political pressures but in view of the best way to achieve the primary goal of educating children.

Daniel S. Evans,
school committee candidate

Our schools need substance abuse prevention training. The most recent Cohasset survey (1992) found significant use of alcohol and moderate use of marijuana among junior and senior high students. This is in spite of a comprehensive health education program.

It is difficult to second-guess the DARE versus PALS debate. DARE is a well-marketed, established program of prevention education, consisting of 17 weekly sessions at one grade level, taught by a uniformed police officer. PALS, the Cohasset alternative, is more ambitious, would include police involvement in eight grades, and is intended to be a better fit with Cohasset's needs and the existing health program. Grant funding is available for DARE programs; it is limited for PALS.

PALS is the program chosen by the schools. Although not announced, the police chief and superintendent have identified the PALS officer, who is expected shortly to undergo outside training and to begin teaching in May. Full implementation is predicted next year.

At this point, our best alternative is to push to secure funding and make PALS happen. However, we must be realistic. If PALS will not be in place until next year, we must quickly reconsider DARE and other established programs. Something is better than nothing.

James C. Kirk,
school committee candidate

The school department strongly supports the principle of empowering kids to make good decisions with the help of community resources. This is the idea behind many drug education programs, including D.A.R.E.

Cohasset has had for many years a comprehensive K-12 health education curriculum which includes these ideas about drug education as part of an overall approach to health awareness and decision-making. This curriculum is a result of close cooperation between the school department and the Community Health Education Advisory Committee.

Working together, the school and police departments have developed a plan for integrating into the current curriculum the basic format of D.A.R.E. — positive contact between trained police officers and younger students. Hopefully, this effort can be funded under the guidelines of current state legislation.

If not, the school department has already explored ways to get this funding by adjusting the format, even including the D.A.R.E. curriculum as is, despite its being somewhat redundant with our current program. In the final analysis, what's important is not the name of the program, but what it accomplishes for our children and our town.

• Selectmen: the town could lose several popular stores currently in Cushing Plaza if Shaw's Supermarkets Inc. is successful in razing the shopping center in order to build a Shaw's there. What can you do to help alleviate the public's concern that popular stores like the Consignment Shop, Buttonwood, and Sea 'N Cheese may have to relocate to other towns?

Peter Pratt,
selectman candidate

We face significant policy and planning issues as a result of the increasing intensity of commercial development along Route 3A, our primary transportation artery through the town. Many of these issues can be seen converging today in the emerging plans for the renovation of Cushing Plaza.

We must continue to support the recent action of the planning board to reject the proposal to allow a rezoning scheme for the commercial development of the plot of land on the northeast corner of Beechwood Street and Route 3A. Development of this parcel, which abuts residential properties on three sides and has appreciable wetlands on it, is not the solution to the possible loss to the town of popular locally owned businesses across the street.

We quickly need to engage in a new effort at community master planning. In the late 1950s to early 1960s the town had the foresight to develop an entire master plan in anticipation of the continued developmental pressures of the postwar era. We need an updated version of that planning blueprint today.

A prolonged high level of commercial development along Route 3A, especially that generated by national and regional retail entities, can seriously degrade the character of Cohasset. Such degradation could indeed diminish the value of the town's greatest aggregate economic asset, and most significant portion of its local tax base — its residential housing stock. Realizing that some level of growth is required, we should also attempt to restore the commercial developmental mix more in favor of clean light industry and office buildings, as seen today at Whitney Hill.

In the immediate period, we must make certain that the town exercises its full powers vis-a-vis commercial developers to protect the community's interests from the possible impacts of proposed new construction. Any renovation of Cushing Plaza must finally solve the septic problems which have plagued the facility. Any new facilities must pay their own way in terms of new burdens on the public water, sewer, and transportation infrastructures which serve them. If local businesses are dislocated, can the regulatory powers of the town legally permit some form of linkage program by which we require new developers to assist displaced businesses to relocate in town?

With or without a linkage styled process for disrupted businesses on the state highway, we must determine how the Cohasset Village retail district can benefit from increased commercial investment in the town. The construction in the mid-term of a new public works facility, with the attending possibility of razing the current highway department garages, will give us the opportunity to reexamine the traffic and parking patterns in the downtown. A better traffic and parking mix in the downtown, with other public initiatives — like walkway construction, sidewalk refitting, utility undergrounding, and storefront rehabilitation — could assist in restoring the village as the focus for retail trade in Cohasset.

• Health board: do you think Cohasset should follow Norwell's lead and enact a total ban on smoking in all public places?

Alix White,
health board candidate

I believe that Cohasset Board of Health should not adopt a 100-percent ban on smoking in public places as Norwell's Board of Health has done for two reasons.

The first is that Cohasset already has a 75-percent ban on smoking (p. 74, sec. 2, Cohasset General Bylaws), "Smoking areas shall comprise no more than 25 percent of the seating capacity of the restaurant."

The second reason is that this bylaw was mandated by the Norwell Board of Health rather than democratically discussing this with the townspeople, tavern owners, and employers first.

Now, after people objected, a smoking bylaw committee was formed. The goal of protecting people's health could have been better achieved if this important but controversial bylaw had been more openly discussed first.

• Planning board: what can the planning board do to see that Cohasset's character is preserved in light of the development planned for Rte. 3A?

Dean Rizzo,
planning board candidate

There are many concerns which must be addressed by the Planning Board to ensure that Cohasset's character is preserved when considering development not only on Route 3A but throughout the town. I think we all realize that we are lucky to live in a community which has so many unique qualities and natural beauty.

I feel it is not only the job of the Planning Board to preserve this beauty but it is a moral obligation we must have as individuals to ensure we maintain the unique character of the town. In my experiences in building I have found that if a new building or development is planned and designed carefully from the beginning it can enhance an area, however, if it is designed without taking into account the characteristics of the town then we will create a lasting impression we will all regret.

As Dan Cotton has stated many times Route 3A is Cohasset's main thoroughfare which gives people not familiar with our town a sense of the character of Cohasset. I know how I feel as I drive on Route 3A in Weymouth or Route 53 in Hanover. I do not want people to have this feeling when they drive through Cohasset.

(See page 12)

Question of the week

• Planning board: what can the planning board do to see that Cohasset's character is preserved in light of the development planned for Rte. 3A?

Dean Rizzo

We must ensure that the design of any new building fits in with the same characteristics as in an old New England Village. We have to be concerned with size, exterior finish such as type of building materials and color; lighting; and we must maintain a substantial green area so that any new development will flow as best as possible with the natural beauty of the town.

If Shaw's decides to join our community in Cushing Plaza I believe the Planning Board and the people of Cohasset have an exciting opportunity to make the Plaza much more attractive than it is presently. New development should not always trigger a negative response.

If we have careful and common sense planning we can enhance the characteristics of the Town and not hinder them. If I am elected to the Planning Board I will make sure that we have a thoroughfare that we, the people of Cohasset, are proud to ride on and not avoid because of traffic problems and a lost sense of character.

Bill Good,

planning board candidate

As the land area on Route 3A which is zoned for business and light industry has previously been determined, the Planning Board's challenge is to do all it can within the Bylaw to insure that any new development not only meets the setback, greenspace, frontage, and a host of other usual and customary requirements on the Board's checklists, but also compliments Cohasset's centuries-old charm.

The Super Stop & Shop is an example of what our Board can do to make a positive statement in respect to building design, signage, landscaping, reserve parking, traffic control, etc. The Planning Board worked long, hard, and smart with the developer, and it shows today.

In 1994 Shaw's Supermarkets, Inc. may possibly represent an opportunity to create a first-class shopping plaza that can also accommodate some of the Cohasset-flavored shops like Buttonwood Books and the Consignment Shop.

Do you think that a tired plaza with poor traffic control and painfully-failed septic system speaks well of Cohasset's character?

I don't. I do think that the Board needs to hear out the Shaw's people who have recently bought this parcel and steer them accordingly as to what can and cannot be done relevant to the Zoning Bylaw, recommending landscaped parking areas, attractive lighting, signage and contemporary design that do have a place in Cohasset's rich heritage.

It is going to be a Herculean task, but an achievable one for the Board during the next five years, to insure that the areas zoned for business are wrapped in a package that serves our prosperous area well. In cooperation with other town boards, as well as the Rotary, Chamber of Commerce, Village Renaissance, Historical Commission, Garden Clubs, Design Review Board and Metropolitan Area Planning Council, among hopefully others, I pledge to do all I can on the Board to encourage only development that promises to reflect Cohasset's personality.

Ideally, I would see the Planning Board, whose meetings are open to all, working much more closely in the future with the above-named groups as well as any interested citizens, to pool our respective resources and bring about enhancements to downtown Cohasset, which must always be our town's more private, yet thriving and welcoming village.

• Water commission: should the water department be run by an outside contractor. Why or why not?

Mark Bell,

water commission candidate

Private companies that offer services on a large scale to hundreds of clients have a lot to offer, and give clients a wider selection of services than could be conventionally funded.

I was told by the Health Board that notices of non-compliance were down since the Sewer Department "privatized."

In similar conversation with the Sewer Department, I was told it was the "best operational decision" made.

To private companies, we may be small. To us, they are large organizations that offer endless resources for cost-effective operations.

With cost-effective pricing, this is an advantage for our town.

However, for those who enjoy Cohasset's personal relationships, 100 percent privatized operation without townspeople directly involved can disassociate the relationship of that entity with residents. This factor may not be so desirable. Think of the merchants we do business with everyday. Those first-hand relationships let us know we live in a special place.

My ideal of privatization is to have big business performance and the personal touch of our small town's relationships.

With privatization, commissioner's participation is key to effective representation for the town.

Fred Koed,

water commission candidate

Effective Monday, March 7, operation of the water treatment plant was given over to private management. This emergency action was taken by the board of Water Commissioners which voted to accept a 60-day contract from an outside contractor (P.S.G.). I agree that interim management is the best course of action at this time.

If I am elected to the post of Water Commissioner, I will make my determination about private management of the Water Department based on the following criteria:

1) Budget Considerations: Will the net expense of an outside contractor be cost effective as compared to the salary of the superintendent that the outside contractor was hired to replace?

2) Which option (town vs. private) will give the town the highest level of professional, up-to-date management?

3) What are the trade-offs in shifting to a private management company vs. going through the hiring process for a new superintendent?

4) Could private management prioritize the deferred maintenance items that have built up over the last few years and get Cohasset back on track in minimum time?

5) And most importantly, will private management put an end to the turmoil that has been plaguing the Water Department?

Lots of questions. No easy answers. Cohasset has undergone a period of no/low growth and tight budgets that, for better or worse, have resulted in deferred maintenance. Assessing the blame is futile. Solving the problem is the goal. Let's get to work.

White announces candidacy for Board of Health

Alix White has announced that she is running for a three year term on the Cohasset Board of Health.

"I felt that there was tremendous public support at the Feb. 7 MEPA Public Hearing for protecting the health and well-being of our town. I feel that my wealth of hands-on experience will be best utilized at this time on the Board of Health "White said.

Her concern for the environment has led White to serve on several town committees, all under the auspices of the Board of Health. For the past six years she has been a member of the Recycling Committee. During the change-over years from voluntary to mandatory recycling, she wrote a trash educational by-line in the local papers, sharing tips and strategies with humor and common sense. She served for two years on the Mosquito Control Committee and was its original chairwoman. She also serves on the South Shore Regional Refuse Disposal Planning Board as liaison from the board to the town.

Alix White is perhaps best known for her work as president of SAFE (Stop Any Further Expansion). For the last six years, as she raised her young family, she organized three towns in opposition to the 100% expansion of a commercial landfill in the watershed of Lily Pond.

"My time as a community organizer has helped me learn a valuable lesson. If you see a problem facing your community, you can either talk about fixing it, or you can do something about it. I chose to do something," said White.

Alix White is the wife of David Bigley. They have three children in the Cohasset schools: Morgan, age 13; Deirdre, age 9; and Aaron, age 6; Alix and David are owners of White Cedar Farm, an organic farm specializing in gourmet vegetables, fruits and eggs. White is the great niece of the late Richardson and Cornelia White. She was educated at the Winsor School and California College of Arts and Crafts.

Anyone interested in making a contribution to the Committee to Elect Alix White, please contact Ellen Sanchez, treasurer, at 227 Beechwood St. (383-6911).

Ryan Freeman settles for moral victory

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

He may not have won, but Cohasset's Ryan Freeman has the fortitude to become a champion.

If an award was handed out for savvy and guts at last weekend's New England Wrestling Championships in Essex Junction, Vermont, Freeman surely would have taken home the honor, hands down.

Wrestling in the 125-pound category, the personable junior strained his knee in his first-match win against Rhode Island's third-ranked wrestler in his weight division.

The effort, however, took its toll as Freeman sustained a strained knee during his 6-2 victory. He talked it over with head coach Torin Sweeney and the pair decided it was best if Freeman forfeited his next match in an effort to rest the knee for the following day's competition.

Sweeney said Freeman's knee was "75-80 percent" heading into the match against the eventual third-place finisher, who happened to be Connecticut's state champion.

With his knee aching, Freeman still managed to give his opponent all he could handle. The Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic eventually lost the match by a tight, 7-5, score. With the loss went Freeman's hope of placing.

"He was disappointed with the injury," said Sweeney, "but not with the way he wrestled. He's only a junior and next year, hopefully he'll be healthy for it."

Freeman qualified for this year's New England meet with his sixth-place finish in the All-State meet on Feb. 26. He was edged out for first when he dropped a close, 2-1 decision in the State meet.

Skippers clip Norwell in quarterfinals, face Rockland next

Using their overwhelming height advantage and the offensive leadership provided by Dorian Bryant and Joe Slotnick, No.1-ranked Cohasset (19-2) sped by the the 10th-seeded Clippers (14-7), 53-43, at Quincy High School on Saturday afternoon.

The victory set up the semifinal game between Cohasset and 13th-seeded Rockland (14-8), March 9 at Braintree High School.

"They had so much height," said Norwell head coach Paul Wholey. "On the defensive end, they rebounded too well. They're just good players. Maybe our kids kidn't box out as well because they were tired."

With a starting lineup of three players, 6-foot-5 and over, Cohasset head coach Ron Ford agreed that the Skippers' edge in height was to their definite advantage.

"We used our height today," Ford said. "We weren't playing well very early, but our defense played outstanding."

Those fans who showed up expecting to see an aesthetically played game were definitely in the wrong gym. Turnovers and fouls were commonplace throughout. Marge Schott in the morning was prettier.

The only area where Norwell actually outplayed Cohasset was from the foul line. The Clippers made 12 of 19 shots, while the Skippers were a lowly 12 of 28.

Norwell was the first to strike when 10th-grader Bill Lynch (14 points) connected on what was to be an afternoon of four 3-pointers. Cohasset's speedy Tom Allen matched Lynch's shot with a 3-point shot of his own.

Both teams traded baskets for the majority of the half. On three different occasions the Skippers pulled out to a six-point lead, their biggest lead of the half. But just when it looked like Cohasset was set to break the game open, Norwell would close the gap.

The Skippers could have put the Clippers in a major hole at the half, but Norwell caught a break, thanks to Cohasset's 5 for 12 performance from the line. The lead was just six, 23-17, as both teams headed for their locker rooms.

Ford, however, was not overly concerned with his team's less-than-outstanding play in the first. He attributed Cohasset's lack of offense to tournament jitters and was confident the Skippers would be more comfortable on the floor in the second half. Ford clearly remembers how the team eased into last year's open tournament and continued to play better with each game.

"We won three games in the tournament last year," Ford said, "and the first one was the toughest. After that we started rolling."

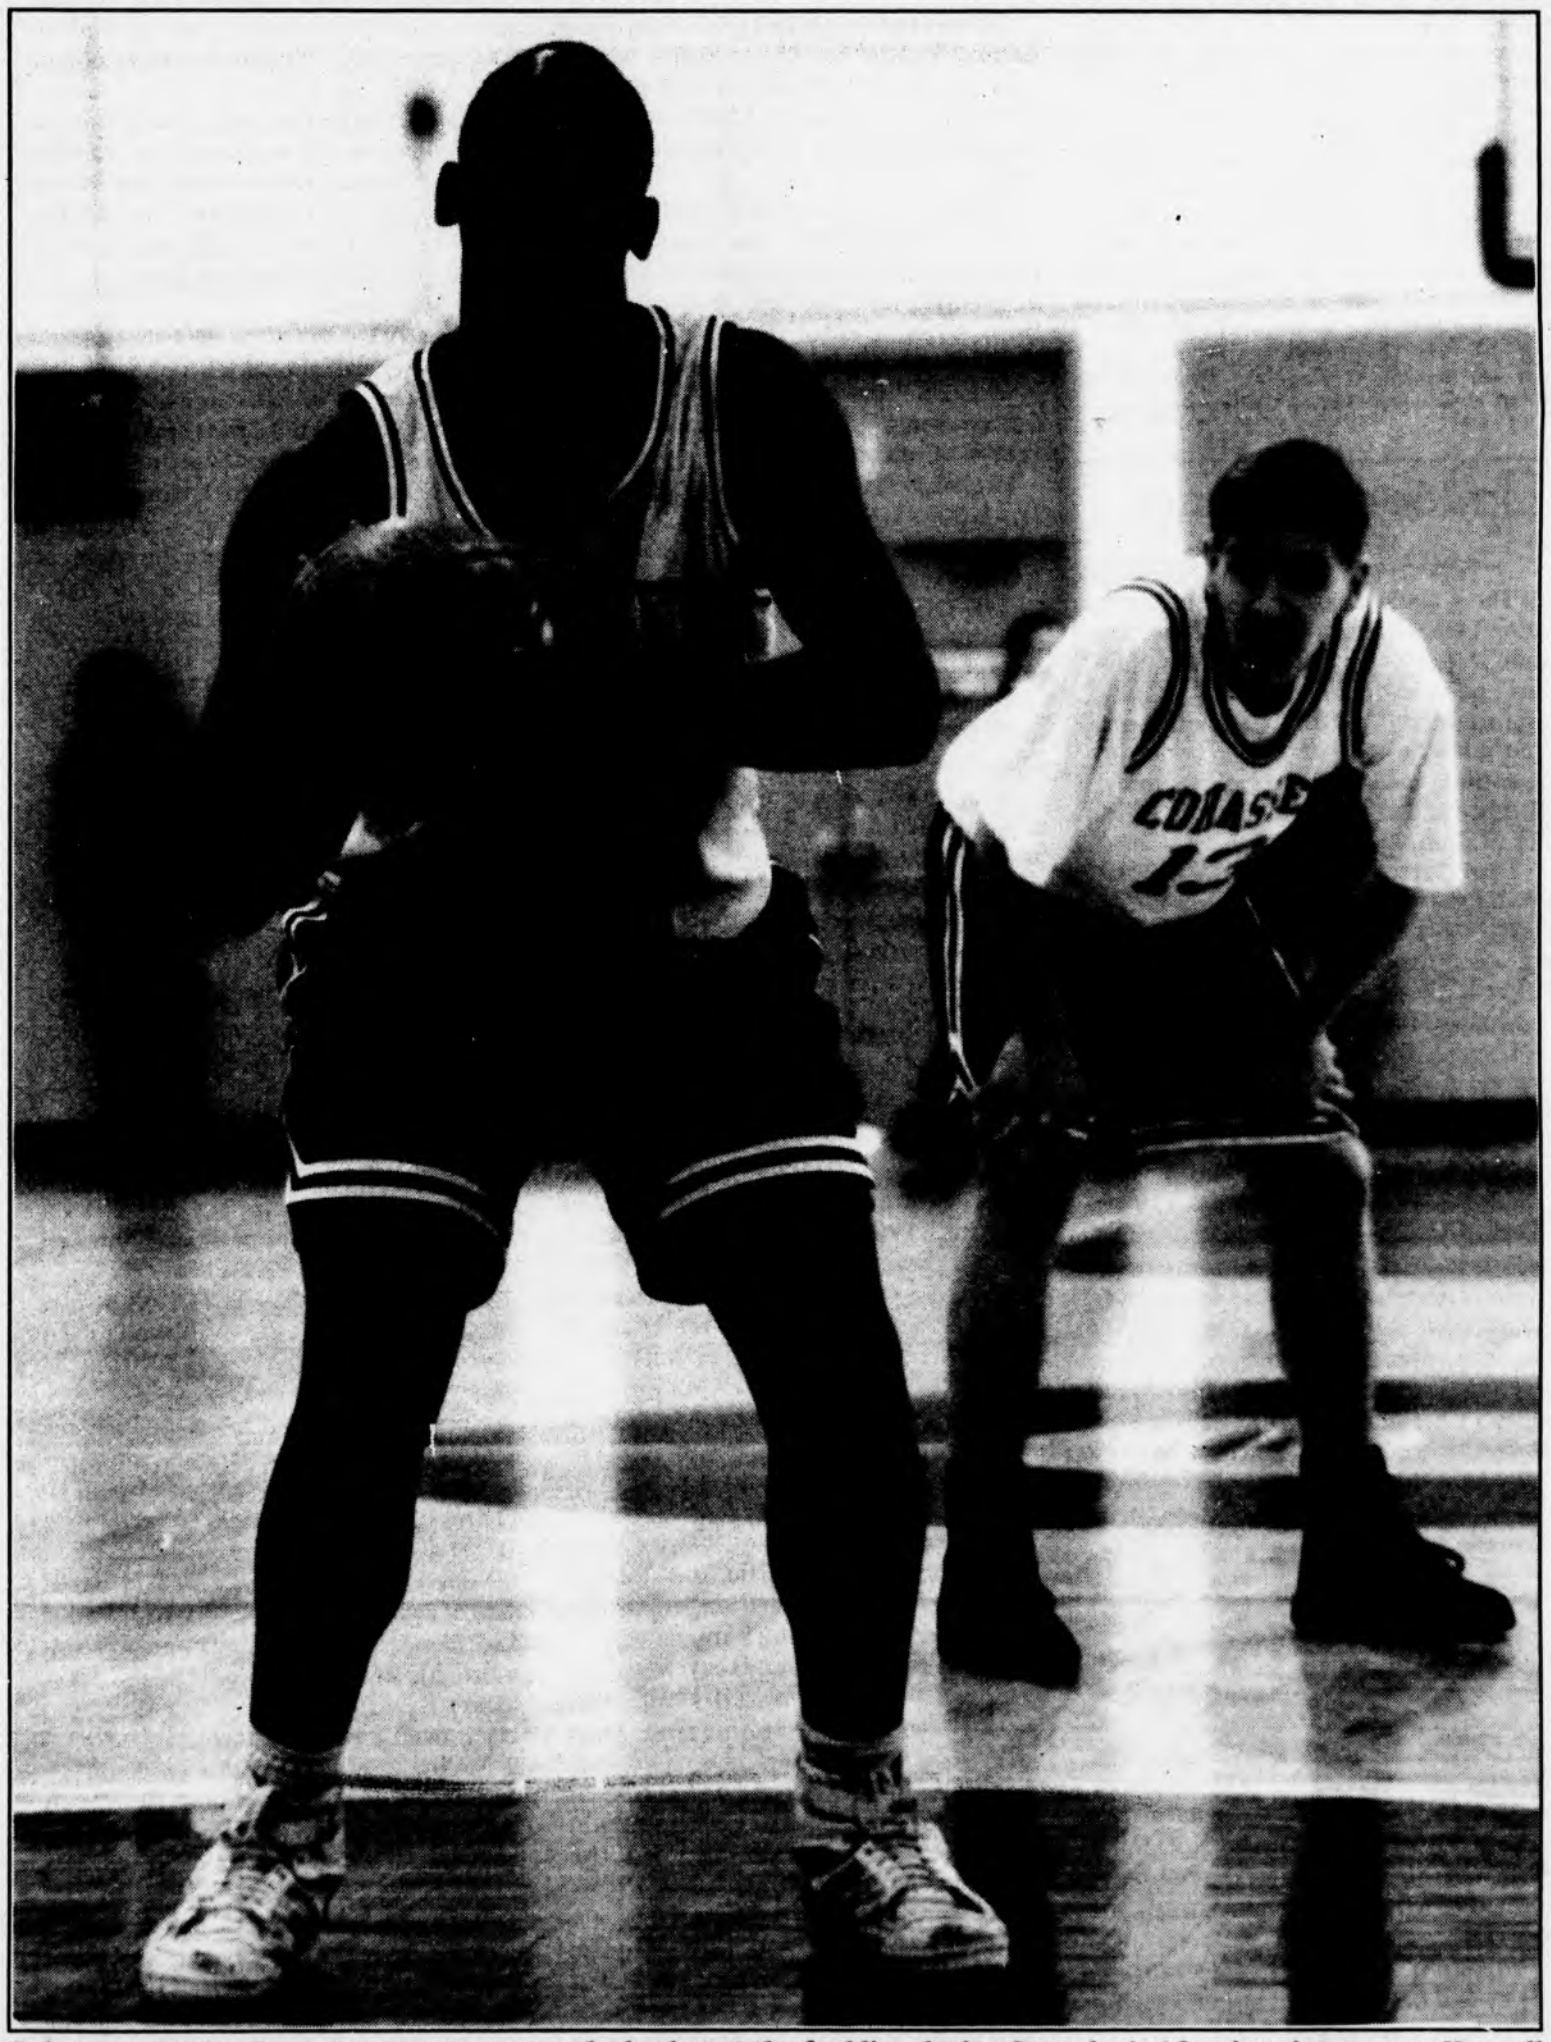
"There was no flow," Ford said of his team's first-half play on Saturday.. "We came out a little nervous, offensively. We weren't playing very well early but our defense played outstanding."

After a bank shot by Norwell co-captain Frank O'Brien, Bryant followed through on a rebound, Allen hit a jumper inside the key and Pete Bishop's outside shot gave Cohasset a 10-point lead with 14:23 remaining.

The Clippers closed to within three (29-26) on a short jumper by co-captain Pete Hajjar and Lynch's 3-pointer, before the momentum changed in Cohasset's favor.

Led by Bryant and Allen, Cohasset's fastbreak came alive. And even though they were having an off-day at the free-throw line, the Skippers did a good job in

(See page 16)



Cohasset's Dorian Bryant concentrates on the basket at the foul line during Saturday's 10-point victory over Norwell in the Division 3 South Sectional quarterfinals. Sharks win thriller

By Bob Hatch
Special to the Mariner

March madness has hit the Bay State Sharks' squirt minor team in a big way. The Sharks took a major step forward on their quest for the league championship when they met with one of the monsters of Metro, the North Shore Raiders, for the third and final regular season meeting between the two teams. Actually this was more of a collision.

The Sharks defeated the Raiders early in the season. Then, the day after Christmas, a greatly improved Raiders team handed the Sharks a 6-1 defeat. That was a lopsided affair the Sharks were never in. It was also the Sharks' last regular season loss.

With the standings as tight as they are this was a must-win game for both teams. It showed from the opening face-off with both teams demonstrating their flashy skating, passing, stick-handling, and play-making abilities. This was metro hockey at its best; fast up and down action with each team playing the body.

The Sharks got on the board first. Matt Bourassa (Somerset) kept the puck in at the right point and dumped it into the corner. Brian Lewis (Cohasset) passed behind the Raiders' net to Greg Osborne (Stoughton) who went back to the left point with Kenny Roche. With Scott McGinn (Hingham) providing the screen, Roche walked in and fired low for the goal.

The Sharks made it 2-0 when Osborne found the opening from 10 feet. Assists to Lewis won the pass and Garret Daigler (Hingham) for a great play at the point to keep the play alive.

The second period was all North Shore as they tied the game with two unanswered goals. Were it not for the goaltending heroics of Gabe Winer (Stoughton), the Sharks could have found themselves trailing by two or three goals, instead of tied at two. Gabe held the Raiders at bay for the remainder of the game.

The Sharks have been a third period team all season. This game was no different. The forwards continued to strangle the Raiders with ferocious backchecking. This led to the Sharks' next goal. The Raiders were pressing in the neutral zone. With just under three minutes left in the game, the white line, L.W. Chris Coady (Hanover) and R.W. Bobby Noonan (Marshfield), centered by Nick Dunn (Marstons Mills), broke up the play. Defenseman Kenny Roche (South Boston) picked up the loose puck, and put on a dazzling display of stick-handling before netting his second goal of the day. The Sharks struck again, now with under two minutes to play. The Hingham red line was applying pressure at the Sharks' blue line. Center Brian Boyle and wing Dave Saggese combined to knock North Shore off the puck when Pat Devine scooped up the puck. Pat beat two Raider defensemen in a foot race to the net and made a nice deke to score.

It wasn't over yet. The Raiders pulled their goalie and kept constant pressure on the Sharks for the next minute and a half. Defenseman Ryan Hatch (Hanover) and Scotty Sparks (Norwood) had to clear a number of dangerous rebounds from the Sharks' crease and each blocked a shot before the final buzzer sounded. The Sharks were victorious in a 4-2 thriller.

The Sharks play a doubleheader Sunday, March 13 at Pilgrim Arena: 9:10 a.m. vs Boston College Jr. Eagles and 11:30 a.m. vs Assabet Valley Patriots.

New step class set

Registrations are now being taken for a new step class starting in March at the Cohasset Town Hall. This is a 60-minute class for intermediate participants which includes basic stepping, stretching, and toning. (The workout can be adapted for all fitness levels.) The class is held Tuesdays and Thursday nights at 6:30 p.m. Special pricing is available for monthly sign-ups or 10 session cards. Drop-ins are welcome. Please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791 for more information.

Schedule for step classes at the Cohasset Town Hall is as follows: 'Fatburner'/Intro — (beginners to intermediate), Monday and Wednesday nights from 5 to 6 p.m.; Step II (intermediate), Tuesday and Thursday nights at 6:30 to 7:30 p.m.

Indoor, beginner golf lessons

The Cohasset and Scituate Recreation Departments are co-sponsoring indoor golf lessons for beginner players, scheduled to begin Thursday evening, April 7, at the Cushing School, Scituate. Lessons are five weeks in duration, meeting one hour weekly. The fee for the five hour session is $60 per person.

To register, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791. Classes are limited in size and registrations are accepted on a first call basis. Class times available are 6 p.m., 7 p.m., and 8 p.m.

Local golf professional and head golf pro, Mr. Dan Neary, will be instructing.

20th squash tournament underway

The 20th Annual Cohasset Winter Squash Tournament began play this week at the Cohasset Tennis and Squash Club, tournament officials announced.

The men's tournament has attracted its largest draw ever, said tournament director Kathy Pocock. Dr. David Schenkein of Scituate is the top seed, and — if form holds true — will face second-seeded Austin Lyne in the championship match, scheduled for April 9, at the Cedar Street club.

"The seventeen entrants constitutes the strongest field we've ever had," said Pocock. "Our defending champion, Rob Whelan, is only seeded third this year."

Whelan, in the tourney's opening match, knocked off Bob Austin of Duxbury, 3-0.

drawing the foul when they drove to the net and shot slightly better once awarded the free shots.

Cohasset went from a 41-31 lead at 8:14 to steadily increase it to 51-36 with 2:48 left. The Skippers' Joe Slotnick (11 points) was especially tough, hitting a number of shots inside the paint when Cohasset began putting the game away from good.

Adam Mangum gave Norwell something to cheer about with less than a minute left when he drove to the hoop, spun and then banked a shot off the glass with his back to the basket. Mike Foye hit three free throws for the Clippers, the third of which gave them their 43rd point.

Ford said it was good to get that first tourney win behind them after receiving a bye as the top-ranked team.

"The kids are all lit up right now and ready to go," he said.

Dave's awards

Most Valuable Players:

Boys hoop — Duxbury's Mickey Curley. This 6'9" BC-bound center is the best low-post player from this area since, well, his big brother Bill. Look for the Green Dragons to win the Division II state title.

Girls hoop — Silver Lake's Amy King. Led her team to a 14-6 regular season record and scored her 1,000th point in the final game despite double and triple team defenses for the past three seasons.

Hockey — A tough call but the nod goes to Marshfield freshman Evan Crockford, who was second in the ACL in scoring and led the Rams to their third straight state tourney berth. He could re-write all the Ram scoring records by the time he's through.

Best team to get bumped in first round of state tourney:

The Silver Lake boys' basketball team. The Lakers have won the OCL for three years but came out flat against Big Three school Brockton in the first round. Coach Dick Arieta and the Lakers deserved a better fate.

Best Athletes:

Norwell girls' hoop player Jess Lincoln and Silver Lake point guard Steve McAuliffe.

Lincoln is a soccer and track all-star in addition to her all-star hoop status and can flat jump out of the gym.

McAuliffe, despite his 5'5" height, was the OCL MVP, as he averaged almost a triple double every game. McAuliffe was also an all-star soccer player for the Lakers and plays a mean outfield for the baseball team.

Crowd Favorite:

The easy winner is Norwell senior Adam Mangum. This 5'10" guard did not see as much action as he would have liked but whenever he entered the game, the fans went nuts. He capped his Clipper career with a baseline over the head reverse layup in the state tourney game against Cohasset that would have made Dr. J green with envy.

Worst Uniforms:

Carver boys' hoop. The maroon tops look okay but the plain grey shorts look like K-Mart specialties.

Worst rule:

No shot clock for the boys' games. Why should the girls' have one and not the boys'. This rule will be changed by the next winter season. Mark my words.

Best three-point shooters:

Norwell's Bill Lynch and Hingham's Cristi Gigon. Only sophomores, both players can shoot the lights out from the three-point line. Lynch turned in a great tourney for the Clippers while Gigon made the all-star team and led the Harborwomen in scoring.

Best private school players:

Archbishop Williams' guard Shivonne St. George and hockey forward Jarat Ford.

St. George, a sophomore from Kingston can shoot the lights out of the ball and led the Bishops to two big tourney wins over Scituate and Norwell.

Ford, a junior forward from Scituate, led the Bishop icemen in goals this year and his club is favored to win the Division I title. He is also the son of Hingham Journal and Mariner editor Mary Ford. (I never miss a chance to kiss up to the brass.)

Best Coach:

Hingham hockey coach Garrett Reagan. With only two seniors, Reagan led his young team to a fourth straight league title using three to four lines, quick shifts and relentless forechecking.

Worst Coach:

It's the boys' basketball coach at East Bridgewater High. Um, his name is Stan something. No it's Sam Ferntree. That's not it either. Ah, it will come to me in a minute.

Best Wrestler:

Scituate High state heavyweight champion Matt Myers. Lost only one match all season in gaining the Division III title and then the all-state title. He was also a football standout for the Sailors. Plus if I gave this award to someone else, he'd come down and put me in a half-nelson.

Players to watch next year:

Scituate guard Chris Brown. Only a sophomore, this high-scoring all-star point guard can dunk, post up and hit the three. Has Division I college potential.

Silver Lake junior point guard Dakota Riley. Played a lot of minutes for the tourney-bound Lakers but still saved her best play for the stretch run and the state tourney. With King graduating, she will be the Lakers top gun.

Joe's Awards

Worst rule:

No 30-second shot clock for boys hoop, but one for girls. Hull's girls did a job shutting down an overmatched Holbrook squad in the Division 4 South Sectional quarterfinals, as the clock wound down to zero several times. The boys on the other hand have all the time they want to set up, be patient, and look for that high-percentage shot. A little consistency by the MIAA would be nice.

Best Tournament Change:

Having teams qualify with a 59-percent win record or top two in their league. Let's face it, a 3-17 squad has no business playing past game No. 20.

Best Cheerleaders:

Cohasset High School. Their score would leave Nancy Kerrigan 5/10ths arrears as well.

Best School Nickname:

Bulldogs — A nickname you can sink your teeth into.

Worst School Nickname:

Skippers — It was either that or the professor and Mary Ann.

Best Boys Basketball Player:

Rockland's Chris DeMars — Went on a scoring spree around the mid-season mark and hasn't stopped yet.

Best Girls Basketball Player:

Abington's Kelly Boyle — Tall, strong and a load of potential that hasn't even been tapped.

Best Hockey Player:

Hanover's Chip Griffin — The Indians' most productive scorer this season, Griffin notched a hat trick against Triton, leaving him with 30 goals so far.

Best Goaltender:

Hanover's Jeff Ramsay — The backbone of Hanover's squad. Save for Hull's Mark Hendrickson, Ramsay had no peers in the South Shore League.

Best Gymnast:

Cohasset's Erica Hettstrom — Just a freshman, Hettstrom was selected as the best all-around gymnast in Pilgrim Conference 2 and the only one who qualified for the Indivdual State Meet.

"THE team to watch carefully in any of the tourneys:

Rockland High boys basketball team — Bob Fisher's squad started to win the close ones towards the end of the regular season and beat a tough Dedham squad in the opening round of the tourney.

Trip planned to Radio City

Registration is open for a motor coach trip to New York City and Radio City Music Hall to see the Rockettes Easter Show Saturday March 26. The trip is sponsored by the Cohasset and Scituate recreation departments.

Cost for the trip is $70 per person which includes round trip motor coach transportation and seats for the show.

For information and to register call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791.

Globe columnist to speak

Social Service League of Cohasset is sponsoring award winning Boston Globe columnist, Linda Weltner, speaking on "The Courage to Nurture," from 10 a.m. to noon Thursday April 14 at The Chart House, Cohasset Harbor.

Weltner is best known for her column, "Ever So Humble," which appears in the "At Home" section of the Globe Thursdays.

Advance registration is $4. Tickets will be $5 at the door.

Call 383-0771/1319 or 545-0096 by Thursday April 7 to register.

First Parish cabaret

The halls of the parish house have been ringing with the music of show tunes and the sounds of dancing feet for weeks now as the rehearsals for Cabaret '94 keep the lights burning night after night.

There are still tickets available for the Sunday, March 20, performance, scheduled for 3 p.m. at the First Parish House on Main Street.

At last count, the cast was up to nearly 40 talented adults and children. This major production will include the comedy team of Dick and Sally Wheeler, a sort of Jack Benny-Mary Livingston combo; the first public appearance of Serendipity, a Class A Barber Shop Quartet that happens to be female; and music from "Aladdin" with Princess Jasmine, actually eleven Jasmines, singing and dancing the choreography of Janet Campbell in outstanding costumes. Mike Nakashima's Aladdin and the Junior Choir singing "A Whole New World" will accompany Campbell's performance of a lyrical dance. Well-known local soloist Jeanne Scammell teams up with fellow singers in three separate duets.

Musicians in the pit include the talented pianist Carolyn Curtis, stellar drummer Mike Selig and our own clarinet-playing man Dave Whipple. Pat Baird will appear as the Energizer Bunny. A fine trio of voices will sing "High, Middle, Low" from "Sesame Street."

"The song, 'Everybody Ought'a Have a Maid,' from 'A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum,' a parody on 'Charlie and the MTA,' and other acts will provide a wide variety of appeal," said event chairperson Iri Bloomfield. "It is a show the whole family can enjoy, and might be the best way to brighten up this muddy season of waiting for spring."

"This is the kind of entertainment families travel to Boston to experience, and it will be right here on the common next Sunday," said Chartis Langmaid, who is familiar with the production. The Saturday night's performance and dinner have been sold out, but the Sunday show will have tickets available at the door for $5 for children and $10 for adults. Refreshments will be available. Further information is available by calling the First Parish Church at 383-1100, Monday through Thursday, between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m.

AAUW fund-raiser

The American Association of University Women, Hingham Branch Area, will hold its comedy connection fund-raiser Thursday March 10. Last week's storm caused postponement of the event.

The Comedy Connection of the Playoffs Sports Club is located at 500 Washington St., Rte. 53, Weymouth. Doors open at 7:30 p.m. for the 8 p.m. performance. Only those over 21 years of age will be admitted. A limited number of tickets can be purchased for $5 per person at the door.

Performing will be Warren McDonald, who has worked with Jerry Seinfeld, Peter Cummins, Ned Gold and Caronooch.

Money raised through this event will benefit local scholarships, The Educational Foundation and the Local Advocacy Fund, all promote growth, advancement and equity for women in this region and nationally.

For information about AAUW call 749-5851 and for information about the comedy connection call 749-6274.

Girl Scout Sunday

The Cohasset Girl Scouts will celebrate Girl Scout Sunday at the 10 a.m. service, Second Congregational Church, Highland Ave. All Daisies, Brownies, Juniors, Cadettes, Seniors and parents are welcome.

The Patriot's Trail Girl Scouts will offer a fashion, fitness and fun workshop from 1 to 3:30 p.m. Thursday March 24 at the Unitarian Church.

This program is open to all girls in grades 5 through 8. Girls do not have to be registered Girl Scouts to participate.

There will be aerobics, training in skin care and cosmetic techniques and jewelry making.

The registration deadline is Friday March 18.

Call the Girl Scouts at 828-3750 for information and registration.

The Mother-Daughter Tea has been rescheduled to Sunday April 10 from 2 to 4:30 p.m. at the community center.

Dance at community center

A dance, featuring live 60's music from the band "Dad's in the Garage," as well as Nards rock n' roll DJ will begin at 8 p.m. Saturday March 19 at the community center. Casual 60's attire.

Tickets are $15 per person and $30 a couple and include light refreshments and dessert. A cash bar will be available. Early reservations for a table of eight are $10 per person or $20 a couple.

Auditions for dancers

Auditions for Dancevisions Dance Company will be held at 7:30 p.m. (warm up at 6:30 p.m.) Tuesday March 15 at the Teen Depot in Cohasset.

Men and women over 18 years of age are welcome.

Call Donna at 871-3084 for information.

Coalition wants Greenbush derailed

By Barry Svrluga
Mariner Staff

In an effort to consolidate the movement against the Greenbush Line of the MBTA's Old Colony Railroad project, more than 100 residents of various South Shore communities met last Thursday at the Sons of Italy Hall in Hingham. The first meeting of the Coastal Coalition was held to display what organizers feel is widespread opposition to the train from residents of all towns along the Greenbush corridor.

The thrust of the meeting was to discuss other viable alternatives to the train, which most in attendance feel is a costly, inefficient and unsafe option in improving transportation on the South Shore. Proponents of other modes of transportation unveiled their plans to the supportive crowd.

Martha Reardon, a principal with Harbor Consultancy International, said that a disproportionate amount of attention and funding has been given to the train. She said that of the $35 million spent on the

May 14 override election slated

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Selectmen have called a special town election May 14 so voters can consider hiking their taxes to pay upwards of $350,000 to build a highway garage and $800,000 for new high school athletic fields.

Payment for both projects requires a debt exclusion Prop. 2-1/2 override. If both pass muster with voters, owners of a $300,000 home in Cohasset would see an increase of about $60 on their property tax bill for the first year. That figure would gradually decline until thereafter until the debt is paid off.

It's important to note that town meeting voters March 26 will decide whether or not to go ahead with the projects. Town meeting motions will be contingent on a favorable override vote covering cost of the projects.

Plans are to build the public works garage on town property off N. Main Street near the Little League Fields. The bond issue if approved through the override would cover architectural fees, contingency fees, and the cost of construction.

Harborfront land use ideas floated in open forum

By Sean P. Sweeney
Mariner correspondent

Cohasset residents packed the Board of Selectmen's office Wednesday, March 9, to discuss potential uses of the Hagerty property at the end of Parker Avenue. The meeting was sponsored by the Hagerty Committee as part of an ongoing effort by the committee to involve the community in the decisions regarding the future use of the property. The committee will make a progress report to the town meeting.

The property was the site of Cohasset Colonials, a well-known furniture manufacturing company. Prior to beginning the production of furniture, Hagerty was a manufacturer of rowing shells and skiffs. The waterfront property, which is approximately two acres, was purchased by the town a few years ago after Mary Hagerty sold the business. The business now finds its home in nearby Hingham at the old Talbot's location.

The property contains approximately seven buildings which are an odd mixture of modern sheet metal structures and wooden buildings of historical significance. One such wooden structure is the one which formerly housed the company offices and showroom. It is believed that this structure was originally located on Rowe's Wharf in Boston and was moved by barge to the Parker Avenue location sometime around the turn of the century.

Another wooden structure at the site is the old Lightkeeper's Boathouse which was moved from

Absentee ballots ready

Absentee ballots are now available at the Town Clerk's office for the town election Saturday, April 2. You may apply for an absentee ballot if you will be out of town, have a physical disability or because of religious beliefs.

Absentee voting may be done in the office of the town clerk during regular business hours until 12 noon April 1, 1994.

A written, signed request for a ballot may be sent to the town clerk and one will be mailed out. Included on the application should be your name as registered, your registration address, precinct, the address to which you wish the ballot sent and your signature. Applications may also be picked up at the office. The Town Clerk's office will be closed at 12 p.m. April 1 in preparation for the election.

If you need further information, please call the Town Clerk's office at 383-9900 ext. 105, 106 or 107.

Motor-Voter law passes

The Massachusetts Motor-Voter Law, known as Chapter 475 of the Acts of 1993 and signed by Governor Weld last month, provides many new registration opportunities for potential voters. One of the first provisions to take effect provides for mail-in or post-card registration.

As of July 1, 1994, new voters will be able to register without the need to come to city or town hall. The new registrant will execute an affidavit, soon to be available at libraries, workplaces and other public locations, which is mailed to the local elections officers in their hometown. This new avenue for voter registration is intended to ease the process for workers, students, military personnel, and others who are unable to make it into city or town hall to register.

Starting next year, new voters will be able to register at the Registry of Motor Vehicles, human service agencies such as the Departments of Public Health and Welfare, and other registration sites designated by state and federal law.

Again, the intent is to make registration available to new voters where they work, visit, or otherwise conduct business. The hope is that the Motor-Voter Law will prompt tens of thousands of unregistered Massachusetts citizens to join the voter rolls and participate in the electoral process at the local, state and federal levels.

One of the key features of the new law is that the ultimate decision for adding eligible voters to the rolls lies with your local elections officers. State and local elections officers work very hard to retain control at the local level to guard against fraud. Another key feature of the Motor-Voter Law is the establishment of a Central Voter Registry (CVR), a statewide, computerized voter registration list. Massachusetts joins a dozen or so other states that have a statewide voters' list. Town Clerks from across Massachusetts have strongly endorsed this computerized listing as essential to prohibiting voter registration fraud.

Civil Service exam set

The state will hold a Civil Service Exam for prospective police officers on May 21, Cohasset Police Sgt. Robert W. Jackson said.

Applications must be filed or postmarked no later than April 8.

Applications and additional information on entrance requirements are available at the Cohasset Town Hall and Police Department, or by calling 1-800-392-6178 or (617) 727-8372.

Dealer's license ok'ed

Selectmen approved issuing a Junk Dealer's license to Richard M. Karoff, 19 Border Street this week.

Karoff said while he may occasionally place ads in magazines on antiques, he has no plans to operate a retail shop from his home and will not place a sign on his property.

"This is my home address but my buying and selling is mostly on consignment. I have no intention of using my home as a shop," he said.

Karoff's plans are not in violation of the town's zoning by-laws, Executive Secretary Gregory A. Doyon said.

Square to be dedicated

Plans are being finalized for a parade and ceremony to dedicate the square at Depot Court to all POWs/MIAs on April 10. A sign commemorating the square will be unveiled during the festivities.

The parade will step off at 1:45 p.m. at the American Legion Post and progress up Summer Street, turn right on S. Main Street through town arriving at Depot Court at about 2 p.m., said Tom Wigmore, commander of the Sons of the American Legion Post 118.

World War II POW Raymond Buckley of Forest St. will give the main address, Wigmore explained.

The Sons of American Legion Post 118 are paying for the sign, he said.

Bill payments authorized

Selectmen approved payment for professional services of $600 to Civil Designs Inc. (beach and highway repairs) and $5,866.49 to Tibbetts Engineering (Doane St. culvert) at their board meeting Monday.

Recycling volunteers sought

The board of health is looking for volunteers to serve on the town's recycling committee. Interested citizens should call the board of health office at 383-9900.

Firefighters' conference

Officials from the Professional Fire Fightersof Massachusetts will hold a press conference at 11:30 a.m. Friday, March 18, at the Sheraton Tara Hotel in Braintree to discuss the grant to study regionalization of fire services in Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate.

They claim the use of EOCD (Executive Officeof Communities and Development) funds to conduct the $40,000 report discussiong a shared response program is inappropriate and may exceed the scope and intent of the grant program.

The union has informed the state attorney general's office and the state inspector general's office about its concerns.

Flood emergency subsides

Town officials declared a state of emergency briefly last week during the rain storm that flooded area roads, parking lots, and homeowners' basements.

Once a state of emergency is called, the town can ask for outside help, town Civil Defense Director Arthur Lehr said.

A flash flood behind the post office and the possibility of other flooding prompted the emergency declaration. Sandbags were released from the state Emergency Management Area II in Bridgewater at the town's request, Lehr said.

As it turned out flood waters receded quickly and sand bags were not used.

Lehr explained that volunteers would have been asked to help fill the sand bags from the town's gravel pit area or the sand and salt supply at the town landfill if flooding had continued.

Fire Chief Roger W. Lincoln said many basements in town flooded in the storm. He explained the fire department will respond to residents' calls for help with pumping if an oil burner, electrical or gas appliance is threatened causing a safety hazard.

The Mariner welcomes letters to the Editor.

May 14 override election slated

The athletic fields including an all-weather track would be constructed on land adjacent to Milliken Field next to the high school. Payment for repairs to Milliken Field would also be included in the override question.

No dollar figures will appear in either ballot question. Under Prop. 2-1/2 rules for debt exclusion overrides, the amount is not included in the ballot question because the figure cannot report the full cost of the principle plus interest charges, Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon explained.

No general override for operating expenses is needed this year. Selectmen also unanimously voted to support the town's proposed $15,038,906 FY'95 operating budget at town meeting.

Government Island. The boathouse was originally used to launch lifeboats when it was located on Government Island.

Veneta Roebuck, a member of the Hagerty Committee, explained that the decision has already been made to demolish many of the buildings on the site. The showroom building, the boathouse and the large metal structure behind the showroom building will be retained, while all other structures will be demolished.

The demolition contract was awarded to Cohasset businessman Russ Rosano, who will commence demolition now that the town has received the go ahead from the Army Corp of Engineers. Roebuck indicated that Rosano will attempt to salvage some of the wooden timbers from the demolished buildings for use in the development of the property.

Roebuck displayed a very rough site plan for the property which included a grassy area in front of the showroom building where people could picnic and sit on benches. The plan also included an expanded parking area for use by boaters and other visitors. Another aspect of the plan was a wooden walkway over the salt marsh to Government Island. The marsh could also be the site of a marsh walk, possibly created by the conservation commission. Another possible addition to the site could be a small float and some limited boat dockage for small boats.

Roebuck stressed that these proposed uses were just ideas of the committee and that they would welcome suggestions from town residents about other potential uses.

One of the biggest questions which remains about the site is the use of the showroom building. The town is undecided about whether it should retain the building for use by town groups or if it should subdivide the property and sell the building off as a residence. Sale of the property as a residence would require variances and a zoning change from light industry to residential use. One complication to this type of use is the fact that the septic tank would be located on a section of the property slated for use by the town. This would require that the town grant an easement to the purchaser of the showroom building for the use of the septic tank.

Other proposed uses of the showroom building include leased office space or leased residential space. The building could also be used for meetings of local organizations, as a site for classrooms, as a museum and art center or as a headquarters for use by local maritime groups like the Cohasset Community Rowing and Maritime Institute.

Jack Buckley spoke on behalf of Cohasset Community Rowing and the Maritime Institute, by urging the committee to consider a use of the property which would "tie all the area together with an historical theme."

Buckley reminded the committee of the town's rich heritage as a local for the construction and launching of lifeboats. He also referred to Hagerty's use of the property to construct racing shells.

"We could keep the historical perspective of the area and foster recreation, education and environmental stewardship," Buckley said.

One of Buckley's ideas was the development of a maritime center of some sort where citizens could involve themselves in rowing and sailing and where a museum could be developed. Buckley provided a slide presentation featuring slides of The Center For Wooden Boats in Seattle, Washington, which could serve as a model for his proposed use.

In a handout prepared by Buckley, the Cohasset Community Rowing and Maritime Institute urged the Hagerty Committee to "preserve Cohasset's historic lifesaving tradition, to give young people a place which honors Cohasset's maritime heritage and teaches them the lessons of Cohasset's service to humanity and to provide greater community access to and involvement in the harbor."

Specifically, Buckley asked that the Hagerty Committee make a unanimous recommendation at town meeting that the metal structure behind the showroom building be designated as the home for Cohasset Community Rowing and Maritime Institute. In exchange, Buckley indicated that his group will satisfy the financial concerns of the town over the next year in order to show that such use will not cost the taxpayers any additional money.

Land use ideas floated

Buckley's ideas seemed to be well-supported at the open meeting, with other members of the community expressing similar desires to foster the maritime traditions of the town.

"We are not geared at excluding others from use," explained Buckley, who indicated that his group would welcome any opportunity to be involved in the overall plan for the site.

Another idea for the property involved the development of a total harbor concept with the Government Island area, which would include gift shops and a bed and breakfast inn.

Still another idea was the implementation of a rack system in order to satisfy the existing demand for boat mooring space in Cohasset Harbor. Roebuck said that the committee had considered the use but felt that the aesthetic and financial concerns associated with such a plan prevented it from being a viable option.

Another suggestion was that the upper level of the showroom building be leased in order to support the use of the lower levels by various town organizations. Members of the committee emphasized that the town could serve as a satisfactory landlord if such a plan were undertaken.

The committee also discussed the possibility of providing for vehicular access from the Hagerty property to Government Island in order to ease the strained traffic problems associated with the town launch.

Finally, it is expected that the boathouse may be returned to Government Island, although not necessarily to its original location. At the present time, Government Island has gone through most of the procedures necessary for listing on the national register of historic places. Moving the boathouse back to the island would not likely adversely affect the island's chances for listing on the register.

The committee has not reached any formal decisions as to recommendations to town meeting but will continue to seek suggestions from town residents. The committee said it does hope to have a plan in place fairly soon so that town residents can enjoy the waterfront property.

Little League parade set

The annual Little League Parade will take place Saturday, April 30. About 300 baseball players will assemble at 8:15 a.m. in the parking lot behind the Red Lion Inn and will march to the Barnes Little League Field on N. Main St. Selectmen gave the okay for the annual rite of spring this week.

Shaw's plans to solve septic problems at Cushing Plaza

By Sean P. Sweeney
Mariner correspondent

The long standing wastewater disposal problems that have plagued the Cushing Plaza site off Rte. 3A may soon come to an end. At least that is what developers of a Shaw's Supermarket hope to accomplish over the next nine-to-12 months.

At its March 15 meeting, Larry Wagner, president of Appledore Engineering, Inc. of Newmarket, New Hampshire, presented plans to the health board. Appledore has been retained by Boylston Realty Trust to develop a wastewater disposal system for the Cushing Plaza site, where Boylston hopes to build a Shaw's Supermarket.

Present plans include razing all the plaza buildings. Developers hope to replace the existing 70,228 square feet of retail space with a Shaw's and dry-good retail stores totalling 69,250 square feet. The supermarket itself will be about 46,000 square feet.

The history of the site is rich with wastewater disposal problems which culminated in the filing of a civil lawsuit by the Cohasset Board of Health. On Feb. 9, 1990, the former owners entered into an agreement for judgement which provided for a schedule of improvements at the site to rectify wastewater problems.

Old Stone Bank, the former owner, commissioned a number of studies which showed the the only viable solution at the site was construction of a wastewater treatment plant.

According to Appledore representatives, the proposed change in the use of the site will have the effect of allowing for a much simpler and more practical system. Specifically, it is expected that the new use will reduce the wastewater design flow from the present 16,997 gallons per day to 8,435 gallons per day.

Presently, the site is serviced by three main subsurface wastewater disposal systems. The first is a leachfield behind Bergson's, which has a capacity of 5,436 gallons per day. This presently has a capacity which exceeds its use. The other two systems are leaching fields, one located at the center of the plaza and one located in front of Walgreens. Both of these fields have a history of failure and are currently manually operated by local septic hauler C. Spirito, Inc.

The new plan calls for construction of new buildings at the west end of the site. The buildings will be "supported by a new water, sewer, drainage and parking infrastructure" according to the written proposal of Appledore Engineering. The developers also plan to construct a new parking lot which will be between six and eight feet above the existing grade. This area will support the new subsurface absorption system that developers intend to implement.

The new system will include an exterior grease trap for the supermarket, an 18,000 gallon septic tank, a recirculating filter and an on-site pumping station directing wastewater to three soil absorption ar[illegible] The pumping station will allow for the alternation of the use of the various leaching fields, thus allowing each of the leaching fields to rest at different times for up to six month.s

William Baird, chairman of the health board, instructed Appledore representatives to make provision for the treatment of materials entering the groundwater by way of the floor drains in the various buildings. Baird expressed concern about acrylic materials entering the groundwater.

Appledore representatives indicated that the proposed system exceeds all state and federal regulations and is proof of Shaw's commitment to appropriate operation of the site with regard to wastewater and groundwater concerns.

Appledore expects to submit final plans and drawings to town boards by early June and will seek all necessary permits throughout the summer. Developers hope to begin construction at the site by early 1995.

Ambulance billing update

The town will send $2,225.74 in unpaid ambulance bills to a collection agency. Selectmen authorized the action this week. Voters at last year's town meeting okayed use of a collection agency for some unpaid, overdue bills.

The board also decided not to charge for use of the town defibrillator because the equipment is used for a very small number of runs that can't be billed to Medicare, a federal health insurance plan for senior citizens. The town was charging $75 for the service.

Selectmen explained that South Shore Hospital bills the patient directly when the Advanced Life Support service — provided to Cohasset by the hospital — is used in conjunction with the town's defibrillator and the town has been unsuccessful in getting reimbursement from the hospital.

South Shore Hospital replaces the pads on the defibrillator after each use, Selectman Merle S. Brown said. Pads cost about $20 a pair.

Cemetery committee update

Selectmen have still taken no action on resignations submitted two weeks ago from three members of the town's cemetery committee. Selectman Merle S. Brown suggested the board hold off another week until he talks to two of the three members who resigned in frustration when selectmen in a majority vote decided to withdraw a warrant article for town meeting submitted by the cemetery committee. Selectman Michael H. Sullivan voted with Martha K. Gjesteby and Brown when committee chairman Glenn Pratt could not guarantee an easement would not be needed over a private subdivision road to access the cemetery.

Brown said member Jane Hamilton said she does not want to continue on the committee. Because the five-member committee will need at least one new member, Brown said anyone interested in serving should contact him through the selectmen's office at 383-9900. Pratt and member Mary Hartwell also submitted their resignations.

The Grand Tour

with Ginger Ferenz, 383-2863

Spring has sprung at the home of Donald and Paula Dickerson, 225 Fair Oaks Lane. The front gates and doors are decorated with swags of yellow forsythia and dark purple violets tied with bright spring-yellow and deep purple ribbons and bows. The lamppost is decorated too with its own swag of forsythia tied up with a beautiful purple bow. Be sure to drive by and enjoy this first bit of springtime in Cohasset.

❑ The children of Berry Blue School certainly had a way to cure the winter blues recently! Instead of being "sleepless in Seattle," they were sleepless in Scituate at Berry Blue. Wearing pajamas, bathrobes, slippers and curlers, the children and teachers of Berry Blue Nursery School enjoyed an "evening" of popcorn and bedtime stories. Upon waking, they had a breakfast of their school-made English muffins and orange juice. Pajama Day was such a big hit with the children they are asking to do it again!

❑ Don't forget, deadline for the pre-registration for the 18th Annual Cohasset Roadrace is fast approaching, it is March 24. The race attracts more than 800 runners and starts at 1 p.m., Sunday March 27, at the Common with a Dixie Land Band. Free T-shirts and refreshments are available for all runners. A roadwalk precedes the race at 10 a.m. starting at Sandy Beach.

Residents are encouraged to keep dogs leashed and children from skateboarding or biking the race course during the race. Serious injuries can be incurred by unexpected collisions. The race benefits many of the Rotary Club sponsors.

Applications are still available at Curtis Liquors and Good Sport; the event has become an annual ritual of spring.

Peter Logan says credit must be given to Harold Litchfield and his team as they ready the streets and fix the potholes along the route.

"All the town departments sure work hard to make sure our town is impressive to all the out-of-town runners who rave about Cohasset's charm and beauty," Peter said.

Even if you don't run, be there. It is really exciting to watch.

Nicholas Mullin, John Creamer, Taylor Billings, Kelsie Litchfield, Patrick O'Brien, Gabrielle Dongra, Alex Cumo, Michael Ridge, Alyssa Hoffman, and Robin Dienel along with teachers Mrs. Bailey and Mrs. McLaughlin celebrate "pajama day" at the Berry Blue School.

❑ A lot of you remember Bruce Williams, a long-time Cohasset resident (former CHS grad) and teacher at CHS. He is now an author; his book is entitled Bambo Jordan, an anthropological narrative. Bruce was a member of the Peace Corps in the '60s, then went back with his wife, Claire (he dedicated the book to her) and son.

It is an interesting book about a grand friendship, read it!

❑ Heard from Wigmore ("Wig") Pierson last week, and he is soo happy.

Second term results at Derby Academy; his seventh grader, Elizabeth, was on the Headmaster's List for the second term in a row with four A's and a B+. His son, Morgan, in the fifth grade at Derby, also for the second term in a row was on the Honor's List for one A and four B's.

A proud papa once again, with third grader, Carrie, also doing very well but not receiving grades just yet.

Wig must be proud; we notice that he will have a special guest host on his show March 24, Patriot Ledger Editor William Ketter. He must be taking those special children on a vacation.

❑ Speaking of proud parents, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Baird Sr. are thrilled that their son Dan made the Dean's List at Vanderbilt University, in the School of Engineering. Congratulations go to you, Dan, you have the ability and the enthusiasm to excel. You will be a success.

❑ Now we will talk about a milestone. Fred and Marjorie Howe recently celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary! Their daughter, Mrs. Kenwood Meckler and husband, of Farmington, ME; Marnie and Craig Burton of Andover; Donald Burton Palmer and his wife Eleanor from CT; Frederick Elliott Palmer and wife Tricia of Cotuit; gave them a super gala at the Chart house, and report that the manager did a superb job, making everything just right. Isn't that great news.

❑ Katherine P. Dennis, a resident of Cohasset, has recently been named to the dean's list at Boston University and we certainly congratulate her.

❑ And, Elizabeth S. Corcoran has been named to the Honor Roll at Governor Dummer Academy for the second quarter of the school year. Good work, Elizabeth.

❑ Call with your news, we all want to hear about your latest event.

engagements

McAllister/ McDonough

Mr. and Mrs. Donald B. McAllister, Aaron River Rd. announce the engagement of their daughter, Robin B. McAllister to Patrick J. McDonough, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick McDonough, of Dorchester.

The bride-to-be is a graduate of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and Cohasset High School. She works as a fund liaison at Federated Services Corporation in Quincy.

Her fiancé is a graduate of Suffolk University and Don Bosco High School in Boston. He works as a sales representative at Alexander & O'Keefe.

An October wedding is planned.

Robin McAllister and Patrick J. McDonough

Senator is guest host

State Senator Brian J. McDonald (D-Weymouth) will be the guest host on the community cable TV program "Pierson to Person" from 8 to 9 p.m. Thursday March 17.

Guests will be Peter Pratt of Cohasset, discussing the negative consequences of expanding the Cohasset Heights Landfill; Mike DeLuca of Weymouth, who has been active on behalf of Massachusetts Water Resources Authority ratepayers and related issues; and Patricia Ludwig of the Daniel Webster Preservation Trust, discussing her efforts to preserve the historic Daniel Webster Estate in Marshfield.

"I am pleased to have this opportunity to discuss these interesting and important matters. 'Pierson to Person' provides a unique forum for South Shore residents to learn more about the issues and individuals that shape our community," said McDonald.

March 26

Mark your calendars for March 26 when the town gets down to its annual business of approving upwards of $15 million in spending for everything we take for granted — schools, roads, public safety, and more.

This year adding to town meeting interest are warrant articles asking voters for the go ahead with two special projects. The more glamorous is a proposed new athletic field with an all-weather track on land adjacent to the High School and Milliken Field. The other is more mundane but very important to the town — a new public works garage planned for town-owned land near the Little League fields off N. Main Street.

Most Cohasset voters will no doubt wait until the special override election May 14 to decide whether they back these projects. But the debate on the merits of both — and approval or disapproval of the projects — will actually occur on town meeting floor.

A successful override vote authorizes the town to raise the tax levy over the 2-1/2 percent cap to pay for the projects. Once the debt is paid — the tax hike (estimated at $60 the first year on a $300,000 home) goes away.

A lot of Cohasset citizens have spent countless hours coming up with plans for these projects. The pros and cons will be heard at town meeting. Don't miss the debate! Then casting your vote May 14 will be easy because you'll have all the facts.

Question of the week

Question of the week is providing a great forum for candidates to share their views on current issues. We're glad so many are taking advantage of what we see is a service to help voters make an informed choice at the April 2 town election.

The number of pages in the Cohasset Mariner in any given week is directly related to the amount of advertising sold so unfortunately we cannot expand solely to accommodate increased news. So because of space needed for question of the week and candidates corner — some community items have had to be squeezed and cut a bit or run less often than would normally be the case. To all those in community organizations affected — we thank you for your patience.

To the Editor:

To the students, parents, friends and fans of the Cohasset High School boys' varsity basketball team:

On behalf of the entire team, I would like to thank everyone who supported the team this past season. We had a great run that would not have been possible without the support of so many of you.

We, the players and coaches, want you all to know how much we appreciate the best fans in the state.

We will be back next season and it's great to know we have your support.

Train alternatives are supported

To the Editor:

Last night I attended a meeting of the Coastal Coalition, to obtain additional information regarding the restoration of the Old Colony Railroad. The meeting was attended by approximately 150 people from Hingham, Weymouth, Cohasset, and Scituate.

A guest speaker, Martha Reardon of The Harbor Consultancy International, an expert in water transportation, did a slide show on the Premier Water transport systems of Vancouver, Canada, Australia and New York. I was shocked when ir.formed that these non-wake, high powered boats are made in Massachusetts! Why is this not a consideration?

I truly believe that the citizens of our towns are not the least bit informed as to the ramifications of the restoration of the train with respect to pollution, liability exposures, and conservation. The train will cross over 42 roads in the short 18 miles it travels! This won't tie up traffic?

The "Journey to Work" statistics taken from the 1990 US Census shows that only 21 percent of the South Shore Citizens commute to Boston, many of them already use public transportation. What about the 79 percent who commute outside of Boston?

A hybrid system of water, bus and mono-rail obviously appears to be a solution to a train which would be loud, disruptive to traffic and a serious threat to the safety of the South Shore, servicing only a few town members but affecting everyone.

Please do not allow this to happen. I can only compare this with Frankenstein who resurrected a monster to charge through the cities, the Old Colony Railroad, which used to travel at 5 mph. has a place in history. A diesel train, traveling through wetlands, in close proximity to so many homes, at 30 mph. is not a solution but a problem of mammoth proportion.

Let's solve the problem of transportation together with what the people of the South Shore really need not what the M.B.T.A wants.

Anti-train group: too little, too late

To the Editor:

BUSES, BOATS — AND BOGEYMEN

As a strong supporter of the restoration of rail service to the Greenbush line, I was curious to see what the opposition might have to say at the meeting on March 10 of the group calling itself the "Coastal Coalition." This was publicized as an open meeting, but by the time the speakers were done, only enough time remained for about five questions. I did not get the impression that the sponsors were interested in comments anyway.

It is sad that after taxpayers have spent many thousands of dollars on the environmental study of the Greenbush line now entering its final stages, that someone would be trying to reinvent the wheel and cost us even more money. This group is offering too little, too late: the process has been under way for a decade now, and the majority of residents in the area have demonstrated by their votes in referenda that they want the rail restored. No one has advocated banishing buses and boats; they can serve as adjuncts to the rail service.

Sad, too, is the literature these people have been distributing, straight from the "Nimby's Handbook:" scare tactics, xenophobia disguised as environmental concern, and just plain falsehood. Two examples:

"Did you know that in the good old days of the 40's and 50's, the train CHUGGED through Hingham Square at 5 M.P.H.?" This is obviously false, if we're talking about commuter rail service. Passenger trains went through at 25 or 30 miles per hour, as their replacements will. Maybe they were thinking of the freight trains that still traveled through Hingham Square until 1976, with autos being dislodged from their parking places on the right of way.

And of course that obligatory piece of clip art, a steam locomotive belching smoke, next to the words: "You may have the impression that a return-to-yesteryear train will romantically grace the countryside..." Are these people really ignorant of the first class, air-conditioned service (which we on the

Question of the week

Each week, the Cohasset Mariner will pose a question to the candidates. Responses to the question may be mailed to the Cohasset Mariner, 165 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield, MA. 02050. Or, they may be faxed to our editorial office: (617) 837-4843 or (617) 740-8955. All responses must be submitted by Tuesday noon. There will be no exceptions to this deadline.

Responses by the candidates must be brief - a 200-word limit. Be specific and make every word count.

If you have any questions about this election policy, please call editor Mary Ford at 749-0031.

The Question of the Week is:

- For school committee candidates: Does the distribution of condoms have any place in Cohasset High School?
- Selectman: If elected, just how accessible will you be to the press and public?
- Planning board: Why (or why not) is the proposed DPW garage site the best one for the purpose?
- Water commission: How does Cohasset's water supply compare with other towns? Do local citizens take it for granted?
- Health board: Is the town doing enough to promote recycling? If not, what would you suggest?

The following candidates responded to last week's Question of the Week:

• Water commission: what will you do to restore public confidence in the water department?

Mark Bell,

water commission candidate

Confidence is the result of open honesty and accountability.

I will not allow for irregular billing procedures, open disregard for rules, irresponsible hiring procedures, and disrespect for employees and customers, which have earmarked the current commission's history.

Lack of integrity and open communication has justified the public anger. I have seen and heard about this first hand.

With my participation, issues of impropriety, whether to the public or to the employees, will not exist because issues will be decided within the framework of established, documented rules. I would like to put together a newsletter so citizens can have easy access to as much information as possible, such as the rules and operating procedures.

The water department must operate under good faith municipal guidelines of open, public and documented actions. These actions must be in the public interest and exist as an entity beyond friendships.

Confidence is earned over a long period of time, but lost once. We're seriously over our limit on this.

I will operate on an open basis with full observance of the rules and regulations that deal with basic honesty and giving respect to the Citizens of Cohasset. There is nothing else.

Fred Koed,

water commissioner candidate

Water Commissioners need to address issues of management, maintenance and finances.

In my view the taxpayers of Cohasset want the people in charge of their Water Department to be honest, competent, and responsive to their problems and concerns. They want open communications and knowledgeable personnel.

The Water Commission should be willing to look for new ways to solve problems with no pre-conceived ideas on the solutions. They need to make a timely decision on the appointment of a qualified daily manager, whether it be a superintendent or a private contractor. They need to explore a proper billing system that will be an honest reflection of water usage. When elected I will propose that the Commission immediately address these issues.

As your water commissioner, I will propose a re-metering program for the installation of outside meters. In the interest of public safety, I will propose an annual hydrant-flushing program as recommended by the National Fire Protection Association. Also, I will propose that a schedule for improvements in the distribution system and a schedule for preventative maintenance be developed and instituted.

• For school committee candidates: what is the school AIDS education policy? Does AIDS education start too young in Cohasset or does it not start young enough?

Daniel S. Evans,

school committee candidate

AIDS education should be analyzed like other curriculum issues. Are there reasons to teach it? If so, at what age? How much is appropriate, considering both age and competing curriculum needs?

I believe AIDS merits attention in our schools. Information is necessary both to reduce risky behavior and to treat those afflicted with fairness and compassion. In addition, current issues have a place in the classroom. However, we must not create anxiety. Nor should we promote means of risk avoidance that are inconsistent with prevailing morals.

In Cohasset, AIDS is discussed in the seventh grade (three periods) and tenth grade (ten periods). The curriculum was developed with parental involvement, and appears sensitive to issues of anxiety and morals. Parents may choose whether their seventh grader participates.

AIDS education could be introduced earlier. For instance, sexually transmitted diseases could be included in existing sixth grade sex education. AIDS could be discussed as an infectious disease even sooner.

Whether and how AIDS is discussed in these grades must be guided by parental views on the needs of their children. The results of last spring's survey of parents, to be released next week, should be just the beginning of parental involvement in the decision process.

James Kirk

school committee candidate

Currently, AIDS education is conducted at the end of the seventh grade health program and again in the tenth grade. Presented by a trained team, these units are part of Cohasset's K12 health curriculum. This comprehensive program provides a pyramid of attitude, awareness and educated decision-making for students: based on a foundation of shared community and parental values, it provides information and support appropriate to each student's age.

As part of the sixth grade unit on human sexuality, students often ask questions about AIDS. Again, trained leaders are responsible for dealing with these questions in either the class setting, or in discussion after class, depending on the appropriateness of the issue for the class as a whole.

I agree with efforts to consider materials to provide reassurance and healthy awareness about AIDS for students younger than sixth grade. The guiding principles for such materials must be the same as for the entire curriculum: community consensus, a basis in values, and age appropriateness.

The combined efforts of the Community Health Education Advisory Committee, the Health Education Coordinator, sensitive teachers, concerned physicians and nurses, and involved parents are providing our children with realistic and supportive education about this difficult issue.

JoAnne Chittick,

school committee candidate

The school AIDS education policy is based on the philosophy that providing education and promoting risk-free behaviors is the only way to keep young people healthy and prevent the spread of the AIDS virus. The AIDS education program presents accurate, age-appropriate information to help students develop the ability make responsible decisions and choose safe behaviors. Senior high students learn facts and myths about HIV/AIDS, discuss risk behaviors and situations, and learn prevention guidelines. Seventh graders are taught, by school and community health professionals, to understand facts about transmission of AIDS and to develop responsibility for their own health and well-being. Parents are encouraged to discuss these issues within the family.

An AIDS education program for younger children is still being developed. Results of a needs assessment survey of parents of children in grades three to six will be used by the health education coordinator and the Community Health Ed. Advisory Committee to create an age-appropriate AIDS program. The aim is to teach, in a straight forward yet sensitive approach that parents are comfortable with information that promotes safe health behaviors and allays fears about AIDS. Parents may hold their child out of the program.

In order to establish safe health practices early, very young children need to learn basic behaviors that will remove them from risk.

• Planning board: what can be done to attract more shops and businesses to Cohasset Village and keep them there?

Bill Good,

planning board candidate

In order to attract shops and businesses to our village, this downtown of ours needs the three P's — People, Parking, and "Packaging."

We need to let people everywhere know that Cohasset Village is thriving — and a destination that rivals more distant places. I propose three sets of three wooden signs in three different locations — at Exit 14 off Route 3 (Route 228), at the Route 3A South Cohasset line (by Cohasset Knoll), and just before Sohier St. on Route 3A south again (across from Good Sport). First sign shall say: Historic Cohasset Village; second sign shall say: Shops, Restaurants, Harbor Front; third sign shall say: Art Center, Museums, Bed and Breakfasts.

Additional flowering trees should be planted on both sides of South Main St. from Depot Court to the Red Lion Inn. The town parking area should be scrutinized in terms of lighting, landscaping, signage, traffic flow, and clear definition. It must be made more user-friendly and less "out-back." The area comprising the Post Office, Carousel, Arts Center, Strawberry Parfait, and Community Center needs to be visually "connected" with South Main St., Elm St., Brook St. and Parking Way, via the James Walkway recently created.

A new, walkable sidewalk, with curbing, should be constructed from Petersen Realty in front of St. Stephen's Church to the bus stop.

The vacant "Don't litter, police take notice" lot between Tedeschi's and French Memories should be transformed into a delightful, welcoming outdoor spot for sitting, chatting, snacking, etc.

Next, the shops and businesses...Cohasset needs, and can and will support a specialty shop like the old Central Market. Please, Sea and Cheese, Bread and Circus, or someone like you. The town will support a specialty shop and other shops to which people can bike, walk, drive and park. To life in the Village!

Here's the way to do all of this in a timely and cost-effective way: Invite all residents, current village landlords, current village tenants, Police Chief, Fire Chief, Highway Surveyor, Tree and Parks Department, Building Inspector, Village Renaissance Committee, Historical Society, Harbor Front Committee, Design Review Board, Rotary Club, Garden Clubs, and Chamber of Commerce to a Village Study Committee meeting to be held shortly after town meeting.

Dean Rizzo,

planning board candidate

At a recent planning board meeting a board member stated that he did not feel that it was the responsibility of the planning board to help businesses relocate if they are displaced by the possible redesign of Cushing Plaza. I feel the complete opposite.

I feel the board should take an active role in not only helping the businesses relocate but also in attracting new businesses to the town so that we no longer have empty retail and office space. I feel that it is the responsibility of the planning board to plan for the future . The board has to initiate new ideas and concepts to ensure economic and social stability throughout the town for our future generations to enjoy.

It is essential that the planning board initiates a questionnaire to be distributed to all the people and businesses within the town in order to have a sense of what everyone is thinking in regards to the growth and character of the town. An advisory board of representatives from the various boards and agencies within the town, the Chamber of Commerce, the various real estate agencies, the business owners, the individuals who own the empty space, and representatives of the citizens of the town is needed to develop a plan to attract new businesses and provide the support to make sure that the businesses remain a part of this town.

Other ideas which the town can develop for a business during its first year of operation are a free ad in the local Rotary phone book and a cooperative advertising program in the local papers to promote the services of the new business. It is important that we have a support system which will help establish awareness of the services of any new business during its first year of operation.

A cooperative effort between our neighboring communities such as Hingham, Hull, and Scituate is needed to sponsor a trade and marketing show free to all businesses within these communities. This show would give the local businesses an opportunity to promote and increase awareness of their services to all of us. In return for our efforts I would urge local businesses to offer some of their services free to their local town government and community. I think it is very important that we cultivate a working relationship with any new as well as existing business in our town.

• Selectmen: could the current brouhaha resulting in the cemetery committee resignations have been avoided? How would you have handled the situation?

Peter Pratt,

selectman candidate

The recent 'brouhaha' surrounding the efforts of the Cemetery Committee demonstrates just how difficult and frustrating things can become while volunteering on behalf of the town. The selectmen were responding to the concerns of property owners about possible eminent domain action, although no such action may even be necessary. The Cemetery Committee was attempting, following nearly eight full years of work, to carry out its mandate to find an acceptable new burial location which would minimize impacts on our neighborhoods. Everyone involved was attempting to do 'the right thing' from his own perspective.

The (3 to 2) vote of selectmen which triggered the resignations of committee members could ha e been avoided if each decision maker involved had been able to maintain open lines of communication to sort out the several conflicting priorities at hand. We all hope that the sincere efforts of Selectmen Merle Brown and former School Facilities Committee Chairman Rich Silvia to resolve the situation prove successful. We owe both individuals a debt of gratitude for attempting to find a solution to the recent impasse.

Hindsight is easy in these circumstances, and bad circumstances make for bad precedent. I believe, however, that had I been serving as selectmen, I would have been fully accessible to all parties so that I could help identify the requirements under which the Cemetery Committee was working. These factors — very tight time constraints as Town Meeting approached, the need for review by legal counsel, and a public understanding about the possible need for a minor public taking of easements — could have been better flagged and supported without the eventual contretemps emerging.

Landfill fate is major issue

To the Editor:

Even though we won a significant victory last month with the rejection the Final Environmental Impact Report for the proposed expansion of the Cohasset Heights Ltd. (CHL) landfill, it's not over yet.

CHL is not giving up; so neither can we. The people of Cohasset won this last round and, by continuing to fight, can stop this expansion once and for all.

Town elections are Saturday, April 2. Fortunately, CHL has emerged as one of the major issues in the campaigns for Selectmen, Board of Health and Water Commission.

I urge everyone reading this letter to ask these candidates what their position is on the proposed expansion of CHL, and what they would do — specifically — to deal with the current problems at CHL, and to take this issue into consideration when deciding how to cast your vote.

Sharks continue to swamp competition

By Bob Hatch
Special to the Mariner

You could feel it when you walked into the Sharks' locker room. The excitement and anticipation were unmistakable. The Sharks were so close to the Metro Championship they could taste it. The kids could clinch the title today if they won the two games they were scheduled to play and if the South Shore Kings tied or lost their game with the Hobomock USA Chiefs.

The Sharks faced off first against the Boston College Jr. Eagles. B.C. wasted little time getting on the board. The news from the Kings' game wasn't any better: Kings-1, Hobomock-0.

However, things improved quickly. Nick Dunn (Marstons Mills) tied the game off a nice pass from Chris Coady (Hanover) and some hustle in the corner by Bobby Noonan (Marshfield).

With the Sharks killing off a roughing penalty, they tallied again. Matt Bourassa dumped the puck in deep. A forechecking Nick Dunn grabbed the puck and threw it back to Kenny Roche at the left point. Kenny fired a wrist shot from the blue seeded D-S team than any opponent all season.

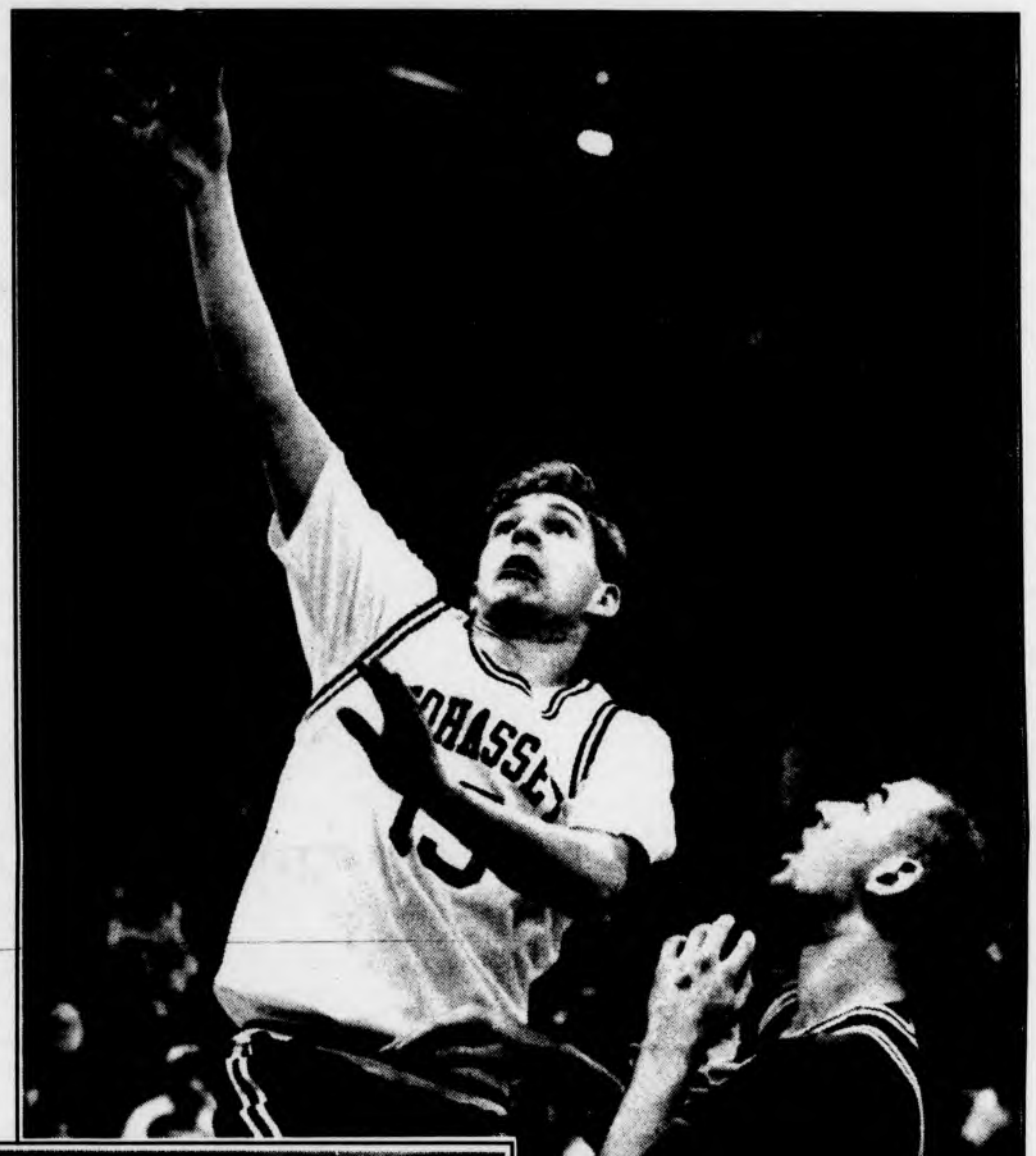
"They refused to quit," said Cohasset coach Ron Ford after emerging from the team's locker room, following a 20-minute talk with his disappointed club

"They cut the lead back to one. It was a tribute to the kids."

In the early going, it was the 20-3 Cohasset squad who looked as though it would be the ones on the parquet floor of the Boston Garden in Tuesday afternoon's Eastern Mass. championship. Jim Magner's (team-high,15 points) 3-point shot at 7:05 gave Cohasset the quick, 17-7 cushion Ford was looking for.



Cohasset's Jim Magner (13) scores two of his 15 points on a layup in Sunday's Division 3 South Sectional final at UMass-Boston.

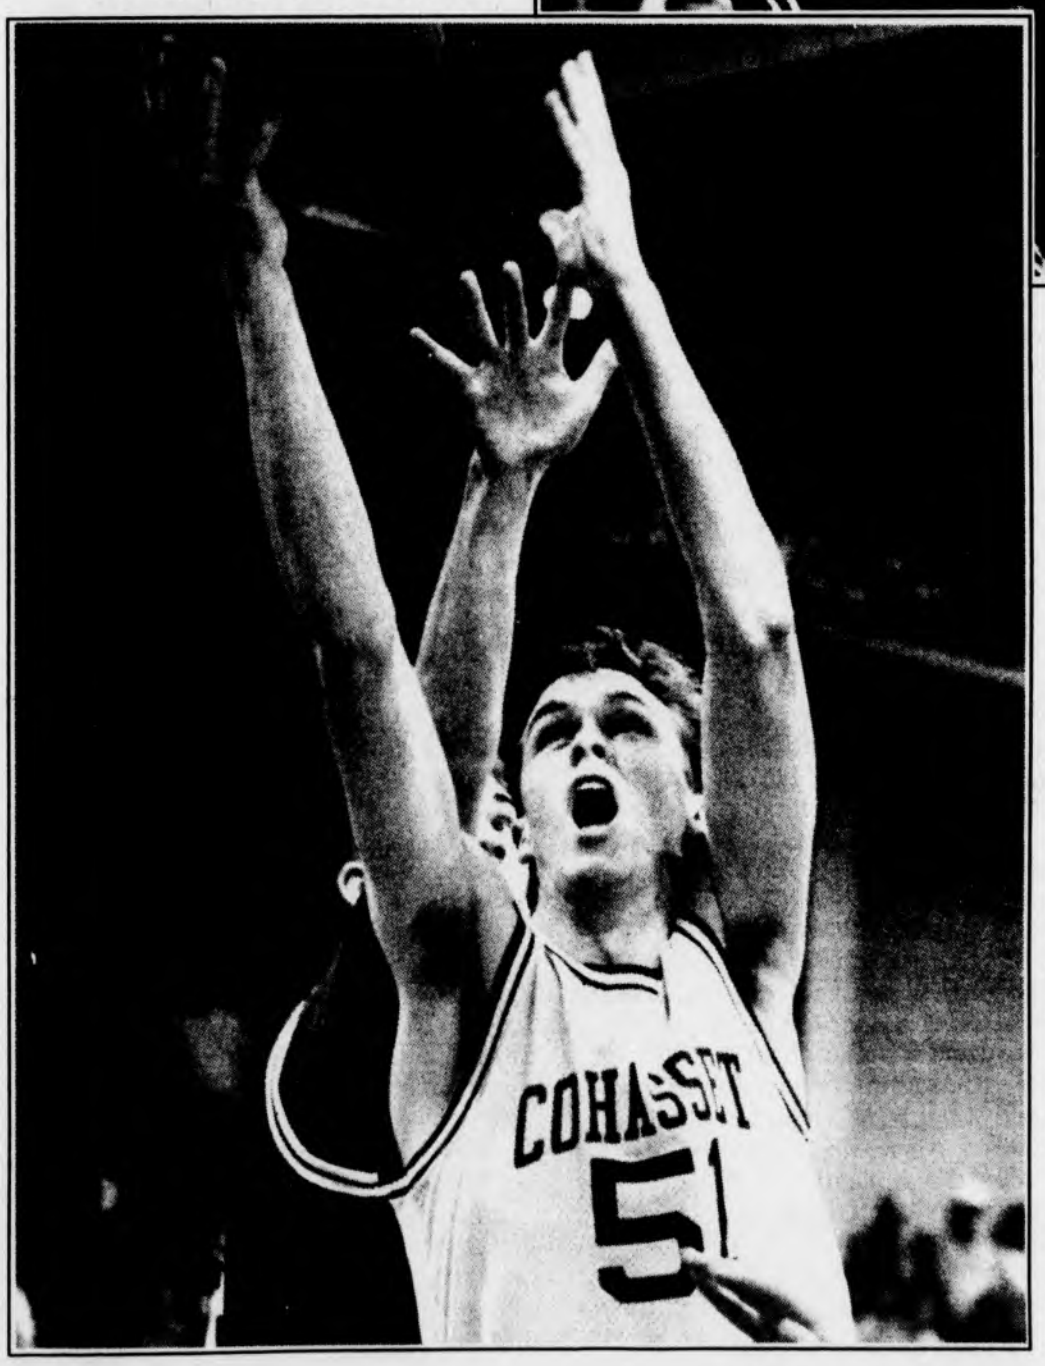
Peter Bishop (51) muscles his way past a Dover-Sherborn player to pull down a rebound.
(Staff photo/Buzz Wadsworth)



Cohasset outrebounded the Warriors, 19-5 in the first half. Dorian Bryant (11 rebounds) had six and Peter Bishop pulled down five of his eight overall.

Bishop's two drive to the hoop from inside the key gave the Skippers consecutive baskets, while Joe Slotnick's 10-foot jump shot put Cohasset up quickly, 6-0. Magner scored three times, including a 3-point shot, during the 17-7 run as well.

However, D-S (20-3) wasn't about to roll over and let the Skippers drive back to the South Shore with the title the Raiders claimed a year ago, firmly in their clutches.

Cohasset managed to preserve what appeared to be a more than comfortable margin. But when the 10:44 mark hit, D-S attacked the Skippers, offensively and went to work against the Skippers' offense and defense alike putting themselves back into contention.

Ford's efforts to turn the title game into a Skippers' rout came to an abrupt and rude hault, after Cohasset played near flawless ball to build a 12-point lead at 13:59.

"We had a chance to put that game away early and we didn't," said Ford after meeting with his team for 20 minutes following the final buzzer. "But

What a week it was for the Rockland and Cohasset High boys' basketball teams. The two teams hooked up for the Division 3 South Sectional semifinal, last Wednesday, in a thrilling game at Braintree High School.

The game had everything a tourney clash should: an enthusiastic crowd, plenty of strategy by coaches Bob Fisher and Ron Ford, and some top-notched play from a crop of talented players including Rockland's Steve Capone, Chris DeMars, Dan O'Brien and Cohasset's Joe Slotnick, Dorian Bryant, Peter Bishop and Thomas Allen.

Unfortunately, the following game between Foxboro and Dover-Sherborn became ugly when two D-S players were injured during a brawl in the final minute of play.

There is no room in high-school sports for violence. Sports offer an alternative to kids with little direction, but who could actually fare well in a structured activity. It beats winding up in the gutter, bleeding from a gunshot wound.

As violent as the brawl was, it was child's play when compared to the harsh realities of the streets in certain communities in and around Boston.

Reflections on the state tourney.

Neutral site scheduling has gone too far.

To my knowledge there wasn't one state tourney hockey game at the Pilgrim Arena in Hingham or the Hobomock Arena in Pembroke. Those are two of the best rinks around and are centrally located for tourney teams like Marshfield, Duxbury, Hanover, Whitman-Hanson, Hingham, Canton, Stoughton and Abington.

Instead the MIAA decided the games should be held in Watertown, Plymouth and even Merrimack College in North Andover.

Next year, the state tourney games will be held in Juno, Alaska if the MIAA has their way.

Tourney basketball officiating could have been better.

I went to a Division III girls' state tourney game and there were so many whistles, I thought I was at a parade.

Let the players play. Unless there is physical contact that directly impedes someone's ability to move on the court, let it go.

Three point shooting is the greatest thing since sliced baloney.

Playing against a bigger team. Fire a three. Playing against a more talented team. Fire a three. Losing by ten points and need to turn things around. Fire a three.

Three pointers are the great equalizer and add so much to the game.

If you can hit from the outside, you will play. Dunking and behind the back passes look great, but nothing tops a long bomb for three.

Hettstrom motivated by goals, not awards

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Erica Hettstrom won't deny the fact that repeating as the all-around champion in next year's Pilgrim Conference 2 gymnastics meet is one of her goals. But if someone emerged to grab top honors and defeat Hettstrom, it wouldn't mark the end of the soft-spoken freshman's gymnastics career.

Hettstrom's major focus has always been to improve her personal-best scores in the four events she whirls her 5-foot-4, 110-pound body through.

Having fun is high on the list as well.

While many athletes allow their nervousness on meet day hinder their performances, Hettstrom approaches her craft with the enthusiasm of a youngster spending the day at a carnival. After all, why compete at all if you're not going to enjoy the experience.

"When I first started high school it was like 'oh no, we have a meet tomorrow,'" Hettstrom explained. "This year it was 'great, we have two meets this week.' I think that made a difference because I enjoy it a lot more."

Along with winning the all-around competition in the conference meet, Hettstrom was selected to the All-Star squad in the all-around. But it was her consistent performances on the beam through the season which got Hettstrom selected to the State Individual meet. She rarely strayed far from her personal best of 8.5, as her 8.4 average would indicate.

Still, Hettstrom was surprised when head coach Ruthann Sargent, the only coach she ever had, notified her with the good news.

"I was really shocked when I found out because I didn't think I was going to get in," Hettstrom said. "I was thrilled when Ruthann called me and told me I made it."

Ironically, before this season the beam was never Hettstrom's forte. During the Gritty comeback falls short in final

you can't win every tight tourney game."

Led by the shooting of the quick-footed Mike Palka (22 points), the Raiders caught the Skippers on their heels. A handful of steals and turn overs enabled D-S to put together a 12-0 run and its first lead of the game, 38-37, with 6:59 remaining in the half.

Ford said the Raiders "didn't present any problems in the first half," but such was not the case in the second when D-S began to create their own opportunities on offense. The Warriors also found its touch on the boards, winding up with 12 for the half.

"They did a great job and capitalized on the turnovers," Ford said. "We just didn't have it in the second half."

Ford said he couldn't substitute as well as he would have liked because of the foul trouble his players were in. Magner fouled out with just under five minutes to play and Bryant was used sparingly during the second half.

When the dust finally settled, the Raiders whipped Cohasset with a 23-5 explosion, giving them a 49-42 lead with just over three minutes remaining.

Like D-S, the Skippers put together their own rally, albeit, not the scoring spree the Raiders cut loose with. When Slotnick stripped a rebound with 27 seconds left and drained a quick jump shot, Cohasset was still very much in the game, trailing 49-48.

But on this day, Cohasset needed more than what carried them thru close decisions over Norwell and Rockland in its previous two tourney games.

D-S's Joe Ingegneri (10 points) made good on two free throws. Ford immediately called a timeout with nine seconds left to set-up the inevitable 3-point attempt Cohasset had to take.

When play resumed, guard Tom Allen started under Cohasset's hoop and raced upcourt. He passed over to Slotnick, whose 3-point shot hit the back of the rim and was hauled down by D-S's Jason Boudreau (11 points) in a mad scramble by both teams for the rebound.

Boudreau was fouled and proceeded to cooly hit both shots with no time remaining on the clock, clinching the title for D-S.

The Skippers had all they could handle just getting to the finals, thanks to 13th-seeded Rockland in last Wednesday night's semifinal game at Braintree High School. Cohasset eventually slipped past the Bulldogs, 59-54, but not before Rockland gave the Skippers a scare along the way.

With the height advantage weighing heavily in the Skippers' favor, the Bulldogs still managed to score a number of their points inside, although Cohasset's rebounding was one mountain Rockland couldn't conquer.

Ford expected nothing less than a down-to-the-wire showdown against the Atlantic Coast League squad, which defeated Carver and Dedham in its first two tourney games.

"Those guys played their guts out," said Ford, who was mobbed by Cohasset students who spilled onto the court at the final buzzer. "This is one of the best coached teams in the state. I have nothing but admiration for Bob Fisher."

Chris DeMars, who was the most consistent insider scorer for the Bulldogs, led Rockland with 12 points. Steve Capone picked up 11 and Heath Kight with 10.

The game was played true to form and served as an example of team seeds meaning little once the tournament gets underway. One could have guessed Rockland was the top-seeded club if he didn't know beforehand.

Cohasset led by one (23-22) in a see-saw first half. The two squads traded baskets for much of the first, with the biggest lead of five coming on Allen's 3-point shot at 4:38. The speedy junior had 16 points, just behind Bishop's 18.

The teams played virtually even, trading 11 baskets in a row from the 8:15 mark when Allen picked up a steal and went the length of the floor for a layup, to Capone's 3-pointer at 4:48.

Rockland had its best success scoring down low during the stretch. Scott Peterson's hoop and two baskets from DeMars were made in heavy traffic under the Cohasset hoop.

The scoring binge was just an inkling of what was yet to come. Bishop put the Skippers up by 10 (53-43) with 2:54 remaining, before the Bulldogs bore down and chipped away at Cohasset's lead. Rockland got six big points at the foul line from Capone and Rich Murphy.

The Bulldogs then made it a three-point game (55-52) on Kight's 3-pointer with 56 seconds left, but Allen answered with a jump shot and Matt Pearce finished off the Skippers' scoring with an easy basket, 20 seconds until the final buzzer, ending Rockland's season.

Sharks continue to swamp competition

line that found the top corner for the short-handed goal.

At this point the Sharks' red line of Brian Boyle, Dave Saggese, and Pat Devine, all from Hingham, took over. Saggese picked off a B.C. pass and sent Boyle in alone to make it 3-1. Brian banged home the Sharks' fourth goal with the help of Pat Devine. On this play, Pat not only got credit for the assist, but also for the nastiest body-check of the season.

After another B.C. goal it was Devine and Boyle again. This time Pat knocked in a Boyle rebound. Scotty Sparks (Norwood) chipped in on this goal with a big play at the point to keep the puck in the zone. The second period ended with the Sharks up 5-2.

B.C. made it interesting with an early third period goal to make it 5-3. That was as close as it would get. Though BC would get a few more quality shots John Lynch (Hingham), who had played a spectacular game in net so far, and got even better in the third period, shut them down the rest of the way.

With B.C. pressuring the Sharks in the Bay State zone, Ryan Hatch (Hanover) came up with a big defensive play by stealing the puck and putting a pass on Brian Lewis' (Cohasset) stick. With two Eagle defenders on his back Brian let go a slapshot from eight feet for the goal.

A few minutes later Chris Coady dropped a pass back to Hatch on the right point. Ryan moved into the slot and made a nice back-handed pass to Nick Dunn, who was camped in front of the net. Slick jammed it in for the seventh and final goal of the game. With the Sharks winning 7-3 and the Kings tying Hobomock 2-2, it meant the boys could clinch the championship with a victory over the Assabet Valley Patriots.

The Patriots, however, had to win this game in order to qualify for the final Metro playoff spot. So each team had a lot on the line. The Sharks were in command from the beginning. Boyle tipped in a Devine pass and moments later Ryan Hatch and Lewis assisted on a Greg Osborne (Stoughton) goal. The Sharks put it away in the second period with three goals, two beauties from Saggese, and then Matt Bourassa and Greg Osborne helped Garret Daigler (Hingham) bang one home.

Leading 5-0 after two periods, the Sharks went into their prevent defense in the third.

Scotty Sparks had an outstanding game defensively and the Sharks' Blue Line of Coady, Noonan and Dunn shut down Assabet Valley with some great forechecking.

The Patriots did manage to get off a number of blistering shots, but nothing got by goalie Gabe Winer (Stoughton). The Gabester was great and so were his teammates. When it was all done the Sharks had the shutout and the league championship. Congratulations, kids and coaches. We're all very proud of you.

Sidelines

The Mariner caught up with Cohasset High cheerleaders Becky Callentine, Melissa van der Werf and Jen Vanderpool while they were warming-up, prior to Saturday's Division 3 South Sectional basketball final at UMass-Boston.

The girls were asked: "Who is your favorite athlete and why?"

Becky Callentine: "Shaq. He's good at basketball, he was in (the movie) 'Blue Chips' and I like his CD.

Melissa van der Werf: "Steve Young. He's the quarterback for the 49ers, my favorite team. And he's a Mormon."

Jen Vanderpool: "Michael Jordan. He's an all-around guy."

Hettstrom motivated by goals, not awards

summer she worked hard in all four events under the watchful eye of Sargent. Then there came the turning point which convinced her to concentrate on making her mark on the beam during the winter.

"Ruthann really pushed us in everything," she said, "and I finally landed an aerial (a no-handed cartwheel). It made the beam very exciting."

Hettstrom eventually added jumps, turns and leaps to her routine, as well as a front-flip dismount. When added to the aerial, the routine reached a full difficulty level of 10.

Sargent said Hettstrom's progress from eighth-grade to her freshman year was significant. She credited her success to Hettstrom's dedication and hard work in the gym, during the summer and regular season.

"She's improved incredibly," Sargent said, "especially on the floor (where her best score is an 8.45) and balance beam. Erica worries about having a good time, not the the others' scores.

"She was more consistent than the girl from Scituate (Jenny Stone) and the girl from Hanover (Renee George)."

Unlike regular season dual meets which move along at a fairly rapid pace, the State Invitational was a five-hour event where Hettstrom had to compete against more than 40 other gymnasts throughout Massachusetts.

"This was a little different," Hettstrom said. "It was individual, so your team wasn't there. But it was really fun because there were a lot of good girls to watch."

Hettstrom had to check-in in the morning, do her warm-ups, then wait patiently until it was time for her one minute and 25 second routine on the beam.

Hettstrom wound up having one of her rare off-days on the beam. She fell off at one point, which brought her score down to a 7.25.

Although she was a little disappointed with her routine, Hettstrom was already looking forward to the '94 Invitational.

"This was one of my hardest meets all year," said Hettstrom, who expects to see some familiar faces at next season's meet. Namely, her Cohasset teammates.

"I know some other girls from Cohasset will go next year," Hettstrom said confidently.

One of those who very well could end up in the individual meet is Hettstrom's younger sister, Tara. Just a seventh-grader, Tara finished third in the floor exercise in the league meet, and scored in the top three in a number of events during the season.

Hettstrom said she likes having her younger sister as a teammate and the fact both girls are supportive of each other in their gymnastic endeavors. Sibling rivalry between the pair has never reared its head.

"She helped our team a lot this year," Hettstrom said. "I know we couldn't have done a lot of the things we did without her there."

Sargent, too, considers Tara a big part of the team with a strong future in front of her. "I think Tara is following in her foot steps," Sargent said. "She's only in the seventh-grade but she's a terrific athlete."

As important as gymnastics are to Hettstrom, she can hardly be regarded as a one-dimensional girl, obsessed with the sport. She's an honor roll student and won the Outstanding Attitude Award as a seventh-grader.

Hettstrom served on the board of directors for the new teen center, which is now part of the community center, and is a student council representative at Cohasset High School.

When she's not in the gym, Hettstrom stays in shape through a number of activities including softball, skiing, diving and tennis. "And she's good at all of them," Sargent said with a laugh.

When the season is underway, however, Hettstrom's daily routine is made up of classes, practice and studying. Socializing is put on the backburner until March.

"I come home, do my homework and go to practice," Hettstrom said. "I don't really have any time with my friends during the season. Now I have the extra days and more time to spend with them."

With the sensational season the Cohasset squad had in dealing Scituate its first dual meet loss since 1982, and eventually tying the Sailors for the league championship, both Sargent, Hettstrom and the rest of the squad are already looking forward to a '95 encore.

"She's a very hard worker," Sargent said. "Actually the whole team is back in the gym and working harder than ever because they want the championship without Scituate."

"I think if we work hard all summer we have a really good chance to be on top next year," Hettstrom said. "If you take time off from the gym, you lose a lot of flexibility. You have to work on it year-round."

And yes, there are more goals Hettstrom already has mapped out. She plans to set specific moves over the summer and have them fine-tuned by the start of the high school season.

"I like to push myself as hard as I can," Hettstrom said. "I set goals for myself and I work to get them.

"Your efforts efforts are for the team and to pull them through."

Chiropractic . . .

. . . is so much more than just treatment for bad backs, necks and sprains or strains.

. . . is a natural method of health care based on the premise that good health depends, in large part, upon a normally functioning nervous system. Most functions of the systems of the body are controlled by nerves. The spinal column, with it's 24 moveable bones, encases the delicate switchboard to the nervous system. If these bones lose their normal motion or position, they can irritate the nervous system. This disrupts the normal nerve flow and can cause malfunction of the tissues or organs controlled by the affected nerves. This condition is known as a vertebral subluxation.

. . . is the only branch of the healing arts that deals directly with these areas of spinal malfunctions. The job of the chiropractor is to locate the vertebral subluxation, which interferes with normal function, and to correct it without the use of drugs or surgery. The result is better health!

Do you now wonder if you have this condition?

There is never a charge for a consultation with the doctors.

PSO seek volunteers

The Nominating Committee of the PSO is seeking volunteers for next year's executive board. There are openings for school representatives, PSO activities chairmen, publicity, special needs, community relations, and others. There are also subcommittee openings for helping with mailings, fundraising, and community relations.

The Executive Board meets once a month during the school year. Subcommittees meet as needed.

If you are interested in getting involved with this organization that acts as the main communication link between schools and parents, please call a member of the Nominating Committee. The members are Terese D'Urso, 383-1143; Maureen Jerz, 383-6592; Linda Keller, 383-6873; Regina Schultz, 383-0598; Gail Stevens, 383-6013; Karla Watts, 383-0371; and Ruth Wilcox, 383-1827.

Please call one of the above mentioned people as quickly as possible. The list of new board candidates is mailed to the PSO membership in April and voted into office at the Annual Meeting in May.

Health meeting, March 22

The Cohasset Health Education Advisory Council will meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday March 22 in room 206 at the high school.

Any Cohasset resident interested in the K-12 comprehensive health education program in the Cohasset public schools is welcome to join the committee.

January math meet

In the Euclidean division the grade seven team consisted of Morgan Bigley, Greg Boyne, Alexandra D'Urso, Ian Mathews, Alex Schwerin, and Megan Waal. The students with the highest cumulative scores to date are Ian Mathew and Greg Boyne.

In the Pythagorean division the team consisted of Jeff Flanagan, Justin Golden, Nick Herzog, Alyssa McNamara, Ben Smoot and Steve Sceery.

The student with the highest cumulative scores to date is Alyssa McNamara.

Math contest results

The students of grade eight at Cohasset Junior High School have been participating in various math contests during the year. Each year students participate in the Continental Math League contests. These are given each month from November through March, and each test consists of six questions that involve students using their math skills to solve difficult math problems.

In Level I math, the January contest in the Pythagorean Division has the following high scorers: Josh Flanagan with six points, and Katie Buckley, Michael Christoffel, Alison Kinchla and Eric Wenmark with five points. Great job, grade eight!

In Level II math, the January contest in the Euclidean Division had several students with three points. These students were Andy Hamilton, Hayden Hodgson, Hillary Lamp, Rob Moody, Sarah Nohe, Patrick Leahy, Lauren Dooley and Janet Hoyler. Great thinking, grade eight!

For the year so far, the leading scorers are Katie Buckley, Josh Flanagan, Michael Christoffel and Justin McNamara. Sarah Nohe is the high scorer in the Euclidean Division.

Grade eight also participated in the American Junior High School Mathematics exam. The winners for this exam were: first place, Michael Christoffel and Tim Thomas; second place, Katie Buckley and Sue Gill; and third place, Justin McNamara.

Keep up the good work, grade eight!

SAT preparation offered

The Community Center will offer SAT preparation. SAT math preparation will be held beginning March 31, 7 to 9 p.m.

SAT English preparation will begin March 30, 7 to 9 p.m. These courses review the basic skills. The five week courses cost $75. Call 383-0088 to register. Class size is limited.

Senior parents' meeting

The PSO invites all parents of the Cohasset High School Class of 1994 to a meeting Thursday, March 31, at 7:30 p.m. at Cohasset High School.

End of the year activities will be discussed and graduation invitations may be ordered. College application and scholarship information will be available.

For further information, please call PSO representatives Connie Afshar at 383-6006 or Terese D'Urso at 383-1143.

Garden club scholarships

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will award one or more scholarships to any qualified graduating high school senior who plans to further his/her education, regardless of college major.

Any student interested in an area of horticulture or environmental arts and sciences should consider applying.

Service to the community is an important consideration.

Applications are available at the high school guidance office and must be submitted by Friday April 8.

SSL offers scholarship

The Social Service League of Cohasset is offering a $1,500 scholarship open to residents of Cohasset continuing their education in the medical or social work field.

Applications are available at the high school guidance office or at the Social Service League office, 16 Highland Ave.

Coalition wants Greenbush derailed

environmental study that looked at various options, only $35,000 was spent exploring expanded ferry service.

"A ferry system that was really thought through in Boston Harbor would be able to work with rapid transit and automobile transportation," Reardon said after she showed an elaborate slide presentation that outlined successful ferry and commuter boat usage in cities such as San Francisco and Seattle.

Reardon's words were echoed by many in the group who believe that though the South Shore desperately needs new transportation, the MBTA has tried to force feed the train to residents and has not properly explored other options, including improving and expanding the bus, boat and subway service.

"The best option is integration of the three systems," said Gilman Wilder of Scituate. "I fault the MBTA for not integrating the three modes that we have."

Safety is also a chief concern among organizers, who cited the high number of grade crossings, intersections between tracks and surface roads, along the train's route.

"There are going to be a lot more deaths because of the railroad," said Randy Young of Hingham, who said people with young children should be especially concerned. "A lot of us, in fact, fear it because it's going to bring a whole new environment to the South Shore."

Another myth organizers sought to dispel is that Hingham is the only town that truly opposes the train. The rally was attended by residents of Marshfield, Scituate, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Weymouth, and many expressed their displeasure with their respective selectmen.

"I am sick of hearing that it's an elitist issue that affects only Hingham," said Ellen Kelly of Weymouth.

But while it was clear that nearly everyone who attended the rally opposed the installation of the commuter rail on the South Shore, questions arose about the best method to express that opinion.

Coalition organizer Nancy Buckley plans to distribute petitions for volunteers to collect signatures and then pass those petitions on to Governor Weld. However, some in attendance felt that was not enough.

"If it's just continued nay-saying, I don't think it will work," said Drew Horn of Hingham. "Unless somebody starts speaking specifically, then those who do - the MBTA - will win out."

But Buckley feels that because the selectmen of several South Shore communities - Hingham excluded - are planning to meet with the governor within the next few weeks in support of the Greenbush line, those that oppose the project need to bond together in an effort to steer the MBTA and the governor in the right direction. She hopes the petitions will serve as an indication to legislators that the selectmen are armed with inaccurate assessments of the feelings of their constituents.

In fact, several speakers indicated they felt that the questions on the referenda of some towns were unfairly biased in favor of the train. Scituate's Wilder and Edward Guild of Cohasset both complained that the questions were slanted in their towns and are concerned that true feelings have not been expressed to selectmen and other lawmakers.

A consensus concerning the best alternative to the train was not reached, but organizers felt the forum more than served its purpose, and they plan to press on.

"We can see that there are some options," said moderator George Malouf of Hingham. "And by the looks of things tonight, there are people who are interested in these options."

Name: Ron Ford

Occupation: Cohasset physical education teacher grades 7-12, boys' varsity Basketball and Baseball Coach and girls' Junior Varsity Soccer coach.

Best day of your life: Sunday at the State South Sectional Div. III finals in Boys' Basketball at UMass Boston. We lost, but the kids played as hard as they could play and never quit and that's all I can ask for as a coach.

Most embarrassing moment: This past season on banner night when we unveiled the banner and a few unnamed members of the administration put a soccer banner over our basketball one.

Goal: To be the best coach I can be.

Favorite season: This past winter because it was basketball season.

Best vacation: The time I spend at basketball camp in the summer.

Favorite holiday: Christmas.

Pet peeve: Trash talking and poor sportsmanship.

Favorite book: "Season on the Brink," by John Feinstein.

Favorite movie: "The Maltese Falcon."

Biggest worry: That my players will put athletics before academics. I spend countless hours telling them not to.

Favorite place: My parents' place in New Hampshire.

Favorite junk-food: Cheesecake.

Person you'd most like to meet: Larry Bird.

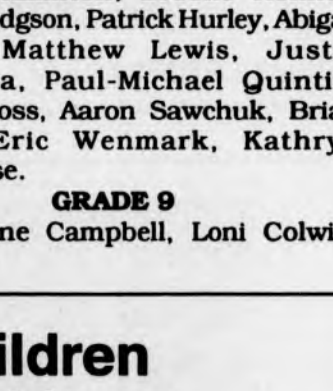
New help for children with learning problems

Norwell A free screening may find the cause of your child's learning problems. Some of the many symptoms displayed by children with learning disabilities often include:

- clumsiness
- doing work slowly
- avoidance of reading
- concentration
- trouble copying
- inability to sit still
- letter reversals
- careless errors
- poor hand-eye coordination
- forgetting what has just been read

HELP IS AVAILABLE

Now a team of professionals in the fields of vision, psychology, and education has developed a remarkable therapy program called VIP. This intense, one-on-one program attacks the causes of these problems and dramatically improves a child's ability to learn and the speed at which he learns. This unique program is now available by Dr. Han Dong, a practicing optometrist for 25 years.



Dr. Han Dong

FREE EVALUATION

There is a free screening for children between the ages of six and 16. It includes a series of 18 tests that measure concentration, visual memory, letter reversals, eye-hand coordination, visual teaming, focusing, and sensory integration. After the screening is completed, you receive results and recommendations.

THE TIME TO ACT IS NOW

If your child is between six and 16 years of age, call us today at (617) 659-1444 to set up an appointment for a free screening. Can you afford to pass up the possible explanation for your child's baffling lack of success in school? This therapy is covered by most major insurance policies.

Call (617) 659-1444 to schedule screening.
Next screening dates: March 24 and 30.

The student with the highest cumulative scores to date is Alyssa McNamara.

Math contest results

The students of grade eight at Cohasset Junior High School have been participating in various math contests during the year. Each year students participate in the Continental Math League contests. These are given each month from November through March, and each test consists of six questions that involve students using their math skills to solve difficult math problems.

In Level I math, the January contest in the Pythagorean Division has the following high scorers: Josh Flanagan with six points, and Katie Buckley, Michael Christoffel, Alison Kinchla and Eric Wenmark with five points. Great job, grade eight!

In Level II math, the January contest in the Euclidean Division had several students with three points. These students were Andy Hamilton, Hayden Hodgson, Hillary Lamp, Rob Moody, Sarah Nohe, Patrick Leahy, Lauren Dooley and Janet Hoyler. Great thinking, grade eight!

For the year so far, the leading scorers are Katie Buckley, Josh Flanagan, Michael Christoffel and Justin McNamara. Sarah Nohe is the high scorer in the Euclidean Division.

Grade eight also participated in the American Junior High School Mathematics exam. The winners for this exam were: first place, Michael Christoffel and Tim Thomas; second place, Katie Buckley and Sue Gill; and third place, Justin McNamara.

Keep up the good work, grade eight!

SAT preparation offered

The Community Center will offer SAT preparation. SAT math preparation will be held beginning March 31, 7 to 9 p.m.

SAT English preparation will begin March 30, 7 to 9 p.m. These courses review the basic skills. The five week courses cost $75. Call 383-0088 to register. Class size is limited.

Senior parents' meeting

The PSO invites all parents of the Cohasset High School Class of 1994 to a meeting Thursday, March 31, at 7:30 p.m. at Cohasset High School.

End of the year activities will be discussed and graduation invitations may be ordered. College application and scholarship information will be available.

For further information, please call PSO representatives Connie Afshar at 383-6006 or Terese D'Urso at 383-1143.

Garden club scholarships

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will award one or more scholarships to any qualified graduating high school senior who plans to further his/her education, regardless of college major.

Any student interested in an area of horticulture or environmental arts and sciences should consider applying.

Service to the community is an important consideration.

Applications are available at the high school guidance office and must be submitted by Friday April 8.

SSL offers scholarship

The Social Service League of Cohasset is offering a $1,500 scholarship open to residents of Cohasset continuing their education in the medical or social work field.

Applications are available at the high school guidance office or at the Social Service League office, 16 Highland Ave.

Call 383-0771 for information.

Coalition wants Greenbush derailed

environmental study that looked at various options, only $35,000 was spent exploring expanded ferry service.

"A ferry system that was really thought through in Boston Harbor would be able to work with rapid transit and automobile transportation," Reardon said after she showed an elaborate slide presentation that outlined successful ferry and commuter boat usage in cities such as San Francisco and Seattle.

Reardon's words were echoed by many in the group who believe that though the South Shore desperately needs new transportation, the MBTA has tried to force feed the train to residents and has not properly explored other options, including improving and expanding the bus, boat and subway service.

"The best option is integration of the three systems," said Gilman Wilder of Scituate. "I fault the MBTA for not integrating the three modes that we have."

Safety is also a chief concern among organizers, who cited the high number of grade crossings, intersections between tracks and surface roads, along the train's route.

"There are going to be a lot more deaths because of the railroad," said Randy Young of Hingham, who said people with young children should be especially concerned. "A lot of us, in fact, fear it because it's going to bring a whole new environment to the South Shore."

Another myth organizers sought to dispel is that Hingham is the only town that truly opposes the train. The rally was attended by residents of Marshfield, Scituate, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Weymouth, and many expressed their displeasure with their respective selectmen.

"I am sick of hearing that it's an elitist issue that affects only Hingham," said Ellen Kelly of Weymouth.

But while it was clear that nearly everyone who attended the rally opposed the installation of the commuter rail on the South Shore, questions arose about the best method to express that opinion.

Coalition organizer Nancy Buckley plans to distribute petitions for volunteers to collect signatures and then pass those petitions on to Governor Weld. However, some in attendance felt that was not enough.

"If it's just continued nay-saying, I don't think it will work," said Drew Horn of Hingham. "Unless somebody starts speaking specifically, then those who do - the MBTA - will win out."

But Buckley feels that because the selectmen of several South Shore communities - Hingham excluded - are planning to meet with the governor within the next few weeks in support of the Greenbush line, those that oppose the project need to bond together in an effort to steer the MBTA and the governor in the right direction. She hopes the petitions will serve as an indication to legislators that the selectmen are armed with inaccurate assessments of the feelings of their constituents.

In fact, several speakers indicated they felt that the questions on the referenda of some towns were unfairly biased in favor of the train. Scituate's Wilder and Edward Guild of Cohasset both complained that the questions were slanted in their towns and are concerned that true feelings have not been expressed to selectmen and other lawmakers.

A consensus concerning the best alternative to the train was not reached, but organizers felt the forum more than served its purpose, and they plan to press on.

"We can see that there are some options," said moderator George Malouf of Hingham. "And by the looks of things tonight, there are people who are interested in these options."

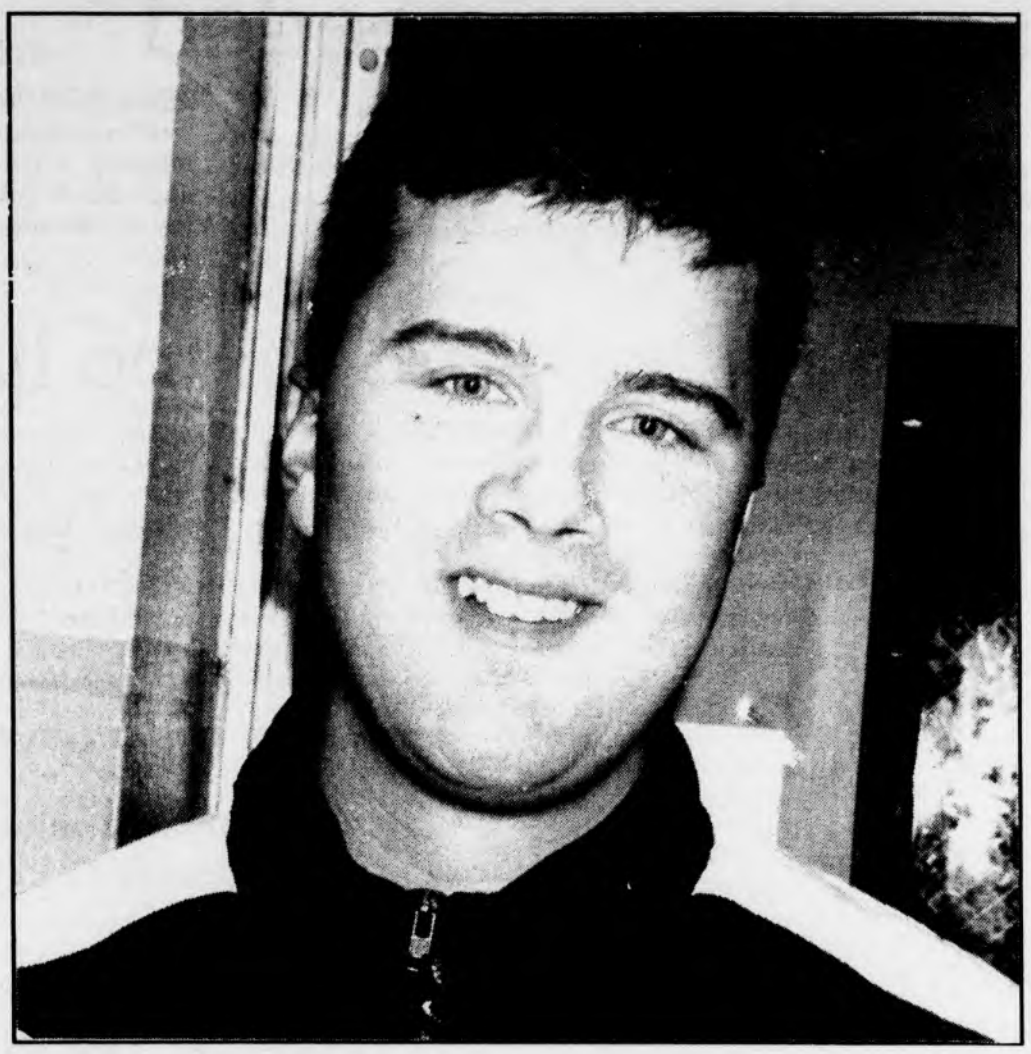
Ron Ford



Name: Ron Ford

Occupation: Cohasset physical education teacher grades 7-12, boys' varsity Basketball and Baseball Coach and girls' Junior Varsity Soccer coach.

Best day of your life: Sunday at the State South Sectional Div. III finals in Boys' Basketball at UMass Boston. We lost, but the kids played as hard as they could play and never quit and that's all I can ask for as a coach.

Most embarrassing moment: This past season on banner night when we unveiled the banner and a few unnamed members of the administration put a soccer banner over our basketball one.

Goal: To be the best coach I can be.

Favorite season: This past winter because it was basketball season.

Best vacation: The time I spend at basketball camp in the summer.

Favorite holiday: Christmas.

Pet peeve: Trash talking and poor sportsmanship.

Favorite book: "Season on the Brink," by John Feinstein.

Favorite movie: "The Maltese Falcon."

Biggest worry: That my players will put athletics before academics. I spend countless hours telling them not to.

Favorite place: My parents' place in New Hampshire.

Favorite junk-food: Cheesecake.

Person you'd most like to meet: Larry Bird.

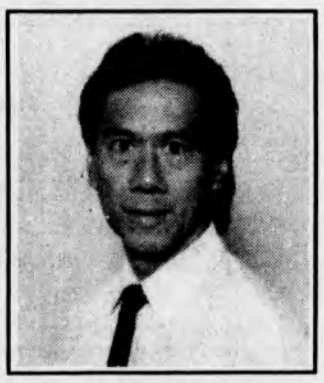
New help for children with learning problems

Norwell A free screening may find the cause of your child's learning problems. Some of the many symptoms displayed by children with learning disabilities often include:

- clumsiness
- concentration
- letter reversals
- forgetting what has just been read
- doing work slowly
- trouble copying
- careless errors
- avoidance of reading
- inability to sit still
- poor hand-eye coordination

HELP IS AVAILABLE

Now a team of professionals in the fields of vision, psychology, and education has developed a remarkable therapy program called VIP. This intense, one-on-one program attacks the causes of these problems and dramatically improves a child's ability to learn and the speed at which he learns. This unique program is now available by Dr. Han Dong, a practicing optometrist for 25 years.



Dr. Han Dong

FREE EVALUATION

There is a free screening for children between the ages of six and 16. It includes a series of 18 tests that measure concentration, visual memory, letter reversals, eye-hand coordination, visual teaming, focusing, and sensory integration. After the screening is completed, you receive results and recommendations.

THE TIME TO ACT IS NOW

If your child is between six and 16 years of age, call us today at (617) 659-1444 to set up an appointment for a free screening. Can you afford to pass up the possible explanation for your child's baffling lack of success in school? This therapy is covered by most major insurance policies.

Call (617) 659-1444 to schedule screening.
Next screening dates: March 24 and 30.

Use regulation change needed

To the Editor:

People in Cohasset have begun to wonder how it is that Route 3A has suddenly excited the interest of big retail developers. It is not sudden; development seldom is. Someone's bright idea germinates, grows, and, if successful, attracts others.

Stop & Shop has been a success, and Shaw's has made a commitment, and Star Market may, as well. These are bound to encourage a variety of other venturers. Big companies have big money at their disposal, far more than most of us can conceive, and they are prepared to spend it if it promises to bring in more. Shaw's has proposed to develop far more than what they presently own. These are not home industries.

As the proposed developments succeed more will surely follow until an equilibrium is reached. The problem with that is that there is a tendency to over-extend, and then things begin to deteriorate; witness Stagecoach Way in downtown Cohasset. If and when that happens, instead of collecting lots of taxes, we will be faced with lots of problems.

We can and should face these problems now and not wonder later on why we didn't. How much does the town give away in return for the taxes brought in? There are values that should not be for sale.

Retail business is a prime generator of traffic, and Route 3A is already approaching capacity. Route 3A in Cohasset provides ready access from our surrounding population areas where these activities are not allowed.

Our Zoning Bylaw already provides more than ample business space for Cohasset's present and future needs. It would be a pity if highway business were to completely take over the area set aside for Light Industry. A change in our Use Regulations might be appropriate. But it won't happen unless people want it, say so loud and clear, and take action. It won't be easy.

South Shore help pay for) in modern double-deck cars pulled by new, quieter Diesel engines, now running in other Boston suburbs?

If someone from this group approaches you for your signature on their petition to Governor Weld, remind them that their own meeting, originally set for March 3, was postponed due to heavy snow that didn't stop commuter service but snarled traffic in this area. Tell them that they can still comment on the environmental study, and to call the MBTA to find out how they can be heard, like everyone else.

Get-together for Evans

Dan Evans, candidate for Cohasset School Committee, will discuss "Excellence is an Attitude, Not a Budget Item" at the second of a number of get-togethers, Sunday, March 20, from 4 to 6 p.m., at "On Golden Pond," home of John and Doris Golden.

Anyone wishing to attend this or later events should telephone the Goldens, Chartis Langmaid, Robin Lord, Polly Logan, Peter Pearce, Lyn Congdon Previte, Meg Bertolami, Catherine Davis, Cordie Foell, Victoria Hurley, Debby Leggat, Sarah Markert, Jean Muir, Ansley Pearce, Patty Smith, Rob Spofford, Maddie Steffens, or Dan and Grace Evans (383-1163).

Kirk coffee rescheduled

Please note a change of date for the coffee for Jim Kirk at Jack and Sue McNamara's, 45 Fair Oaks Lane. The new date is Sunday, March 20, at 7 p.m. Jim Kirk will discuss how our schools can help today's students prepare for their complex, technological, competitive world. Please call Sue (383-6945) if you would like to attend.

For information about candidate Jim Kirk, please call campaign chairman Karen Kirkendall or Sue McNamara, or committee members Beth Christoffel, Galt and Sue Grant, Bob Healy, Barbara Henderson, Craig Muir, Ron Nicynski, Michael and Margaret Palone, Russ and Jean Reidy. If you wish to help, campaign contributions may be sent to treasurer Deborah Shadd, 31 Summer St., payable to the committee to elect Jim Kirk school committee.

Election supper planned

Election Day in Cohasset is April 2. Candidates will be introduced to residents March 24 at 6:30 p.m. at the Annual Election Supper held at the Beechwood Congregational Church on Church St.

Dinner includes roast beef, mashed potatoes, string beans, Harvard beets, cole slaw, rolls, dessert and a beverage. Tickets are $6.99 for adults and $3.50 for children. To make reservations, call 383-1298 or 383-1138.

White resigns from SAFE

Alix White formally announces her resignation as president of SAFE (Stop Any Further Expansion).

"I am deeply committed to strengthening issues of Public Health," said White. "As a candidate for Board of Health, I need to resign from SAFE so that I can work fully as a member of the Board of Health."

SAFE is the 1,000 member grassroots group opposed to the expansion of Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL).

Landfill is focus

The S.A.F.E. (Stop Any Further Expansion) candidates night, to be held at 8 p.m. Thursday, March 24, at the Unitarian Parish House, will feature the candidates for Board of Selectmen, Board of Health, Water Commission, and Planning Board.

"The purpose of this event is to put a focus on local environmental issues," said SAFE spokesman John McNabb. "We will encourage questions not just about the threat to our water supply from Cohasset Heights landfill, but about watershed protection in general and any other environmental questions facing the town."

Residents are encouraged to come to the meeting prepared with questions. Following a brief presentation by each candidate, and after a short round of questions by SAFE, the floor will be opened to questions from the audience.

The candidates invited are: Selectmen candidates Peter Pratt and Rocco Laugelle; Board of Health candidates Alix White and Robert M. Davenport; Water Commission candidates Fred Koed and Mark Bell; and Planning Board candidates Dean Rizzo and William Good.

The candidates will all be asked the following question: "Are you for or against the proposed Area V expansion of the Cohasset Heights Ltd. (CHL) landfill? If elected, what specific actions would you take to deal with the current problems at CHL?"

Town meeting ground rules

The following people have been appointed by Moderator George I. Marlette to serve as Tellers in the upcoming town meeting, March 26:

Grace Tuckerman, Raymond Buckley, Constance Jones and Arthur Lehr.

Rev. John J. Keohane of St. Anthony's Church will deliver the Invocation, and the local scouts will present a Color Guard.

In light of the numerous articles to be considered at this year's town meeting, Moderator Marlette has asked that proponents of articles please designate one spokesperson to speak briefly to the issue, prior to recommendations by the advisory committee and board of selectmen. A reasonable time for these presentations is construed to be from three to five minutes. Brevity is encouraged. Please provide the name of the designated spokesperson to the moderator well in advance of the meeting to ensure proper identification and keep the agenda moving forward. The moderator can be reached by phone at 383-6809 or (508) 586-2123, or by mail or fax as follows: P.O. Box 203, Cohasset, MA 02025-0203; fax: (508) 586-8748.

All duly constituted boards or committees that have met to discuss and formulate recommendations will be recognized by the moderator if they so wish. Again, one person should be designated to speak to the issue.

"I was grateful to all who participated last year for their efforts in keeping speech-making to a minimum," Marlette said.

"While it is highly unlikely that the volume of business to be transacted at this year's meeting can be accomplished in one session, I will strive to keep things moving, and ask others to do the same," he said.

Town Meeting will be called to order at 10 a.m., March 26, at the high school auditorium. Local scouts will staff a food booth with light refreshments at modest prices.

Business notes

Betsy Currier has joined the Prudential Prime Properties, Cohasset, as a sales associate. The announcement was made by Thomas Hamilton, president of the company.

Currier will be responsible for residential real estate sales. She is an active member of the South Shore community, formerly a member of the Hanover Advisory Board, currently a member of the advisory committee for the Friends of Cranberry Area Hospice and a chairman of its Festival of Trees. She has a strong business background, having directed a non-profit group in Boston before building a successful dealership in a pet safety product.

Hunneman & Co.-Coldwell Banker announced that Lillian F. Ketchum joined the Cohasset office as a sales associate. A resident of Cohasset for 17 years, Ketchum has been active in the community through volunteer work with the schools, Social Service League and the Second Congregational Church.

Ketchum holds a masters degree in journalism from Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism and a bachelor of arts degree from Vassar College. Prior to joining Hunneman & Co., Ketchum was a freelance writer and editor.

Richard P. Campbell of Jerusalem Rd., the founding shareholder of the Boston law firm of Campbell & Associates Professional Corporation, was elected to the executive committee of the Product Liability Advisory Council (PLAC), a nationwide organization of more than 100 major corporations and 300 prominent defense trial attorneys.

PLAC carries out a variety of activities, including appearing as amicus curiae in state and federal appellate courts to make known the views and concerns of the business community on products liability issues to judges and other responsible governmental leaders. PLAC's Executive Committee to which Campbell was elected is responsible for overseeing PLAC's operations.

Campbell is also the President of the Massachusetts Chapter of the Federal Bar Association.

St. Pat's Day dinner planned

The First Baptist Church in North Scituate will hold its annual corned beef and cabbage dinner at 6:30 p.m. Saturday March 19.

Tickets are available by calling 383-9323 or 545-1986.

Fitness trials planned

Cub Scout Pack 38 will sponsor their Annual President's Challenge for kids ages six and up Wednesday, March 23 at 3 p.m. in the Deer Hill School Gym.

Come and try to win the Presidential Physical Fitness Award and certificate signed by the President of the United States. All participants will earn the President's Award, the National Physical Fitness Award, or the Participant Award. (Non-scouts will need to pay an award fee when the awards are ordered.) Participants should come to the Deer Hill School Gym after their own school lets out for the day. This part of the Challenge consists of sit-ups, shuttle run, chin-ups, and sit-and-stretch.

The following Wednesday, March 30 at 3 p.m., the one-mile run will be held on Milliken field to complete the President's Challenge.

Annual meeting is held

The community center held its annual meeting Thursday, March 10.

The center, located in Cohasset, serves the South Shore, providing activities for all ages.

The following are officers and directors for the coming year: Sue DiPesa, president; Rhonda Corey Myers, executive vice president; Debbie Anderson, vice president; Richard Towle Jr., treasurer; Phil Lehr, clerk; Peter Berg, Michael Bleakie, Jon Caron, John Carr, Lawrence Evans, Jack Foley, Paul Keeler, William Malone, David McMorris, Rose Mercurio, Craig Muir, Robert Protulis, Carolyn Swain, and Brenda Wallace.

The board announced the formation of a new advisory board that past president Glen Pratt will chair. Members will include past board members and new members.

Support spring sweep

The many winter storms have left their mark all over — and especially on the community center lawn! Broken branches, leaves, twigs, the remains of sand and salt, are everywhere!

Let's do a spring sweep. Join us Saturday, March 26 from 8 a.m. to noon. All you need is a rake and garden gloves, the center will provide coffee and donuts.

This is a great way to contribute to the community center. Please drop by and lend a helping hand.

Garden club to meet

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will meet at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday March 22 at St. Stephen's Parish. Coffee will be served at 9 a.m.

"Public Gardens of New England" is the program. Mark Zelonis, executive director of the Heritage Trust of Rhode Island which oversees Blithewood Mansion and Gardens, will be the guest speaker.

Easter egg hunt planned

The Cohasset Recreation Commission will h[illegible] annual Easter egg hunt for children ages 3 thro[illegible] at noon Saturday March 26 at Deer Hill School, So[illegible] St. The Easter Bunny will arrive via a Cohasset fire truck at noon.

Younger children should be accompanied by an adult. All children will receive candy and a balloon. Prizes will be awarded to each of three age groups.

The Easter Egg Hunt is financially sponsored by the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, Cohasset Police Association, George H. Mealy, American Legion Post #118, Cohasset Veterans of Foreign Wars-Post #9146 and the Rotary Club of Cohasset. Many residents and businesses contribute time, effort and goods towards the event.

Easter bunny lunch set

Don't miss the Community Center 'Fun-raiser', Lunch with the Easter Bunny from 11 :30 a.m. to 2 p.m., Sunday, March 20. Children will enjoy springtime and holiday crafts including edible necklaces, crowns, bunnies, chicks and more. Lunch includes hot dogs, chips, beverages and homemade salads and desserts. The Easter Bunny will arrive to say hello to all the children and will be available for photos. Admission is $4 for adults, $3 for children, pictures with the Easter Bunny are $2.50. Tickets are on sale at the Community Center. For more information, please call 383-0088.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

TREES AND MONEY

QUESTION: Is it true that planting trees on a vacant house lot can increase the value of that property?

ANSWER: A study on this very subject indicated that, while planting trees on an average-sized lot can add between 7% and 15% to the land value, you can risk reducing the value by overdoing it.

The study shows that land value increases at about $300 per tree of six-inch diameter or more, up to a total of sixteen trees. The next ten trees increases the land value by only $200 apiece, and the 30th tree is considered "worthless." Any trees beyond the thirty may actually REDUCE the land value according to the study.

Garage, new field highlight town meeting agenda

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Cohasseters will have the chance this week to spend upwards $15 million dollars in a single day.

In fact passing Article 3 — the town's proposed fiscal year 1995 operating budget may only take a few minutes of Saturday's town meeting.

A range of warrant articles from approving a new $450K public works garage and $800K high school athletic field to appropriating $10K to construct sidewalks on Forest Avenue and $50K for to build a roof over the recycling center at the RTF could spark debate on town meeting floor.

A new generator for the police and fire departments, ceiling and roof repairs at the library, and $10K to conduct a hazardous waste day are also in the offing.

Town meeting gets underway at 10 a.m. at Cohasset High School auditorium. Town Moderator George L. Marlette said lunch break will be at about 1 p.m. He said local scouts have been asked to

Selectmen can't crack egg hunt

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Weather permitting the annual Easter Egg Hunt sponsored by the recreation department and paid for through local organizations will go on as scheduled Saturday.

It's not a national holiday. Stop & Shop is open and there'll be more voters there than anywhere in town.'

— Richard Barrow

At their board meeting Monday selectmen said they would ask the recreation commission — the elected board that oversees the town recreation department — to postpone the hunt so it would not conflict with town meeting.

Reached by telephone Tuesday, Recreation Commission Chairman Richard Barrow said he polled fellow board members and a majority agreed the hunt should go on.

"If it's a good day, it's gonna go," Barrow said. "The letters have been sent out and the whole event has been arranged.

"We can't just drop it," he said.

Barrow explained that March 26 was chosen to allow for a Saturday rain date before Easter (April 3).

Senior citizens are a force to be reckoned with

By Barry Svriuga
Mariner staff

They demand to be heard, whether other groups like it or not. They do things on their own, despite the fact that their presence on the road and in stores slows many around them. And their numbers are growing at a rapid rate, leaving an impact that will be felt by nearly all residents of the South Shore.

They are senior citizens, and they will be heard from in the coming years like never before.

As the middle aged become simply the aged, they are faced with several new issues, issues which in turn affect the generations that follow them. Experts say the new senior citizens represent a more active, vocal group of elderly people than many people are used to dealing with.

"Seniors have a powerful voice," says Gerard Keating, chairman of the Cohasset Council on Aging. "We're not old people that sit in rocking chairs and fuddy-duddy around."

"The grandmother of today is not just at home," says Kathy Bryanton, director of the Cohasset Senior Citizen Center. "She has a very active lifestyle."

Towns like Cohasset and Hingham are facing an increasing elderly population, a change in demographics that will affect everything from family structure to town government. Because of this, attitudes about senior citizens are constantly changing.

"'Senior' isn't going to mean what it used to mean," says Sandra Kent, director of the Hersey House Senior Center in Hingham. Kent says that classifying everyone between the ages of 65 and 105 is no longer an accurate assessment of the group due to the tremendous diversity of interests and needs of its members.

"You can't put all the needs of someone in a 40-year time span," she says.

Cohasset provides a microcosm of an issue that has national ramifications. 20 percent of the town's population is over 65, and that figure will grow to more than 30 percent in the coming years. The town has an active elderly group that helps with everything from stuffing tax envelopes to moderating town meeting.

As a result of this change in demographics and activity level, groups that support senior citizens on the South Shore have expanded their services over the past several years, offering everything from the traditional outreach services and in-home care to tai-chi and water aerobics classes.

"Nothing seems to be too much," Bryanton says.

(See page 4)

Dog licenses are due

Cohasseters who don't renew their dog licenses by May 1 will be subject to a $25 fine in addition to the license fee, Animal Control Officer William Quigley said.

Dog licenses are $15 for unaltered dogs and $8 for spayed or neutered. Owners must present evidence of spaying or neutering and rabies vaccination to the town clerk to obtain a license.

Quigley said notices to renew dog licenses were sent out with the town census in January. He said the town clerk has turned over 211 names of citizens to him who haven't "relicensed" yet.

Any dog six months or older who will be in town for longer than 30 days must be licensed, Quigley said.

Historic bell refurbishing

Herbert Jason won unanimous approval from selectmen Monday to take the 115 year old bell on Government Island out of town in order to refurbish it.

The bronze, 1,500-lb. bell, which is the original bell used Minot's Light, stands on a pedestal on Government Island by the templates. Plans are to move the bell to the side of the replica and construct another pedestal for the bell to stand on. A rod attached to the bell's clapper will extend through a hole in the replica wall so the bell can be rung from the inside of the structure, Jason explained.

Jason plans to take the bell to New England Steel Tank in Quincy where he will refurbish it at no cost to the town.

The Cohasset fisherman recalls when the bell helped him get to shore safely.

"Before radar, I could get my bearings in thick fog by hearing that bell every minute," Jason said.

Food vendors queue up

Spring must be in the air because three local businessmen have already applied for licenses to sell food and ice cream at Sandy Beach and Government Island this summer.

Selectmen awarded transient vendor licenses to Hugh Morgan and Todd DeGregorio for food like hot dogs, potato chips, and soft drinks and to Peter Kulturides for ice cream. The men are all from Cohasset.

Town by-laws only permit two vendors at Sandy Beach at any one time, so the three men agreed to work out a schedule among themselves and submit it to selectmen.

"I'd be happy to grant all three licenses if you can work out something that is fair to everyone," Selectman Jane O. Goedecke said.

Money for repairs okay'ed

Tree & Park Supt. Peter Laugelle needs $1,900 for repair and maintenance of town vehicles, equipment and building maintenance.

"There's nothing abused here, it's just normal wear and tear," Laugelle told selectmen, who approved his request for a transfer of funds at their board meeting this week.

Sewer counsel to be paid

Selectmen approved payment of $360.96 to Goodwin, Procter & Hoar for professional services provided in January regarding the town's wastewater treatment.

Bus parking gets nod

John Hartshorne, a director of the Hull Lifesaving Museum, obtained permission from selectmen Monday for tour busses to park briefly on Government Island a few times this summer.

The lifesaving museum is collaborating with Winona Tours of Hull in a program to promote tourism in Hull and the surrounding South Shore area, including Cohasset, he said. Government Island and Minot's Light are featured in a tourism brochure printed with the assistance of the Plymouth County Development Council for distribution to tourist bureaus and visitor centers in metropolitan Boston.

Hartshorne said the museum director estimates that bus tours resulting from this promotion might visit Government Island up to 12 times in the course of the tourist season. Stops would be brief — only long enough for visitors to see the templates and the replica of the Lighthouse cupola, he said. Only one bus at a time would park in the lot to the south of the Lightkeepers residence.

Cemetery committee update

Selectman Merle S. Brown had some good and bad news regarding the cemetery committee Monday.

He couldn't persuade members Glenn Pratt and Jane Hamilton to remain on the committee so selectmen accepted their resignations. Brown was unable to contact Mary Hartwell, the third member to resign recently, following a brouhaha with selectmen over a warrant article asking for an easement over private property to a proposed town cemetery off Rte. 3A. Hartwell is out of town, Brown said.

He said Joseph Jerz of Forest Notch was interested in serving on the committee. The town still needs one and possibly two more people to serve. Interested citizens should contact Brown through the selectmen's office, 383-9900.

Selectmen voted recommend the remaining cemetery article asking for money to construct the proposed cemetery be indefinitely postponed at town meeting until new committee members come on board. Brown said there was about $10,000 left in the cemetery account for engineering fees which should last six months until the special town meeting next fall when the article may be resubmitted.

Absentee ballots ready

Absentee ballots are now available at the Town Clerk's office for the town election Saturday, April 2. You may apply for an absentee ballot if you will be out of town, have a physical disability or because of religious beliefs.

Absentee voting may be done in the office of the town clerk during regular business hours until 12 noon April 1, 1994.

A written, signed request for a ballot may be sent to the town clerk and one will be mailed out. Included on the application should be your name as registered, your registration address, precinct, the address to which you wish the ballot sent and your signature. Applications may also be picked up at the office. The Town Clerk's office will be closed at 12 p.m. April 1 in preparation for the election.

If you need further information, please call the Town Clerk's office at 383-9900 ext. 105, 106 or 107.

Selectmen can't crack egg hunt

He said flyers about the hunt had been sent home with school children and the notice had appeared in the newspaper about the popular event which annually draws dozens of children.

Selectman Jane O. Goedecke said Monday the recreation commission shouldn't have scheduled the Easter Egg hunt on the same day as town meeting.

She said it was "inappropriate to divide loyalties between citizens' civic duty and family duty."

Barrow suggested people send their kids with a baby-sitter to the egg hunt if necessary. The event, which starts and noon and lasts about an hour, could take place within the time town meeting voters break for lunch, he added. The quorum for town meeting is 100.

"It's not a national holiday," Barrow said. "Stop & Shop is open and there'll be more voters there than anywhere in town."

The event, for children ages three-through-12 starts at noon at Deer Hill School. The Easter Bunny will arrive via a Cohasset fire truck. All children will receive candy and a balloon. Prizes will be awarded to each of three ages groups.

expand the food stand to encourage voters to stay at the high school for lunch so the meeting can resume within about 45 minutes.

With close to 50 articles in the annual town meeting warrant and another 11 special town meeting articles, Marlette expects town meeting to run into two sessions. If the business is not concluded by 5 p.m. Saturday, town meeting would continue at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

A quorum of 100 voters is required to get town meeting underway.

Citizens are asked to bring their town warrants with them. However, there will be a few extra warrants on hand for those who forget, Marlette said.

Marlette said Articles 1 and 2 which ask for action on reports of town officers and committees will be taken up first, followed by the special town meeting articles which require money from this fiscal year's budget. Then the remainder of the annual town meeting articles will be taken in order, Marlette said.

Gavel-to-gavel live coverage will be provided by Continental Cablevision with Wigmore Pierson providing commentary.

If town meeting voters okay constructing public works garage and new athletic fields, a special election will be held May 14 to ask voters to pay for the projects through a debt-exclusion override. The $1.2 million needed for the projects cannot be raised within the limits of Prop. 2-1/2 which caps the town's levy capacity to 2-1/2 percent a year without an override.

Senior citizens are a force to reckon with

This is particularly true of those seniors between the ages of 65 and 80, who represent the bulk of participants in the Center's physical activities and exercise programs.

'Seniors have a powerful voice. We're not old people that sit in rocking chairs and fuddy-duddy around.'

— Gerard Keating, chairman of the Cohasset Council on Aging.

Kent says that many seniors refuse to sit on the sidelines because of the growing awareness of health issues that is pervasive throughout society.

"We've all been made aware of the advantages of healthy living," Kent says. Seniors are no different, and many are involved in activities that were once reserved for the young and spry."

As the roles and needs of senior citizens change, so do the roles of the senior centers that cater to them. Bryanton started the Cohasset center with a metal table and a telephone, and now the group occupies spacious quarters which can accommodate many of its functions and programs.

"A senior center today is something like a Stop & Shop," Bryanton says. "Everything's under one roof."

Another changing aspect of senior issues is the manner in which families deal with their aging relatives, and vice versa. Bryanton says that because many of Cohasset's seniors grew up in town and are "aging in place", interactions between generations have changed since the 1970's and '80's.

"I see a tremendous willingness on

Think spring! Think bugs!

This could be the calm before the storm

Tired of reading about snow and ice budgets?

Give up guessing how many times the DPW is going to fill up a pothole with cold patch?

Ready to move on to spring?

Then let's talk mosquitoes.

"This could be the calm before the storm," Plymouth County Mosquito Control Project Assistant Superintendent Ray Zucker said.

Two weeks ago, rainfall levels grew from 1.86 inches above normal to 3.86 inches above normal. "I hope we're not being suited up like last year," Zucker said.

Last year, rainfall increased by four and a half inches. A higher water table makes for more breeding grounds, plus mosquito larvae can lie dormant for years and come to life when the water level inches back.

With 40 to 50 different types of mosquitoes in the state, larvae can be present at any time and any place where there is standing water.

Especially sensitive to the spring rains is the spring brood of mosquitoes. Reflood species' numbers vary according to rainfall later in the mosquito season. As part of its service, PCMCP responds to residents' phone calls to spray locally for mosquitoes.

"In six weeks last year, from the 28th of May to just prior July 4, we had 6,946 calls (for a mosquito spray). For the season, there were 10,996 calls," Zucker said. "That water level made a heck of a spring season with the spring brood."

Calls from residents in all member towns increased from 1992 to 1993. "I can't think of a town with a decrease," Zucker said.

Calls from Hanover increased from 154 in 1992 to 692 in 1993. Norwell calls increased from 234 to 701; Marshfield, from 836 to 1,102; Pembroke, from 183 to 474; Kingston, from 201 to 433; Scituate, from 886 to 1,028; Cohasset, from 188 to 210; Hingham, from 225 to 408; Abington, from 72 to 211, and Rockland, from 90 to 195.

But this spring brood could just be deja vu. Along with the high rainfall level this year, the PCMCP crews usually get out in the winter to clear ditches and get rid of brood areas.

Anyone who does not want a mosquito spray around the house can register with PCMCP by calling 585-5450.

The state requires no-spray registration by March 1, to be filed in the town's Town Clerk's office, but PCMCP does honor phoned-in no-spray requests.

Seniors, a force to reckoned with the part of the older population to help their families," she says, citing the fact that many grandparents baby-sit for their grandchildren, offering experience and knowledge that can serve as valuable learning material for their younger relatives.

The relationship also works the other way, but in a more hands off manner. "The younger generation is very conscience of not wanting to interfere with their parents," Bryanton says. "We try to foster a feeling of independence."

But at the same time, children want to help their parents as much as possible.

"It's been wonderful working with people helping their parents," Bryanton says. "They're doing it because they want to, not because they have to."

Of increasing importance to seniors and their children is the cost and availability of medical care. Because of this, the Councils on Aging on the South Shore offer the Serving Health Information Needs of Elders (SHINE) program, which gives free advice about medical coverage so that both seniors and the people that care for them can stay well-informed.

Another aspect of seniors' lives that is constantly changing is their relationship with other generations in general. Senior centers now try to sponsor several activities that promote intergenerational relations between several groups in the community.

"I think we've broken the ice," Keating says. "[Other generations] know that the senior population isn't something they have to contend with. It's something they have to deal with and learn to love.

"If they want to accomplish things, they have to learn to work with senior citizens."

Garden Therapy blossoms throughout the year

By Joyce Bain
Mariner correspondent

Spring is in the air, at least for 25 people at the Cohasset Knoll nursing home. Last Wednesday afternoon they were visited with fresh flowers and friendly faces as The Community Garden Club of Cohasset continued their monthly activity of "Garden Therapy." This month, the club decided to go with a a St. Patrick's Day theme, helping the seniors to make corsages and boutonnieres with carnations and ribbons.

"Garden Therapy," an activity the club has been doing since it was founded 35 years ago, is a unique approach to community involvement. Each month a group of club members goes to The Knoll where they work with seniors on craft projects made with flowers and other natural materials, usually based on a special theme relating to an event that month.

Co-chairs Monique Mascart and Maureen Byrnes say the hardest part is coming up with ideas.

"It's challenging because it has to be natural and the seniors, who have difficulty with small work, have to be able to do it," Byrnes says.

"It's easier to find materials in the 'outdoor' months," add Mascart, who has worked with the group for two years. "I often get ideas from things I see on walks and in nurseries."

So far, they have used pine, shells, sand, fresh flowers and pumpkins, to name but a few of their materials, which are not always easy to find on a $600 per year budget.

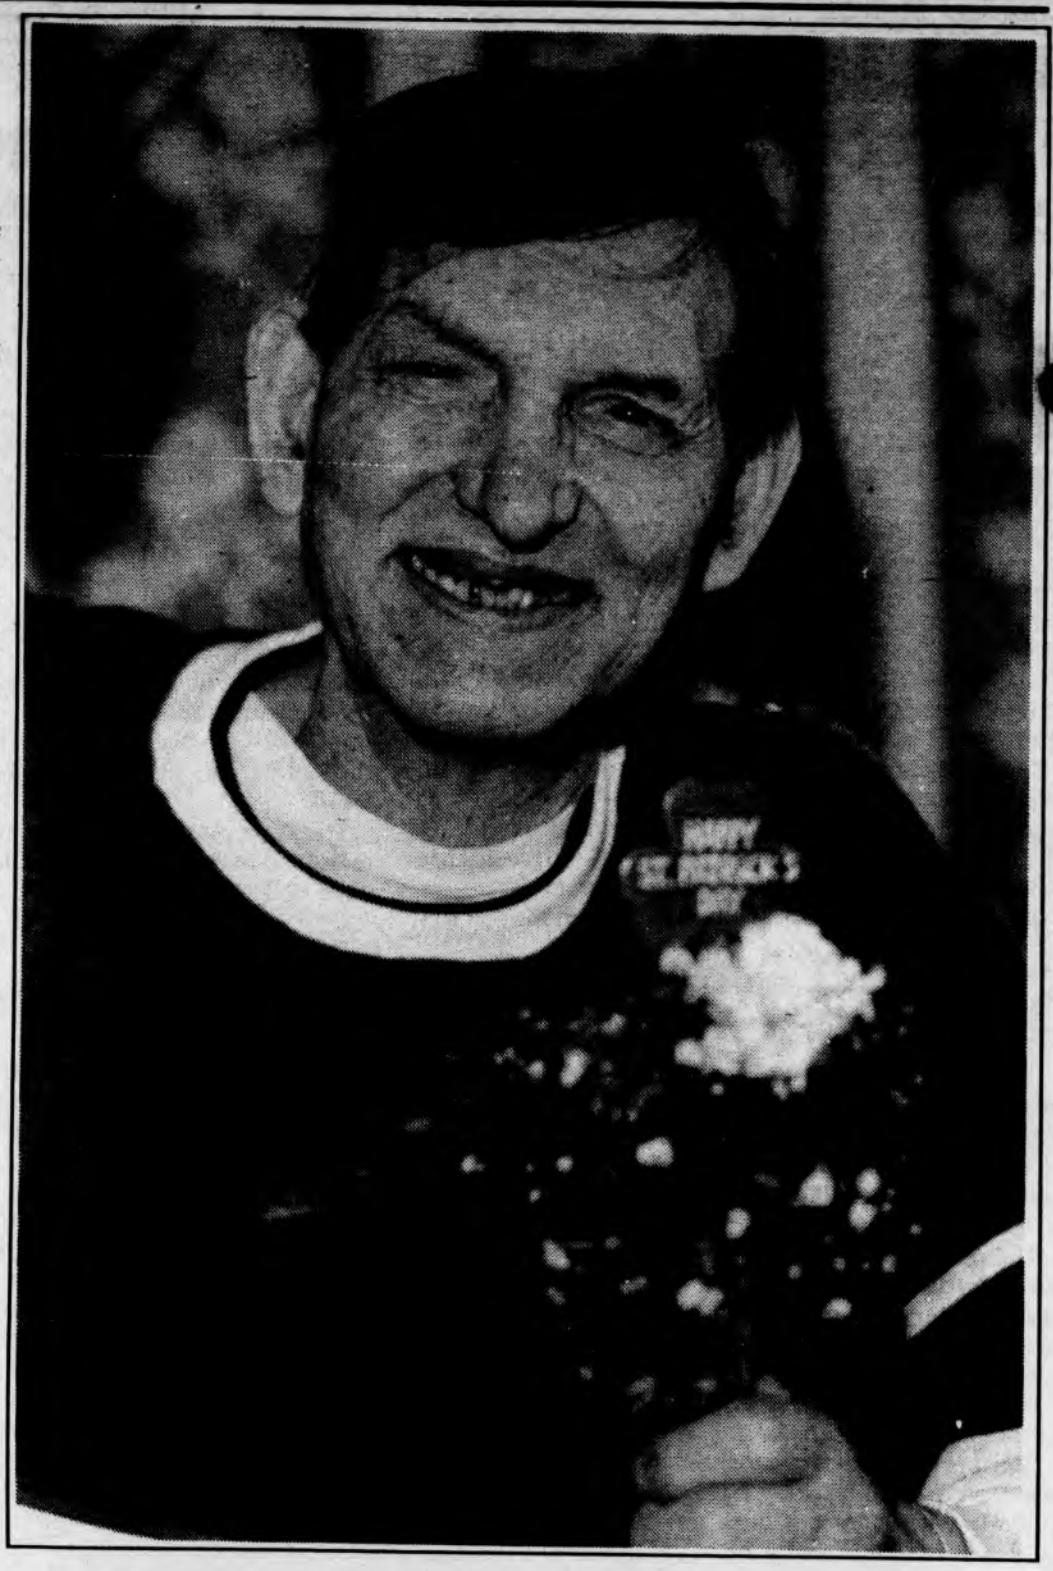
Despite the challenge of creating the projects, the two are quick to point out that it is not all hard work. They believe the project is almost secondary to spending time with the people there and developing friendships.

"People think of going to a nursing home as depressing, but it's really not," Byrnes says, "It's fun to chat with the residents and learn about their lives."

Both women agree that the experience is very rewarding.

The Garden Therapy Committee also makes a trip every other year to the Veterans' Hospital in Brockton where they do a special project. Mascart notes that this trip is very different from their monthly routine at The Knoll since the people there are of all ages with different types of handicaps.

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset has about 200 members and many other committees which work within the community in addition to the Garden Therapy Committee, all of which are supported by fundraisers organized by the members. Most notably, they planted more than 800 bulbs, shrubs and plants by the Lightkeeper's residence on Government Island which are expected to bloom this spring.



Cohasset Knoll resident Elden Myers enjoys making a flower arrangement with a St. Patrick's Day theme at Cohasset Knoll. The Community Garden Club of Cohasset conducts "Garden Therapy," a monthly program at the nursing home.

by Sallyann Chatterton

❑ Did anyone recognize a familiar face in this month's issue of Town & Country magazine? In the weddings section, Richele Marie Sargent, a 1984 Cohasset High School graduate, is the prettiest bride on the page.

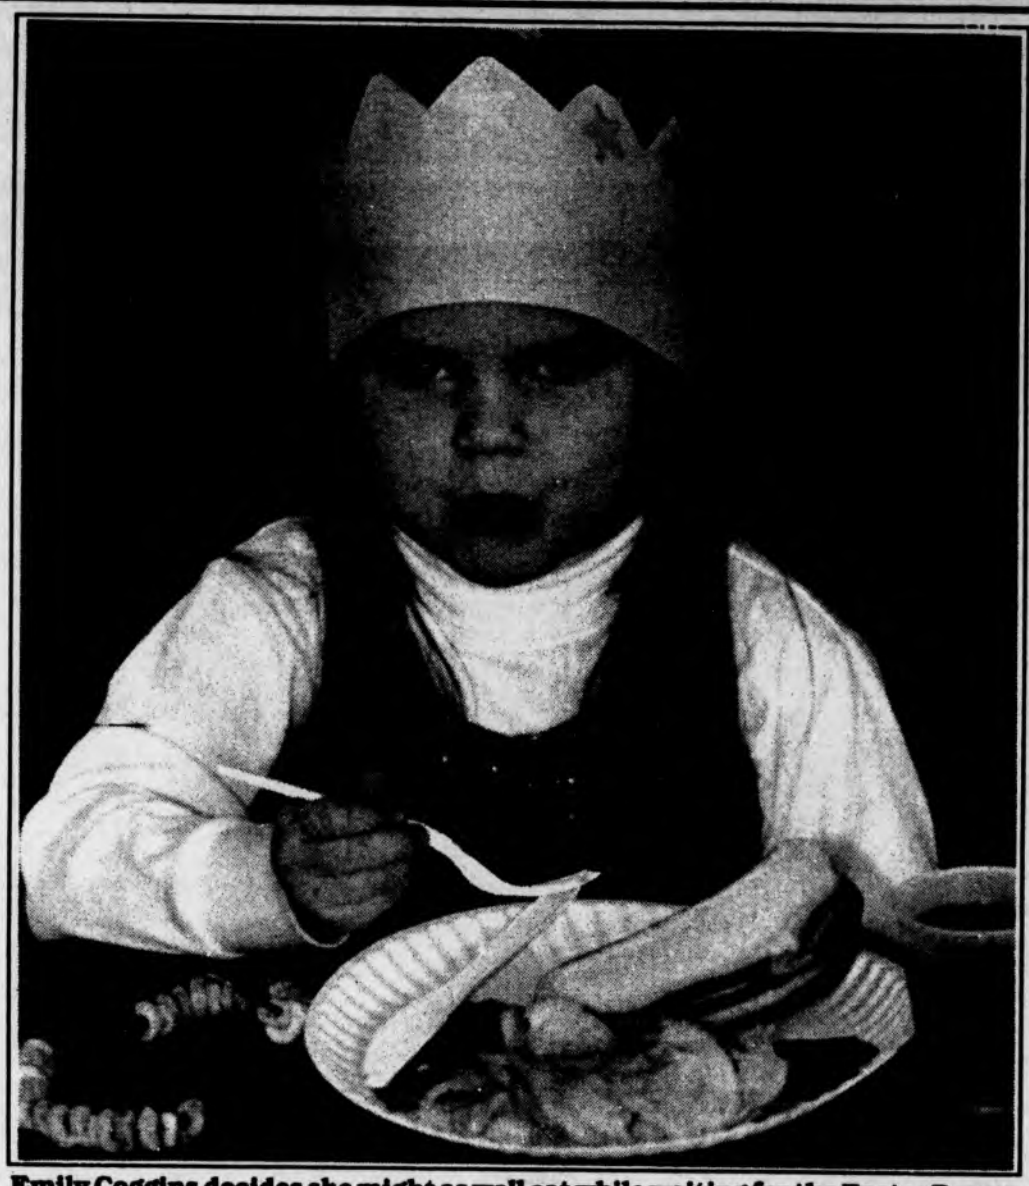
Richele, the daughter of Ray Sargent of Cohasset and Dianne Sargent of Scituate, married Gardner W. Mein Jr. in Rubicon, CA. Richele is happily living there, pursing her Masters Degree in physical therapy.

We certainly wish you the best of everything, Mr. and Mrs. Mein, and please keep us updated!

❑ Did you know that Doris Golden has opened a bed and breakfast entitled "On Golden Pond"? Located on a private lane, nestled in the woods on two acres of landscaped grounds, including three large outdoor decks, as Doris says "perfect for relaxation or just day dreaming". There is a beautiful swimming pool, the rooms are elegantly decorated and overlook Bound Brook. You know Doris, everything that she does is wonderful and elegant.

❑ Stephen M. Pozatek, son of Dr. and Mrs. Zigmunt W. Pozatek, worked really hard on his studies (always) and made the Dean's List at Middlebury College. Stephen is also a great skiier and a great person, we are all proud of you and your continued great work.

❑ Another Cohasset-Middlebury star! Rebecca A. Kirk also attained Dean's List status for the fall semester at Middlebury. You know, students who receive this designation must have a grade point average of 3.1 or higher and have earned no grade below a B- for the semester.



Emily Coggins decides she might as well eat while waiting for the Easter Bunny to stop by during "Lunch with the Easter Bunny" the Community Center Nursery School's annual spring "Fun-raiser."

Give her a pat on the back or a "high-five" next time she is home from Middlebury, she deserves it.

❑ Another accolade, this time from Bryant College. Annemarie Connolly did her work well, and made the de[illegible] list for the fall semester.

Annemarie is a senior marketing major and another student that we should applaud.

❑ The final student news of the week comes from Notre Dame Academy. Julie Catalano who made the principal's list, first honors go to Danielle Nohe, and second honors were earned by Michelle Boyle, Jennifer Cellucci, Keeley Dwyer, and Julie Smith.

What a feat, you ladies should be so proud of yourselves for all of your efforts, we sure are.

❑ Do you remember Lawrence "Chick" Gates, and his daughters Carole and Jan? You know, the one that used to run Gates in North Scituate. Who also used to live on Red Gate Lane? They have sold the store, and we just want to wish Mr. Gates every success in his retirement (or new venture), he and his wife, Alice, deserve a "break today". Wonderful family, wonderful people!

❑ A harbinger of spring. The South Shore Music Circus is really in "full swing", with a great deal of its schedule completed. Vince Longo has done a super job in the line-up, with such names as Emmylou Harris, Bill Cosby, Bob Newhart, Temptations, Paula Poundstone, Marty Stuart, Diamond Rio and Patty Loveless — the list goes on. Winifred Hamilton

E. Winifred Hamilton, 87, of Cohasset, formerly of Plymouth, a retired lab technician, died March 20 at Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home after a long illness.

Miss Hamilton retired from Barnstable County Hospital where she was the chief X-ray lab technician. Prior to that, she was employed at Worcester City Hospital.

A native of Boston, she lived in Plymouth most of her life before moving to Cohasset several years ago. She graduated from Brockton High School in 1925.

She leaves one brother, Edward Hamilton of Falmouth; two sisters, Beverly Cole of Scituate and Natalie Siemers of Plymouth; and several nieces and nephews.

Donations may be made to St. Luke's Episcopal Church, 465 First Parish Rd., Scituate 02066.

Thomas A. O'Brien

Thomas Anthony O'Brien, 62, of Cohasset, a retired reservation agent for Delta Airlines and a lector at St. Mary's Church, died March 16 in Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston.

Mr. O'Brien sang in the choir and was a money counter at St. Mary's Church. He was secretary of the St. Vincent DePaul Society.

He served in the Marine Corps during the 1950s.

A native of Linwood, Penn., he lived 30 years in Chester, Penn. where he graduated from high school in 1949. He moved to Cohasset 15 years ago.

He leaves four sisters, Elizabeth McLaughlin of Wilmington, Del., Eileen Rioles of Tampa, Fla., Maureen DiCave of Middletown Township, Penn. and Kathleen Baronsky of Upland, Penn.

A funeral Mass was celebrated March 21 in Holy Saviour Church, Linwood, Penn. Burial was in Immaculate Heart of Mary Cemetery, Linwood, Penn.

Memorial donations may be made to the Eastern Pennsylvania Chapter of the Arthritis Foundation, 117 S. 17th St., Suite 1905, Philadelphia, Penn. 19103.

Hope springs eternal

The Skies can't keep their secret!
They tell it to the Hills-
The Hills just tell the Orchards-
And they - the Daffodils!

Emily Dickinson

Emily Dickinson, writing reclusively 134 years ago in the hills of western Massachusetts, must have suffered from as bad a case of spring fever as we do now coming out of the worst winter in decades, maybe even since 1860, for all we know.

Spring, glorious spring, arrived Sunday, March 20. It makes its debut not one moment too soon. We all deserve medals for months of battling blizzards, ice storms, driving rain, slippery commutes, high heating bills, cabin fever, power outages and other assorted miseries.

All that remains from now until May Day is to get through mud season and the dangers of gaping potholes lurking on our roads. Piece of cake.

Thousands and thousands of SAD (seasonal affective disorder) people flocked to the annual New England Flower Show in Boston in mid-March looking a whole lot like addicts who have been deprived of a substance their bodies desperately crave — sunshine and warmth.

They arrived by the busload and forked over $12 to get in the door of the convention center just for the pure pleasure of seeing and smelling (no touching if you please) the beautiful flowers and shrubs so carefully laid out in near natural landscapes by nurseries and garden clubs from all over New England.

There were exotic lilies and orchids as well as the more familiar daffodils, dogwood trees and climbing roses. No movie or coveted purchase from the mall can compete with the intoxication of glimpsing green, green grass or stands of tulips bursting with color after we've been deprived of the colors of the spectrum for so long.

After surviving almost every kind of nature's curse this gray and dreary winter who can doubt that much of the time we are at the mercy of forces beyond our control? Or that as humans we need not only food and water for sustenance but also the transient loveliness that nature so obliging provides, when she's willing, of course.

For a while this winter it seemed we might never see the loveliness of a living thing in bloom ever again. An older man at the flower show was overheard saying wistfully that he would love to begin his garden "If the snow on the ground ever melts." After all, the flower show was an artificial environment, almost every petal artfully arranged.

Oh ye of little faith. Just this weekend warmer (but not so warm as to spoil us) March winds began to blow, drying out our ice cragged lawns and gardens. Shrubs on the roadside (look quick to avoid potholes) have taken on an ever so slight feathery green appearance. The sap, we are told, is finally running in the maples. The irises are sending up tender green shoots although we have yet to see any crocuses let alone tulips poking through the frost heaves. The forsythia this year may stubbornly hold out on us. We want to believe but need reassurance.

With any luck, in no time at all we'll be hearing the hoots and hollers of children playing jump rope and hop scotch. Baseball teams will soon take to the fields and girls will start shopping for their prom dresses — just as they do every year.

So long, winter of 1993-94. It's been a wild, unforgettable ride.

— Paula Woodhull

The time for a public works garage is now

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Public Works Garage Study Committee was formed two years ago to identify possible locations and space requirements for a centralized garage facility that could serve the needs of both the Highway Department and Tree, Park and Cemetery Department. Since its formation, the committee has evaluated numerous locations and met with several other town boards and committees. Based on an assessment of multiple, often conflicting factors related to safety, cost and environmental considerations, we have concluded that the gravel pit area off of North Main Street is by far the best location for such a facility. Based on extensive discussions with the Highway and Tree and Park Departments, we have developed a conceptual design for a 12,500 square foot structure.

The conditions that the personnel of these departments work under are, in our opinion, deplorable. What currently passes for a highway garage is a combination of a 50-year-old masonry structure and a 90-year-old wooden barn that should have been condemned years ago. The Tree and Park Department operates out of what is essentially a two-car garage on Route 3A and has equipment stored in locations scattered from one end of town to the other. The result is a considerable amount of time wasted shuffling vehicles and equipment from one location to another. Because of lack of space, 10 of the 15 vehicles operated by these departments have to be stored outdoors. A centralized facility with adequate capacity would: 1) result in a more efficient use of personnel, 2) reduce vehicle maintenance costs; and 3) extend the life of vehicles. Even if a conservative 25-year economic life is assumed for the garage, these benefits would far outweigh the costs of constructing the facility.

There will never be a better time than now to undertake this very necessary project — interest rates are as low as they have been in decades, as are construction costs. We urge the residents of Cohasset to attend Town Meeting March 26 and give your support to Article 12.

Town priorities questioned

To the Editor:

I recently received a letter in the mail from the group promoting the potential new athletic field.

I have one or two points to raise with regard to this project.

Are people aware that a wetland would be filled in if this project was to go forward? Also, a mature stand of hardwood trees which now house the ropes course, would be cut down.

Apart from these purely environmental concerns, I question the need to spend $700,000 on a sports field when Osgood School and Deer Hill so badly need renovation, expansion and funds for many other academic opportunities.

It would be great to have a new sports field, but I feel the focus on sports should not outweigh more pressing and diverse academic pursuits.

We all complain about lack of funding for public education. Shouldn't we ponder this request for a $700,000 override? Just what are our priorities?

Robin Grinnell

Harold is appreciated

To the Editor:

With the possibility that the peak of record snow may be behind us, enthusiastic commendation should be accorded our capable Master of the Highways, Harold Litchfield, and his colleagues.

Mobilizing and manipulating those massive, mechanical monsters before the morning's mania of motor vehicles through the middle of many main streets deserves mighty, meritorious, and munificent acknowledgment and appreciation.

Congratulations to Harold and his staff for strenuous efforts well accomplished.

Question of the week

Over the past few weeks, The Cohasset Mariner posed a question to the candidates. The following are responses to the final question of the week. The March 31 issue (next week) will feature an April 2 election preview.

Candidates are encouraged to advertise their campaigns in The Mariner. Political advertisements must be prepaid and the deadline for those ads is 5 p.m. Friday. Candidates who want a proof of their ad must submit it by 5 p.m. Thursday for the following week's publication. Preferred placement (choosing a particular page on which the ad is to run) carries a 25 percent surcharge.

For advertising information, call Jim Horvath, marketing director, at 1-800-649-6661.

No candidates are endorsed by The Mariner and no preferential treatment is offered any candidates seeking public office.

The following candidates responded to last week's Question of the Week:

• Health board: Is the town doing enough to promote recycling? If not, what would you suggest?

Alix White,
health board candidate

Unless we are recycling 100 percent, the town is not doing enough to promote recycling! With that caveat before us, may I say how proud I am to serve on such a hard working and forward thinking board as the Recycling Committee. Annually, we add two recyclable items, making it possible to recycle 80 percent of our waste. This is far ahead of the Solid Waste Master Plans' mandated 25 percent.

The Recycling Committee presently uses some inexpensive means of promoting recycling. Several weekends per year at the RTF, the Recycling Committee and the Board of Health hand out fliers, review recycling etiquette for the non-compliant, and listen to your questions and concerns. The RTF also hosts Deer Hill's fifth grade. This has been one of the most rewarding ways to teach and promote recycling.

We can always be doing more. We have been awarded a grant for printing and mailing the RTF flier townwide. This same flier could go into new homeowners' real estate packets. Also, a speaker could go to the different community groups and give presentations on recycling and the RTF. Because of the changing face of waste management, we will always need to promote and teach recycling.

• Planning board: Why (or why not) is the proposed DPW garage site the best one for the purpose?

Dean Rizzo,
planning board candidate

It seems to me that the proposed location for the new DPW garage site is the best one available at this time. The site is already used as a storage area, which means we would not be converting undeveloped land into a developed area. As long as all of the proper studies have been completed (which I believe they have) to ensure that there will not be any adverse effects to the environment then I think it makes a lot of sense to build it at this location.

The new garage will enable us to have a more efficient DPW system for the town. This would allow us to remove the existing garage behind the Village which I think we all agree does not add to the charm of the Village area. Removing the garage from the Village will also give us the opportunity to improve the traffic flow in the parking area. The new location is also centrally located within the town which will provide improved access. The new location seems like it would also be hidden once the foliage comes back during the spring, summer and fall months.

The proposed site seems to have all of the qualities for a successful plan. It will increase efficiency, remove an unattractive site from the Village, redesign an existing developed area to improve it, and not effect the environment or the character of the town in a negative way. If these qualities remain true than I am in favor of the proposed site.

Bill Good,
planning board candidate

I feel strongly that the DPW garage site which is being proposed is ideal for the town, the neighborhood, and the employees who will work there.

The location on town-owned land near the little league field off North Main Street is very central and speaks well to the needs for efficiency of all public works operations. Having lived six houses away from the site for seven years, I know how accessible and convenient this land known as "the sand pits" is. While being central to all areas of town, the location serves especially well the downtown business district to which we are all looking to be attentive and responsive.

At our most recent meeting, the planning board unanimously recommended this plan which satisfied the requirements of the zoning bylaw. The board feels particularly good about the location because the land on which the garage is to be built is 20 feet below the street level of Main St. thereby minimizing the view and impact to neighboring homes, playing fields and the swim center. The land is heavily treed along the roadway and property lines, making the site very private and quiet. With its additional proposed evergreen screening, the plan actually "cleans up" the overall area. Also, it is important to note that no neighbors have voiced any objections.

From an aesthetics standpoint, the proposal is excellent. The roofline, which features a cupola and pleasing lines, reflects Cohasset's New England heritage. As always, the planning board has encouraged the study committee to utilize our town's design review board for their professional recommendation.

• For school committee candidates: Does the distribution of condoms have any place in Cohasset High School?

JoAnne Chittick,
school committee candidate

The distribution of condoms does not take place in Cohasset High School, and I agree with this position. If the school committee ever has to establish a policy on condom distribution, I would welcome parents' opinions, as I weigh pros and cons of the issue to make a reasoned decision.

These weekly candidates' questions have implied that the only important school issues concern health education. Cohasset residents must understand that our schools offer an extensive educational program, of which health education is only a part. Dedicated teachers teach a solid curriculum that includes academics, the arts, computer technology, athletics, and attention to personal development. Cohasset students receive an education that prepares them well for further study and develops skills for life. But the school system does have weaknesses as well as strengths, and there are many educational issues facing the schools.

Because school committee candidates have addressed only health education topics, readers might not realize that individual candidates are especially knowledgeable about other school issues. I have had first-hand experiences inside all three schools as an involved parent. I will work to maintain what is excellent in our school system and to make needed improvements so that Cohasset schools will continue to provide a top-quality education for all children.

James Kirk,
school committee candidate

As a parent of teenagers and a first-grader, I support efforts to reduce any health risk facing my children and their classmates. As a School Committee member, I would work to understand the opinions of the community before deciding on this particularly sensitive issue.

Condom distribution in the schools has not been formally proposed to the School Committee. Like the rest of our health education curriculum, a decision on whether and how to address this issue must be based on broadly-held values and a consensus among educators, parents, and health professionals. The purpose of all elements of our comprehensive health curriculum is to complement the basic message that we as adults care about our children, and that children should care enough about themselves and others to avoid risky behavior. The core message of our sexual education program is — and should continue to be — that abstinence is the best approach to reducing risk.

For the past 5-1/2 years, my company has dealt with complex health education issues. If the Community Health Education Advisory Committee develops a recommendation for consideration by the community and the School Committee, I feel well prepared to give it careful evaluation.

Daniel S. Evans,
school committee candidate

At this point, I do not see advantages to distributing condoms in Cohasset schools sufficient to outweigh the obvious disadvantages.

Our schools should, and do, teach that teens should postpone intimate sexual relations for both moral and health reasons. Our schools also teach the importance of using condoms to reduce the risk of pregnancy or disease. School distribution of condoms could undermine the teaching of postponement, and instead send the message "everybody's doing it." More important, this message would not be limited to the older grades.

It is clear that some, perhaps a significant percentage, of Cohasset students are sexually active. It is equally clear that sexually active teens should be using condoms. What is less clear is whether non users would use condoms if they were distributed at school.

Condoms are inexpensive, and readily available. With modest effort, teens can purchase condoms in relative anonymity from pharmacies or vending machines in neighboring towns.

Although I am skeptical, student and parent input could convince me there is a need for greater condom availability. If there is a need, we as a town should address it. However, as a parent I would look hard at other distribution options before choosing the schools.

• Selectman: If elected, just how accessible will you be to the press and public?

Peter Pratt,
selectman candidate

Cohasset residents have the right to expect their selectmen will be fully accessible to them, to other elected and appointed officials in town, and to the press, acting as the public's watchdog over the processes of government.

I am seeking election as selectman this year in order to bring to our local government a level of access to the public and media, depth of public debate about critical issues, and availability to all residents, which is wholly distinct from the record of my opponent. I believe my entry in the race has already had the benefit of raising the level of debate about the future of Cohasset, and about the mistakes of the past.

I have a detailed knowledge of the Massachusetts Open Meeting Law, and the state Public Records Law. Having served on one of the great municipal reform administrations in the Commonwealth of the postwar era — the administration which cleaned up the City of Somerville — I understand how open governmental processes and the light of public scrutiny are the best guarantors of good government. I will continue to have no patience for any local violations of the letter or spirit of the Open Meeting or Public Records statutes.

As when i served as a Cohasset Water Commissioner, I will remain available for direct communication with any town resident or official via my residential and business telephones. During working hours, I am able to travel from my office in Weymouth to the town in under 15 minutes for meetings and emergencies.

As selectman, I will always be found on the side of open communications in all forms.

Question of the week

• Water commission: How does Cohasset's water supply compare with other towns? Do local citizens take it for granted?

Fred Koed,
water commission candidate

Cohasset has been one of the few surrounding towns that has not had water restrictions in place for many years. Cohasset had the foresight in the 1970's to create a new reservoir and water treatment plant. Prior to that Cohasset suffered periodic water shortages. The Bear Hill standpipe (behind the high school) improved water pressure over the old open air reservoir on top of Bear Hill.

The Hingham water system, operated by American Water Works (AWW, a private owner), as recently as last summer suffered shortages in water. American Water Works in Hingham also services Hull and part of Cohasset. The larger customer base of American water works has given AWW an advantage in the rate structure that smaller systems like Cohasset don't have. This advantage is "economy of scale" which allows the fixed costs of operations to be distributed over a larger customer base.

Many citizens do take their water supply for granted. They trust the Water Commissioners to take care of the system for them. This is why it is so important for the townspeople to compare the records of the candidates for Water Commissioner and vote for the most qualified.

Mark Bell,
water commission candidate

Our reservoir: very large, plentiful and shielded against harmful acidity.

Our plant facility: oversized and equipped enough to facilitate organized maintenance.

The staff: experienced, dedicated and deserving of recognition for what they try to give us.

There are two threats that reduce our facility's stature.

The first is the documented, notorious, unproductive management of our facility.

The second threat is the CHL. We cannot relax when a specific source of pollution is only time and distance from our water supply.

Take it for "granted?"

When water users pay their bills, they are paying for honesty and the highest quality product possible. The acceptance of payment by the department affirms the covenant of responsibility.

Water users should make sure the best people are in control of their facility. That way, the responsible people are just that, responsible.

Give the right person the obligation to care, allow an accountable person the responsibility to make sure there are no unanswered questions, and granted it will be. It's your right!

Evans get-together set

Dan Evans will discuss his candidacy for the Cohasset School Committee at a get-together Friday, March 25, hosted by Bernadette and Philip Faulkner and Susan and Rob Spofford.

At the 6 to 8 p.m. event, Evans will explain why he will provide balance to the current school committee. Anyone interested in attending should telephone Susan Spofford at 383-1680.

Pratt open house

Cohasset townspeople are invited to attend a Sunday Open House on Little Harbor for selectman candidate Peter J. Pratt, March 27, from 4 to 6:30 p.m. The event will be hosted by Edward and Priscilla Long at 31 Nichols Road.

Parking for the event is available on Nichols Road near Cat Dam and will be supervised by a police detail. Admission is free. Further information is available by calling the Pratt Committee at 383-0060.

Coffee held for White

A coffee was held for Alix White, candidate for board of health, at the home of Kevin and Donna O'Donnell, 196 Fair Oaks.

The committee to elect Alix White would like to thank the O'Donnells for their hospitality and generosity. Anyone wishing to make a contribution to Alix White's campaign may do so by sending a check to: Committee to elect Alix White, 227 Beechwood St.

Kirk coffee held

"Technology must be a tool, not a curiosity." That was the theme of Jim Kirk's discussion at the school committee candidate's coffee held at Jack and Sue McNamara's home Sunday, March 20. Neighbors were joined by several past and present members of various town boards for a lively dialogue about the role of the schools in preparing students for tomorrow's complex world.

Candidates night on landfill

S.A.F.E. (Stop Any Further Expansion) will hold a candidates night for four local town offices at 8 p.m. Thursday, March 24, at the Unitarian Parish House.

At this event, Cohasset residents will have the opportunity to hear presentations from and ask questions of candidates for Board of Selectmen, Board of Health, Water Commission, and Planning Board.

The candidates invited are: Selectmen candidates Peter Pratt and Rocco Laugelle; Board of Health candidates Alix White and Robert V. Davenport; Water Commission candidates Mark Bell and Fred Koed; and Planning Board candidates Dean Rizzo and William Good.

McNabb added that these candidates will all be asked the following question: "Are you for or against the proposed Area V expansion of the Cohasset Heights Ltd. (CHL) landfill? If elected, what specific actions would you take to deal with the current problems at CHL?"

Election supper planned

Election Day in Cohasset is April 2. Candidates will be introduced to residents March 24 at 6:30 p.m. at the Annual Election Supper held at the Beechwood Congregational Church on Church St.

Dinner includes roast beef, mashed potatoes, string beans, Harvard beets, cole slaw, rolls, dessert and a beverage. Tickets are $6.99 for adults and $3.50 for children. To make reservations, call 383-1298 or 383-1138.

Election procedures for Cohasset school councils

At a recent meeting, the Cohasset Parent School Organization Executive Board adopted election procedures that will be used to elect parents to the school councils.

School councils, mandated by the Education Reform Act, consist of the building principal, teachers, parents, and a community representative. Responsibility for overseeing the election of parent members to the councils was given to the "locally recognized parent organization."

The PSO nominating committee will oversee the election of parents to each school council. The committee consists of three members of the Executive Board and the PSO Vice President and three at-large members representing each school.

School council nominations for 1994 are open April 4 to 16; school council election period for 1994 is May 2 to 6.

Notices asking for interested persons to submit their names will be posted in schools, publicized in newspapers, and sent home with school communications.

Every parent who has a student at the given school for the length of the school council term is eligible to run. Each candidate will be asked to write a paragraph about themselves which will be mailed with the voting ballot prior to election week.

Voting ballots will be mailed to parents the week of April 25 to 29 along with the information sheet on the candidates. Write-in votes will be accepted.

Any member of the PSO Executive Board may seek a position on a school council. School council members who are not on the Executive Board are not required to attend executive board meetings. School representatives may monitor school council meetings if there is no other executive board link to the school council.

At the end of this year, one person from the Deer Hill and Osgood school councils will be asked to remain for another year for continuity. Two people from the jr./sr. high will be asked to continue.

Each school will have its own color ballot which will be stamped. Voters must return ballots to the school office by Friday at 4 p.m. on the final day of election week. In the event of a tied election, a run-off will be held.

Parents of 12th-graders will not receive ballots. Parents of registered kindergartners will receive ballots for Osgood. Parents of third-graders will receive Deer Hill ballots. Parents of sixth-graders will receive jr./sr. high ballots.

School council openings 1994: Osgood — 2 two-year positions; Deer Hill — 2 two-year positions; jr./sr. high — 2 two-year positions.

If you have any questions about either the school councils or the election, please call Ruth Wilcox at 383-1827 or Maureen Jerz at 383-6592.

Big kids to help younger ones K.O.P.E.

In an effort to combat the use and abuse of alcohol and other drugs by our young people, the Cohasset Health Education Department has developed, and is in the process of implementing, a peer education program called Project K.O.P.E. (Kids Organized to Promote Education).

This program is open to all students in grades nine-through-12 who are interested in educating younger students at the Osgood, Deer Hill and the Junior High School in the preventing drug and alcohol use and other health education topics. Participating students are required to make a sincere commitment to the program. Students who elect to talk to younger students about alcohol and other drugs must pledge to abstain from the use of tobacco, alcohol, and other harmful drugs for as long as they are part of the program. All of the participating students are required to complete a training program.

The first session of this training was held at the Chart House and conducted by Judy Foley through Prevention Resources. Topics covered were team building, commitment, tobacco and the importance of remaining drug free. The students successfully completed several team building exercises and really pulled together as a group.

Session II will be held at the Chart House, March 25. At this session Alcohol, alcoholism, addiction and chemical dependent families will be discussed. The final session will be March 29 at the Chart House and decision making and lesson plan implementation will be taught. Following the final session these students will be scheduling sessions with students at Deer Hill and the Junior High School.

The Chart House restaurant generously donated use of the facility to the high school. It certainly made learning more fun!

1994 teacher of the year; an 'artful' presentation

By Diana N. Kinch
Special to the Mariner

An audience of 25 people were privileged to hear Virginia Freyermuth, The 1994 Teacher of the Year, speak about "The Value of Art in Education" at the PSO meeting held at the high school Tuesday, March 15.

In the first part of her presentation Freyermuth highlighted the goals drafted by The Common Core of Learning Committee. The 40 member committee is seeking input and suggestions across the state to implement a plan to be utilized statewide. This plan will change curriculums to help meet the needs of the 21st century. The question "What will our students need to know and be able to do by the time they graduate from high school?" is the focus of the study.

The plan includes possibilities such as a second language as early as the elementary level, organizing ourselves for learning in school and the workplace, and planning for economic success. Since all input is now being assessed by the committee, Freyermuth stressed how each member of our community can play an important part in our children's educational future. Call the office of the superintendent, 383-6111, and ask for a copy of The Common Core of Learning Draft. Review this two-page document and write your opinion of the draft. Comments and questions can be sent by April 5 to: The Massachusetts Commission on The Common Core of Learning, The Massachusetts Department of Education, 350 Main Street, Malden 02148-5023.

Freyermuth, an art teacher and coordinator in the Duxbury School System, demonstrated how art meets many of the needs highlighted in the Common Core Draft, through slides of students' self-portraits, still-lifes and other paintings. She walked her audience through several processes and techniques used by her high school students, explaining how these portfolios illustrate, unlike any grade, a student's potential. One-hundred and twenty different visual art careers exist due to the bridging of art and technology. Ms. Freyermuth, who has witnessed how the development of students' art work has defined for them their self-worth, is emphatic that students be made aware of the opportunities available in this field.

Cable Channel 3 will replay the program Thursday, March 24, at 7 p.m. and Thursday, March 29.

Early release update

The jr./sr. high school faculty used this release day, March 10, to work on their professional development goals. This process will be ongoing throughout the year, culminating in individual research projects presented to the whole faculty in May. This innovative approach to in-service time has teachers pursuing a wide variety of topics on early release days.

The Deer Hill faculty held a school-wide discussion of inclusion. inclusion is mainstreaming special needs students in the regular education classrooms with the teacher and special needs teacher co-teaching. The discussion concerned what was happening at each grade level, how it was working and what type of student grouping worked best. These discussions helped to determine which inclusion model works best so planning can begin for the next school year.

At Osgood School, instructors from the South Shore Natural Science Center demonstrated how to integrate nature studies in the classroom. This school-wide workshop was developed as a result of a science review study conducted in May, 1993. Teachers will be using the nature trails adjacent to the school as their "classrooms" for this unit.

Watch this space for further updates.

If Your Child Has Problems Learning at School, A Free Screening May Find the Cause

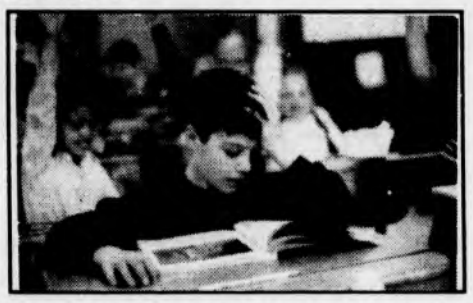
Your child may have 20/20 eyesight but 0/0 vision– the difference is critical.

Eyesight is merely the basic ability to see; vision is the ability to identify, interpret, comprehend, and act on what is seen.

Routine vision tests performed by school personnel or by most eye care professionals measure eyesight. They do not include the kinds of testing that can find visually-related learning problems.

COULD YOUR CHILD BE AT RISK?
Our VIP (Vision Improvement Program) can diagnose and successfully treat vision problems that are often reflected in the following behaviors:

1. Unable to sit still; cannot stay on task for any length of time.
2. Very clumsy; poor eye-hand coordination.
3. Does written work very slowly; often fails to complete a task.
4. Has difficulty copying visual material; constantly look up and down.
5. Moves entire head instead of eyes when reading.
6. Reversals- for example: confusing the words "was" and "saw" or letters "b" and "d".



7. Is disorganized and frustrated when studying visual information.
8. Makes frequent, "careless" errors.

If your son or daughter, age six to 16, has one or more of these behaviors, call 617-659-1444 today to schedule a free screening for vision-related learning problems. It could be the most important phone call you will make during his or her school years.

THE FREE SCREENING INCLUDES AN EVALUATION OF:

VISUAL MEMORY: The ability to store and retrieve visual information.

CONCENTRATION: The ability to maintain a visual task without distractions.

REVERSAL FREQUENCY: Confusing letters (b, d, p, q).

MOTOR SPEED AND PRECISION: Eye-hand coordination.

ACUITY DEFECTS: Near-sightedness, far-sightedness, astigmatisms.

EYE TEAMING/FOCUSING SKILLS: The ability to maintain clear and single vision at distance and near for prolonged periods of time without discomfort or abnormal effort.

VISUALIZATION: ability to develop a mental picture - closely related to comprehension.

VISUAL STYLE: The evaluation of how a person performs a visual task in terms of accuracy, speed, and energy used.

SCREENING CONSISTS OF 18 DIFFERENT TESTS AND TAKES APPROXIMATELY ONE HOUR.

Forty-one percent of students in the lower third of a normal class and 68% of students in special education programs have vision problems that can be corrected. Could your child be among them? It costs nothing to find out. Call us at 617-659-1444 for a FREE SCREENING!

WHAT IS THE VIP STRATEGY?
First, we test and diagnose a child's visually-related learning problems. If a visual handicap exists, a vision therapy program will be developed to meet the child's special needs. Once enrolled in our intensive Vision Improvement Program, a child will work on specific goals. A professional vision therapist will conduct carefully sequenced activities to strengthen weak areas in order to bring the "vision system" up to par. The time span for therapy is designed to allow each child to achieve maximum results.

WILL INSURANCE COVER THE COST?
Here's a comforting thought. Our VIP program is covered by most major medical insurance policies.

THE TIME TO ACT IS NOW!
If your child is between the ages of six and 16, call us today at 617-659--1444 to set up an appointment for a free screening. Any unexplained learning problem is a potential vision-related learning problem. When diagnosed early, VIP can significantly improve and often alleviate the problem entirely.

The comprehensive screening is free. Can you afford to pass up this possible explanation for your child's baffling lack of success in school? Call 617-659-1444

WHAT PARENTS HAVE TO SAY ABOUT THE VIP VISION THERAPY PROGRAM...

"I can highly recommend anyone with any question about their child's performance, after going through the program successfully with two of my children."

E. Tennesen

"Personality has changed in that Melissa seems to be much more forward in relationships with other people. Her school work has improved significantly."

Spring art series slated

The Children's Creativity Workshops is taking registration for the new spring term. Monday and Thursday after school art, as well as Saturday classes, begins in April for ages 5 through 12. The kindergarten classes have openings for boys and girls ages 5 and 6.

In these art workshops, young artists learn how to draw realistically from nature and use various media in creative activities while developing their imagination.

Current art from the kindergarten series is on display at the children's room in the Hingham Public Library.

For information on the workshops call 749-2453.

Alzheimer's support to meet

The Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore is sponsoring a panel discussion at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday March 30 at Thaxter Community Hall, 30 Thaxter St., Hingham.

Representatives from Blue Hills Alzheimer's Care Center of Stoughton will explain their facility which is the state's second long-term care facility devoted entirely to the care of Alzheimer patients and other related dementia.

Nursing home placement is a difficult decision for all families. Family involvement is critical to the success of the decision process. Early planning involving knowledge of all options available to the family is essential.

This and all meetings of ADSGSS Inc., are free and open to the public. For information call 749-5417.

Candidates will debate on "Pierson to Person"

Patriot Ledger editor William Ketter will be the special guest host Thursday March 24 on "Pierson to Person." Ketter's guests will be John J. Haley, general manager of the MBTA and Ledger columnists Ian Menzies and Johanna Seltz. They will be discussing the Old Colony commuter rail project, including the Greenbush line.

Wigmore Pierson will host a special edition of "Pierson to Person" from 8 to 9 p.m. Wednesday March 30 on Channel 3 in Cohasset. Candidates for Cohasset town offices will be debating the issues. Guests include Rocco Laugelle and Peter Pratt, candidates for selectman; Robert Davenport and Alix White, candidates for board of health; Frederick Kued and Mark Bell, candidates for water commission; and William Good and Dean Rizzo, candidates for planning board. Joining Pierson in questioning the candidates will be Cohasset Mariner Editor Mary Ford and Cohasset Ledger correspondent Molly Hochkeppel.

Pierson's guests on a special edition from 9 to 9:30 p.m. Thursday March 31 on Channel 3 will be candidates for the Cohasset School Committee: Owen O'Malley, James Kirk, Daniel Evans and JoAnne Chittick. Joining Pierson in the questioning will be Patriot Ledger Cohasset correspondent Molly Hochkeppel and Cohasset Mariner Editor Mary Ford.

From 8 to 9 p.m. Thursday March 31, Pierson's guests Mark Picciotto, Ph.D.; John Matthews, M.D.; Rochelle Cooper, R.N. and C.S.; William Engels, Ph.D.; and Richard Elliott, Ph,D. will discuss mental health issues including addictions, manic depression, dementia in the elderly and adolescent mental health disorders.

"Pierson to Person" is broadcast live from 8 to 9 p.m. each Thursday from the North Scituate studio of Continental Cablevision. The show airs on Channel 53 in Hingham and Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset. The public is invited to be part of the studio audience. Those planning to attend should be at the studio on Gannett Road by 7:30 p.m.

For information call Robert Belliveau at 545-2500.

Piano recital offered at SSC

Pianist and South Shore Conservatory faculty member Mark Goodman will perform his annual faculty recital, featuring exciting pieces from Haydn, Schubert, Messiaen and Liszt at 4 p.m. Sunday April 10 in South Shore Conservatory's Cox Hall, One Conservatory Dr., Hingham.

His program includes "Le Traquet Stapazin," or "The Black-eared Wheatear," which is part of Goodman's ongoing cycle in his performance of the complete "Catalogue d'Oiseaux," a 13-piece set Messiaen composed between 1956 and 1958. The selection he has chosen for the recital describes the birdlife on the Rousillon coast with its moors and terraced vineyards.

Admission is free and open to the public. For information call 749-7565.

Paul Pratt Library

Spring story hours

Registrations are currently being accepted for the spring story hours series at Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

The series will begin March 24 and will last for six weeks. Sessions will be offered at 10 a.m. Thursdays and Fridays. Each 45-minute program consists of several picture book stories and simple fingerplays, songs and crafts.

Children must be at least 3-1/2 to participate. To register, call the children's librarian at 383-1348.

Lynne Layman's photography remains on display in the reading room.

Alpha Zeta meets

The Alpha Zeta chapter of The Delta Kappa Gamma Society International, a society of key women educators, held its meeting March 17 at the Beechwood Congregational Church in Cohasset. A corned beef and cabbage dinner was served to 35 members by the church auxiliary, with profits to be donated to the Cohasset Kitchen.

The membership voted to invite three teachers to join Alpha Zeta and to accept the following slate of officers for the coming biennium: president, Patricia Munro of Cohasset; first vice president, Joan Auciello of Scituate; second vice president, Kathleen Schwab of Hingham; recording secretary, Elsie Cheverie of Brockton, and corresponding secretary, Louise Scott of Hanson.

Marjorie Burns of the Zeta chapter was the guest speaker, addressing the topic of "Stress Management." Burns, who is now retired, is a former classroom teacher, special educator, and assistant principal in Wareham.

Spring Sweep Day at community center

Saturday March 26 will be Spring Sweep Day at the Cohasset Community Center. After the stormy winter, the outside needs a good cleanup.

There will be music, coffee and doughnuts to ease the job. Volunteers should bring a rake and garden gloves. There is litter to be picked up, and broken branches to pile.

Rain date is Saturday April 9.

For information call the center at 383-0088.

Local rail advocate does not have a one-track mind

By Barry Svriuga
Mariner staff

William Grimes admittedly likes trains. A native New Englander who was raised in South Boston, he can remember when the passenger trains carried commuters back and forth from the South Shore. In the 39 years since his graduation from Boston Latin High School, he has maintained a nearly constant involvement with railroads and the people who ride them.

Linking Grimes with trains is certainly accurate. The founder and president of the grassroots group Back on Track, he has a high profile relating to his tireless efforts over the past 10 years to restore commuter rail service to the South Shore. He remains active in the Boston Street Railway Organization, which he helped start in 1959. He is a member of the National Association of Railroad Passengers.

But Grimes is not strictly a rail junky. An hour spent with the Harvard graduate who lives and works in Hingham will tell anyone that.

"I'm not a glassy-eyed rail fan," Grimes says. "I look at things in terms of the importance for the entire community."

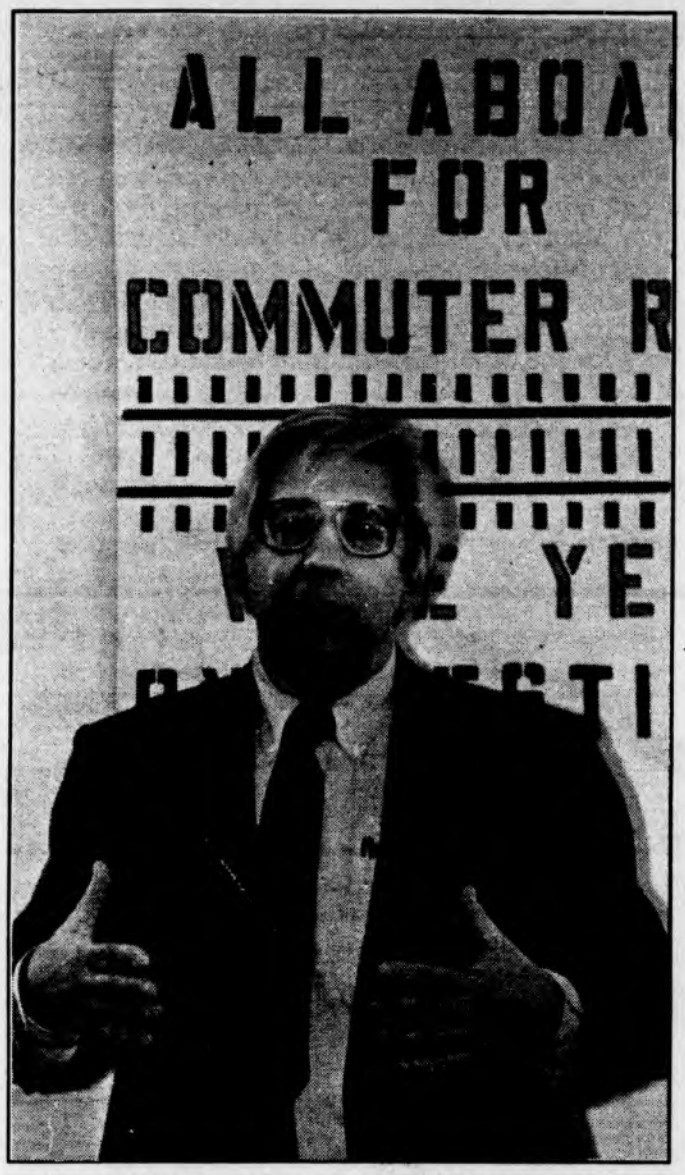
In fact, Grimes, who works as a translator for a partnership that boasts clients from all over the eastern United States and Europe, has a wide variety of interests. He dabbles in writing and performing with a local comedy troupe. He soon will begin volunteer work with the Hingham public schools. Contrary to his public image, he does not have a one-track mind.

But the fact remains that Grimes is undeniably linked now and in the future to Back on Track and its relentless push to reestablish train travel from Boston to Scituate. His passionate feelings about the issue and the conflicts surrounding it flow easily.

"We knew when we started this thing 10 years ago that there would be people who would be uncomfortable about this change coming to the world," Grimes says. "They see this new thing coming so they're worried about it.

"We've tried to educate them by telling them, 'This is how it is. Look, see for yourselves.' In many cases, we've gotten a favorable reception."

But opposition to the Greenbush Line, which would run from South Station in Boston through Quincy, Braintree and Weymouth before stopping in Hingham Center and moving on to Cohasset and Scituate, is also prevalent. Although Grimes expected the project would not move ahead without thorough discussion of the issues by all the affected parties, he is frustrated by the unwillingness of some participants to listen.



William Grimes makes the case for restoration of the Greenbush Line during a recent pro-train meeting sponsored by Back on Track.

"I've never really encountered people who were so determined not to hear what you had to say," Grimes says. "I've never met people who were so closed-minded."

Foremost in the opposition to the rail project is the Hingham Square Business Association. Though some members have been willing to listen, Grimes says that pro-train arguments have too often fallen on the deaf ears of many members, who feel that the loss of parking space would be potentially fatal to some of the area shops.

"We try to promote a sensible dialogue," Grimes says. "You have to have cooperative and creative conversation.

"But there is hostility to the idea that we'd even consider changing and endangering their world. They see it as something very precious and very special. They think that the train will render it terrible damage."

But Grimes says evidence that downtown commerce centers can flourish rather than flounder lies in the communities to the west and north of Boston. He says that cities and towns like Needham, which has long been serviced by commuter rail, have vibrant shopping areas that coexist with the train.

Grimes' feelings about the train and its benefits run deep, but he is anxious to see the project come to an end. Not only has he worked long and hard for Back on Track, he also sits on Hingham's Transportation Committee and the Citizens' Advisory Council, the group that makes recommendations to the MBTA. Though he feels the work will ultimately be rewarded, he is ready to move on to something else.

Grimes' work with the comedy group Mass Hysteria provides a lighter deviation. The ensemble writes parodies and performs at least twice annually in events sponsored by Hingham resident Margo Euler. The satire provides relief from the precise and exact nature of his everyday translation business.

"This is a way of kicking up our heels - taking somebody else's sacred words and doing a parody of them," Grimes says.

But even pleasure often overlaps with everyday concerns. One of Mass Hysteria's recent parodies, entitled "Old Colony Choo-Choo", flows along with the lyrics "Pardon me sir - is that the train I take to Hingham?"

Before the train issue took up much of Grimes' free time, he helped start the Hingham English Language Project (H.E.L.P), which organized volunteers to teach English to Asian immigrants on the South Shore, helping them become acclimated to American culture. And though Grimes is single and has no children, he is beginning to take a vested interest in the town's school system, relaying what he knows about computer systems to faculty and staff so that the department has a more powerful and user-friendly network.

But Grimes' chief concern remains the railroad. Despite the long struggle, he feels the train is beneficial and necessary.

"You can give a lot of people the opportunity to have a much better quality of life - to live down here and enjoy the benefits of getting to Boston easily," Grimes says.

He is also convinced that the train, a flicker in his imagination a decade ago, will become a reality. The board of selectmen recently approved the train with the condition that it run through a tunnel under Hingham Center, but Grimes considers even that a step in the right direction.

"I have no doubt that we're going to get ourselves a train here," he says.

And maybe then the people of the South Shore won't exclusively associate William Grimes with the train.

Stop train rally, Saturday

The Coastal Coalition, a newly formed anti-Greenbush Rail restoration group, is conducting a rally at 10 a.m., Saturday in Hingham Square to let Governor Weld know they are opposed to the train and favor expanding boat and bus transportation instead.

Call Nancy Buckley at 740-4673 or Randy Young at 749-8782 for more details.

Easter egg hunt planned

The Cohasset Recreation Commission will host the annual Easter egg hunt for children ages 3 through 12 at noon Saturday March 26 at Deer Hill School, Sohier St. The Easter Bunny will arrive via a Cohasset fire truck at noon.

Younger children should be accompanied by an adult. All children will receive candy and a balloon. Prizes will be awarded to each of three age groups.

The Easter Egg Hunt is financially sponsored by the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, Cohasset Police Association, George H. Mealy, American Legion Post #118, Cohasset Veterans of Foreign Wars-Post #9146 and the Rotary Club of Cohasset. Many residents and businesses contribute time, effort and goods towards the event.

Hingham homemaker works full-time to halt railroad

By Barry Svriuga
Mariner staff

Excitement and concern is apparent in Nancy Buckley's eyes as she leafs through two thick folders overflowing with clips and documents related to a cause to which she has dedicated the vast majority of her time over the past four months. Her feelings about the issue are strong and clearly-defined as she races to cover all the pertinent information surrounding the controversial and hotly-debated topic.

But Buckley is not about a personal agenda. The 39-year-old Hingham homemaker doesn't attach herself to issues for self-recognition. She is clearly overwhelmed by the personal attention she has received due to the fact that she organized the Coastal Coalition, a group of concerned citizens from all over the South Shore who are fighting the introduction of the Greenbush Line of the MBTA's Old Colony Rail Project.

Though Buckley has no interest in being the sole spokesperson for the issue, her concerns about the well-being of Hingham and the other towns along the Greenbush corridor override any hesitation.

"I'm just convinced that this goes against common sense," Buckley says as she gladly offers statistics and documents that Coalition members feel support their contention that the train would harm, not help, Hingham and the South Shore.

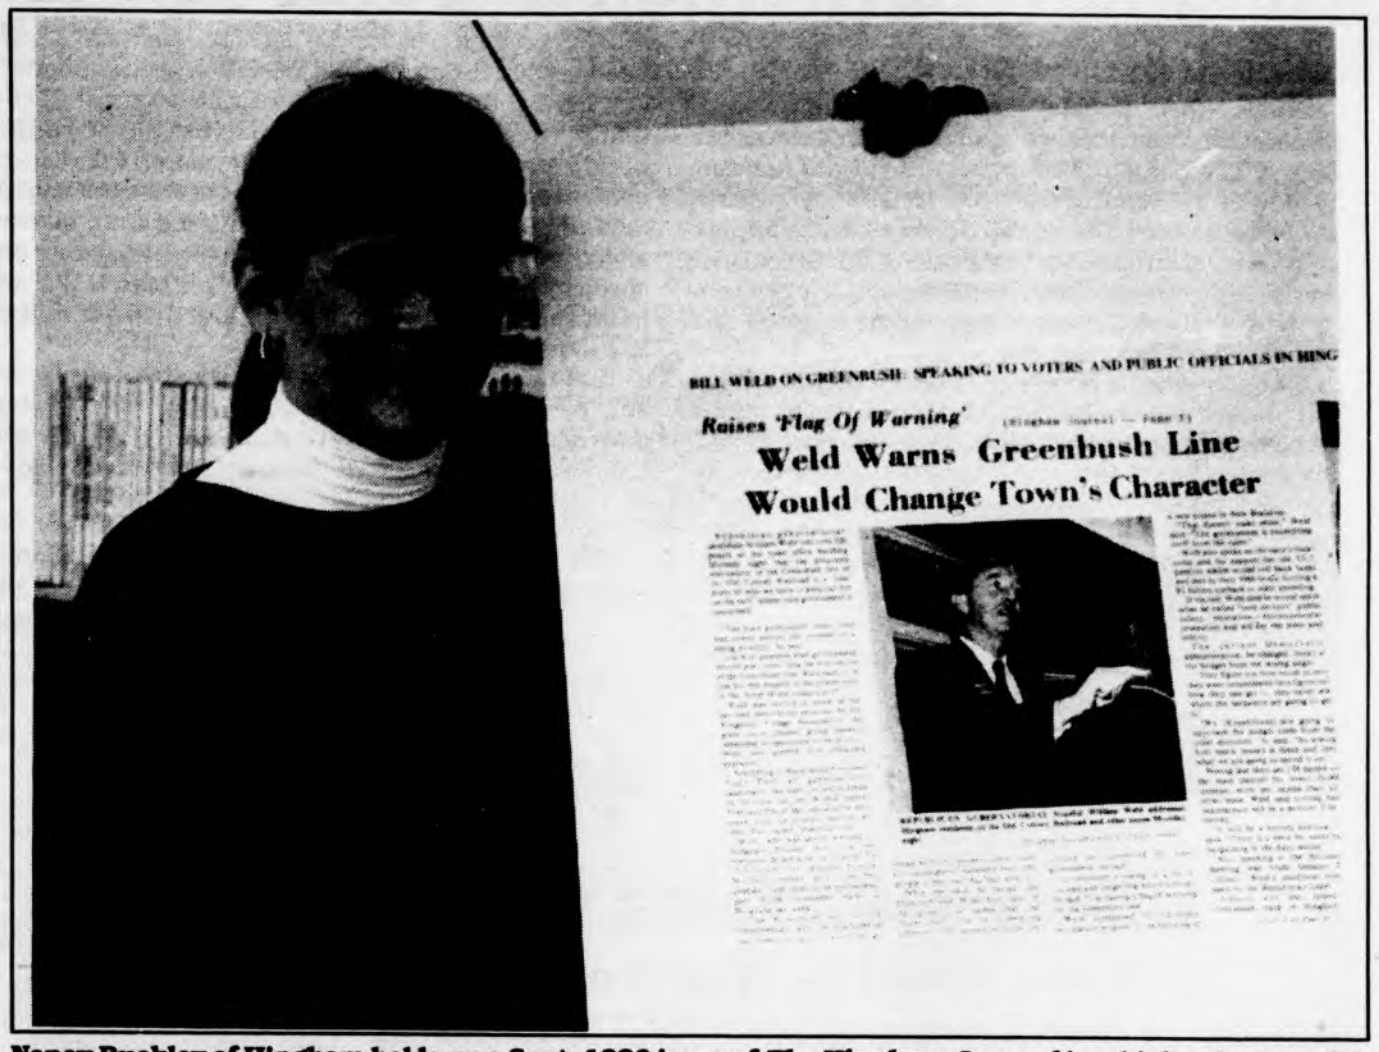
At first glance, Buckley might seem a reluctant and unlikely leader of the movement. Although her husband Stephen suffers through a three-hour commute to Woburn every day, Buckley herself remains in town. She has never been involved in other civic projects like this. And unlike many other ardent opponents of commuter rail, she is not a long-time South Shore resident, having moved from Falmouth only five years ago.

But she has developed a true love for Hingham and what she considers to be its unique square. Her desire to save her relatively new hometown from what she feels will be certain doom compelled her to step to the forefront of the movement.

"I love the square," Buckley says. "I think it's truly one of the gems of the South Shore."

Though the economic stability and aesthetic value of the square are large issues, both Buckley and many of her fellow Coalition members are concerned about safety. The mother of a 13-year-old girl and 11-year-old boy, she fears that if the train comes through Hingham, the children of the town will be endangered while walking through the now relatively placid shopping area.

"I know children will get killed," Buckley says, citing the fact that the train will travel through intersections at 30 miles per hour, a six-fold increase over the speed the old train moved at 35 years ago. "It's an accident waiting to happen."



BILL WELD ON GREENBUSH: SPEAKING TO VOTERS AND PUBLIC OFFICIALS IN HING

Raises 'Flag Of Warning'

Weld Warns Greenbush Line Would Change Town's Character

Nancy Buckley of Hingham holds up a Sept. 1990 issue of The Hingham Journal in which gubernatorial candidate William Weld is quoted as saying restoration of Greenbush Rail could hurt Hingham's character.

(Staff photo/Mary Ford)

Likewise, the path Buckley took to becoming involved in the anti-train movement was almost accidental. After attending a December 1993 meeting on the MBTA's environmental impact study, she was amazed that although the report presented six options for transportation improvements on the South Shore, almost all the attention was given to the train. What she considered to be more viable options, like expanded boat and bus service, were virtually ignored.

Her astonishment about the handling of the issue increased when she attended a January meeting in Scituate organized by Kevin Kinsella, the town's selectmen chairman.

"I couldn't believe my ears," Buckley says. She felt her views and those of others that expressed opposition to the train were swept aside. "I really felt dismissed."

Hingham homemaker works full-time to halt railroad

That's when Buckley began to get involved. A subsequent letter that was published in several editions of The Mariner Newspapers expressed her concerns that the voice of what she feels is the majority was being ignored. Phone calls followed from supporters in Scituate and other towns along the Greenbush Line. Buckley was suddenly in the position to organize a true movement against the perceived majority that supports the train.

"The commute is horrible," Buckley acknowledges. "But people are making assumptions about where people are going and who would use the train."

Buckley says that among those assumptions is the assertion that the commuter rail would get a significant number of cars off the road. Though the MBTA argues that 4,000 commuters will ride the train daily, Buckley claims that one third of those people already take another form of transportation. She also cites statistics that saying of the 200,000 commuters on the South Shore, only 21 percent travel to downtown Boston.

"What would be sad is if it was built and we ruined our downtown," she says, "and then no one rode it. We need to clear the air about a lot of these assumptions."

Clearing the air is exactly what the Coastal Coalition is attempting to do. The group has already organized a March 30 meeting at the Weymouth Elks Lodge on Route 53 and an April 6 meeting at the VFW hall in Scituate in an effort to involve citizens from all the affected towns. Buckley also hopes to put together an outdoor rally in Hingham Square on March 26, an event she hopes will draw parents and children as well as intense media coverage.

And though Buckley feels strongly about the issue and is willing to fight against it, she says if solid evidence surfaced that the residents of the South Shore strongly supported the train, she would acquiesce.

"I'm a firm believer in majority rules," she says.

But until Buckley sees proof that Hingham and other towns fully support the train, she will devote all the time she can afford to the issue. She already considers her involvement a full-time job, and a neighbor is cooking dinner for her family this week because she is so busy.

"I just need someone to do my laundry and clean my house," she says.

But even if someone doesn't step forward to take care of Buckley's domestic duties, she will likely be in the fight until the end.

Gymnasts look forward to winning season

Cohasset High School varsity gymnastics team did not reach their goal of first place by practicing daily. It took drive, determination, commitment, dedication and a lot of hard work during the season, as well as the off-season. To be a consistent gymnast, you must work out all year round. All of the gymnasts at Cohasset High School work out in the off-season at the Cohasset Community Center's "Gymnast in Motion."

Cohasset ended their season March 6, at Kimballs by the Sea. Captains Aimee Mitchell and Kara Protulis gave their farewells and good luck to the gymnasts for next season. Both captains received a plaque for their contribution to the Co-Champion spot and Aimee Mitchell was awarded "The Most Spirited and Enthusiastic" award. We will miss both of these girls next year. Aimee and Kara have been very helpful and supportive this year with their teammates.

Sophomore Tafana Fiore and freshman Jodi Colwill received the "Beam Queen" award. This award is given out to the gymnast or gymnasts who stay on the balance beam the most over the course of the season. Colwill also received the "Most Improved Gymnast," along with several medals from the South Shore League Meet for performances on bars, beam, and vault. Jodi was also named to the All-Star team. Ardizzoni believes that Jodi will be a valuable asset to next year's season.

Freshman Erica Hettstrom was awarded the "State Qualifier Beam" award. Erica was the only gymnast in the South Shore League to qualify for the State Individuals. Erica was the first place All-Around in the South Shore League Meet, and was named to the All-Star team as an All-Around. Erica will be competing in the All-Around to start off next season.

Freshman Megan Pratt was named to the All-Star team on floor exercise and received medals on floor and bars in the All-League Meet. Megan competed most of the season in the All-Around position. Ardizzoni believes that Megan will continue to pull through for Cohasset with strong performances on beam, floor, and bars.

Tara Hettstrom and Lauren Genovese were medalists in the All-League Meet and will continue to perform well next season.

Kristen Reynolds and Maggie Goedecke helped the team a great deal this season. These two girls seem to excel the most on vault and bars.

Kerry Dwyer and teammate Caroline DeRose may not have had as much competition time as some of the other teammates, but being a part of the varsity squad has been a great learning experience for them this year.

"The season is now over, but the girls are all in the gym working harder than ever for next season," Ardizzoni said. "I am looking forward to next year and believe that the girls can maintain their first place standing. It takes a team to come together as one to win."

Eighth-grader Carolyn Pratt seems to be a very promising gymnast in years to come, especially on the beam and floor exercise.

There will be no seniors on Cohasset's team next year. Tafana Fiore will be the oldest gymnast on the team and most likely will be captain in her junior year. Fiore will be competing in two or three events next season.

Leading the Skippers in the All-Around next year will be Erica Hettstrom, Megan Pratt, Jodi Colwill and Tara Hettstrom.

Lots of luck next season, Skipper Gymnasts!

These are the members of the Cohasset High School girls' gymnastics team as they look toward a winning season in 1994-95. A special reception was held for the athletes on March 6 at Kimball's.

Cohasset Walk by the Sea' set for March 27

Come celebrate the end of winter and the coming of spring! The Cohasset Rotary is hosting the 10th "Cohasset Walk by the Sea" this year March 27, at 10 a.m., directly preceding the 18th annual Cohasset Road Race. This is a perfect time to get out again, see your neighbors and enjoy the beautiful Cohasset coastline.

The event will be a fun affair starting and ending at Sandy Beach, and will include the original 10K loop and also a designated three-mile course for those wishing a less strenuous workout. Costumes are welcome but optional, and there will be a variety of prizes to winners with the best time, best costume, largest group, etc. It is expected to be a family affair with many people participating in the typically non-competitive social event, which will include a "Mardi Gras" style finish line with tailgating and road race cheering activities from Sandy Beach. The great Dixieland jazz band, the Dukes of Rhythm, will once again be entertaining both the walkers, racers, and spectators at the beach and then at Cohasset Common.

The entry fee for the walk or run is $10 and includes an event T-shirt. Registration the day of the event is $12. The walk is being coordinated by Fit for Success, Inc. and all proceeds will go to the Cohasset Rotary's special projects. Registration forms can be obtained in Cohasset from the Good Sport or Curtis Liquors. For more information, call (617) 383-9800, or call Peter Logan (Cohasset Rotary) at (617) 383-9800 or Normandie Nigh (Fit for Success) at (617) 383-2515.

Softball registration upcoming

Registration for the Cohasset Girls' Softball League will soon be underway as the season is set to begin April 30.

The league is comprised of Division 1, grades four, five and six, and Division 2, grades seven, eight and nine. Division 1 consists of six teams and will play games Tuesday or Thursday evenings at either the Barnes Field, the high school field or Beechwood Ballpark.

Division 12will consist of two to four teams which play each other on Saturday afternoons at either of the abovementioned fields. Division 2 will also host Norwell each Thursday at Beechwood Ballpark. The season will end the last week of June.

The Cohasset Girls' Softball League is an instructional league. Aside from lots of fun, the league will provide the girls with the opportunity to learn and improve their softball skills. Another league objective is to promote good sportsmanship. Each year an evaluation session is held in order to assess participants' strengths, allowing for balanced teams. This year the evaluation session will be held April 30 at the High School front field.

The league will also march in the Harborfest Parade and a picnic and softball jamboree will also take place before the season ends.

Registration forms will soon be available at the Deer Hill School and Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School. For more information, please call Rose Collins at 383-0760.

It was a great weekend for South Shore basketball fans and Curley brothers from Duxbury.

On Saturday, Mickey, a 6'9" senior center at Duxbury High, led the Green Dragons to a Division II state title with a 75-58 victory over Greenfield.

Then on Sunday, Billy, a 6'9" senior center at Boston College, led the Eagles to a stunning 75-72 victory over defending champion North Carolina in the second round of the NCAA tournament.

For one weekend, the Curley brothers showed that when it comes to basketball players, the South Shore can stand with anyone.

By the way, in the fall Mickey will be taking his game to Boston College, where he has a full scholarship to play for coach Jim O'Brien.

When Billy played for Duxbury High, he also led the Green Dragons to the Division II state title.

While both play center and stand 6'9", they are very different players.

Billy, is blond-haired, left-handed, and plays a very intense style of basketball. He can play inside, banging bodies with the best of them (as he showed Saturday against NC's Eric Montross.) But he is best suited for playing near the foul line where he can use his great passing touch and outside shooting. He is one of the best passing big men around.

Mickey is dark-haired, leads with his right hand and has more of a basketball is fun attitude.

He is most effective down low and has a Kevin McHale-like ability to keep shots alive on the offensive boards. His best asset is that when he gets the ball inside, he does not bring it down where it can be grabbed at by smaller players. He can hit from the outside, but he is more effective on the blocks.

At this year's ACL vs. SSL all-star game, Mickey totally dominated the game by blocking shots, dunking and grabbing rebounds. Throughout the whole game, even during the overtime period, Curley could be seen smiling and laughing with the players from both teams.

Also during this season, Mickey could be seen quietly attending several Silver Lake girls' basketball games. Apparently, Curley's girlfriend is on the team and he wanted to watch her play when he could.

There is another Curley brother, Matt, who graduated last year from Duxbury High.

Matt, who stands 6'5", is probably the most skilled of the brothers and is an ideal swing man.

He is currently playing basketball for Duquesne, which is in the NIT Tournament.

There is a very good chance that all three Curleys will be playing professional basketball when their college days are done. Whether it's in the NBA, the CBA or in Europe, they have shown they have the right stuff.

Rodgers predicts U.S. road-racing comeback

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

He's 46-years-old but has changed little since he won his first of four Boston Marathons in 1975. Bill Rodgers set the American Record in that race with his 2:09:55 and lowered it to 2:09:27 four years later when, on a raw 40-degree day, he blazed across the finish line for his third Boston win.

Rodgers dominated the New York City Marathon even more than he did in his hometown Boston victories. His four victories came in consecutive years ('76-79) and made up for his disappointing 40th-place finish in the Montreal Olympics with a three-minute victory over Olympic silver medalist Frank Shorter in the '76 race.

He retired from marathon running a few years back, but Rodgers has hardly cut back on his road racing. Rodgers currently owns the American Record in the 45-49 age group in the 5K, 8K, 10K, half-marathon and 30K.

Still, there are those days when Rodgers is in the middle of a training run and he feels as though he could still run a marathon time he'd be happy with. It's a fleeting thought, though, but Rodgers admits it was a big change giving up the event he geared 19 years of training for. "It was hard to give up in a certain way," he said.

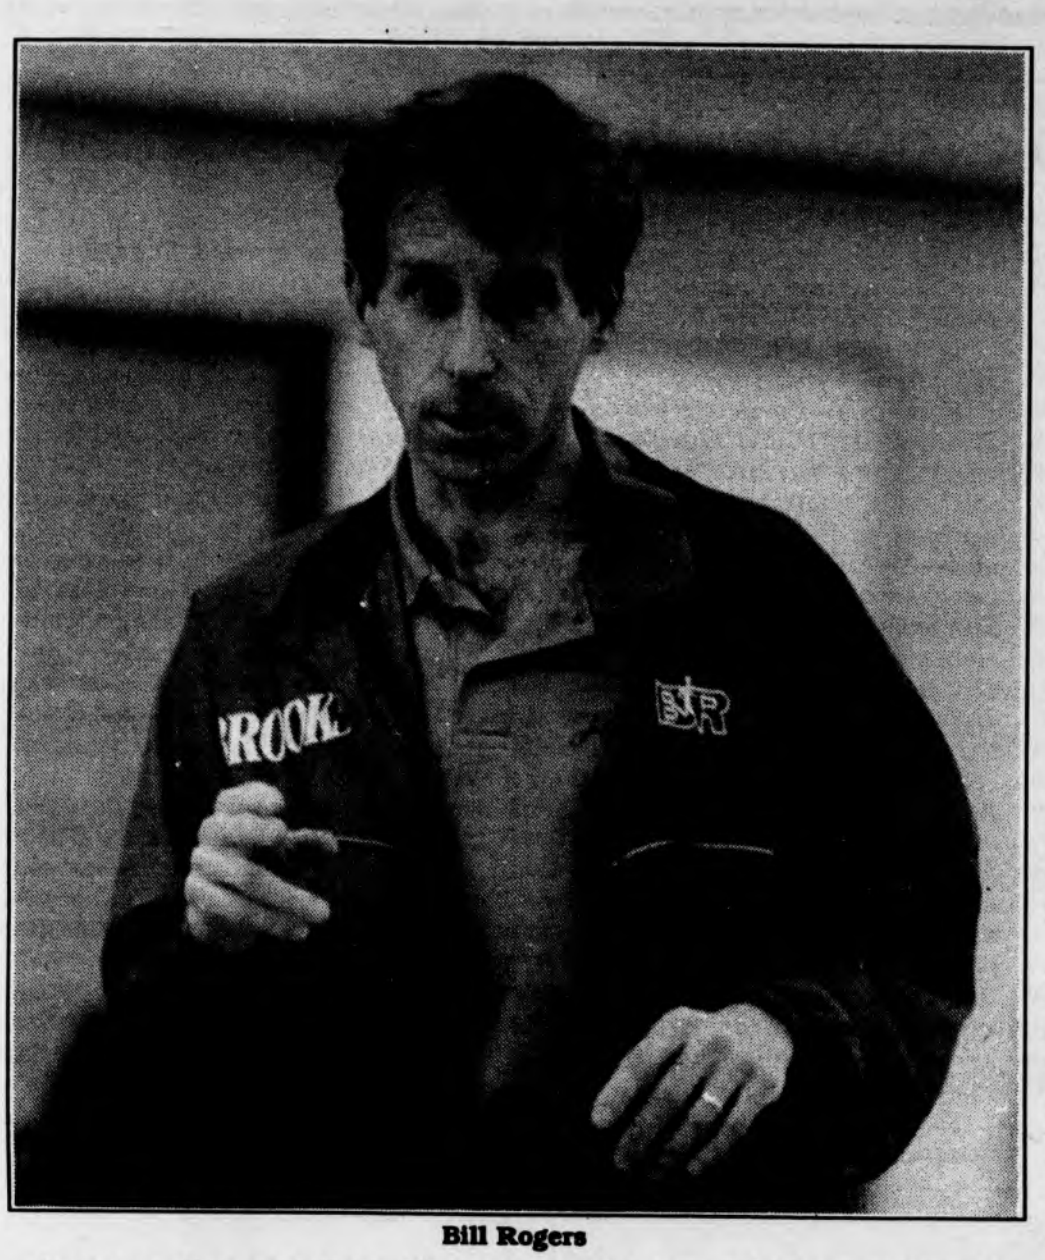
But after 40-plus marathons Rodgers is more than happy with the shorter distances that don't put his body through the wear and tear of a hard marathon.

The one constant through it all is that Rodgers has remained the most admired and recognizable American distance runner. But more importantly, he is the country's leading spokesman for the betterment of the sport and the development of the young talent on the rise in the U.S.

"I think running is still strong in the United States," Rodgers said. "Our sport is probably the most competitive sport in the world. Our country does not focus on endurance sports but we've done remarkably well.

"We have tremendous talent in the United States that needs to be developed."

Distance running has taken its knocks over the past 11 years in the U.S. American marathoning has yet to regain the deep, International power it did when Hingham's Greg Meyer won Boston in 1983. Meyer's winning time of 2:09 (the third fastest ever by an American), led four other U.S. runners under the 2:11 barrier.



Bill Rogers

American-Record-holder Alberto Salazar was the last U.S. winner at New York. That was in 1982.

Since then, there has been a major influx of African and Mexican runners who have tested American soils and found they like the prize money that is now available.

Major shoe companies have joined the act and are offering the top foreign athletes lucrative contracts to promote their shoes and running gear. Colleges are giving out more and more scholarships to the most talented foreign runners in an attempt to to strengthen their cross country and track programs.

Rodgers sees an array of areas in distance running in this country which must be addressed.

Rodgers said he has nothing against foreign athletes competing in American races "unless it's counterproductive to the sport in the United States." He does, however, have a problem with the exposure they are taking away from the U.S.'s most talented runners.

But where can improvements be made? Rodgers pinpointed a handful.

He is a firm believer that races designated as U.S. championships be closed to foreign runners. Rodgers cited the national cross country and track and field championships as examples, as well as the various road races serving as sanctioned championships, whether they be 10K, 20K or the marathon.

He also believes shoe companies should increase its sponsorship to more American distance runners, rather than the foreign athletes currently training and racing in the U.S. Rodgers went on to say a limit on scholarships to foreign-born runners should also be set, which he believes would open up more scholarship opportunities to Americans.

Rodgers did point out that many foreign countries approach their running in a way Americans have strayed from in recent years. The top distance runners from African countries such as Kenya and Ethiopia all train together as a team with a national coach. Rodgers would like to see the team system in the U.S. once again, along with coaches named by the United States Track and Field Association.

During his years as a member of the Greater Boston Track Club, Rodgers trained with some of the best road runners in the country. In the late mid to late '70s the team included Rodgers, Meyer, Salazar, Bob Hodge, Randy Thomas, Dick Mahoney and Vin Fleming. That group alone has three Boston Marathon winners in Rodgers, Meyer and Salazar. The other four have all finished in the top 10 at least once.

"There was always a group to push each other and offer support to one another," Rodgers said. "In the '79 race the club set the record for the lowest team score in the race's history."

The GBTC placed four runners in the top 10 that year. Behind Rodgers' record run, Hodge finished third with Thomas (eighth) and Mahoney (10th) all running huge races. Three other American finished in the top 10 as well.

Rodgers said one reason Americans aren't as dominant as they once were over the 26.2 mile distance is because some of the country's brightest talents are focusing their training on the 10K. Runners such as Pat Porter, Mark Nenow, Todd Williams and Lynn Jennings are all capable of fast times in the marathon, Rodgers said.

Rodgers singled out the 24-year-old Williams as the country's best young hope in the marathon. The national cross country champion, Williams has the best chance to medal in the marathon at the '96 Olympic Games if he chooses to bypass the 10K. The same holds true for Jennings on the women's side, Rodgers said.

Rodgers said a percentage of the money generated from road race entry fees should go back into the sport. "I want you to tell me where that money is going," he said. " United States Track and Field Association President) Olan Cassell will tell you it's being used to buy cross country uniforms, but I bet he wouldn't give a budget breakdown."

As for his own running future, Rodgers is still driven to lower his age group American Records and try for those few he has yet to claim as his own.

"I aim for all the records," Rodgers said.

All but one. The marathon mark will just have to go to someone else.

Expo at the World Trade Center in Boston.

Having received two free passes and an informational brochure in the mail earlier in the week, I thought it would be a good place to get some hot sports stories for the Mariner readers.

So I drove in and parked about a quarter mile from the event. As I locked my truck, I figured I didn't have to put any money into the parking meter because there wouldn't be any police ticketing that far away.

I didn't get five feet from my truck when a cop pulled up and starting blanketing the street with many $15 love notes.

I quickly dropped in three quarters and breathed a sigh of relief.

Anyway, I made it to the event and strolled in, expecting hundreds of people to be there.

It was, shall we say, very quiet.

I started walking around in hopes of locating Pembroke Olympic silver medalist Eric Flaim, who was supposed to be there, according to my handy brochure.

It turned out Eric was at the national speedskating championships and I was left holding the bag.

Oh well, I kept walking, hoping something else would be newsworthy.

I saw a lot of guys selling baseball hats and roller blades at the Expo.

There were also a lot of fitness club types. You know the kind of guys who shave their upper body. Yuck.

After a few minutes a weird looking guy walked up to me.

"Do you know about Dianetics?" he earnestly asked.

"Oh you mean the religion that science fiction writer made up. Yeah I do." I quickly walked away from the holy roller.

By the way, what does Dianetics have to do with sports?

Anyway after about a half hour, I finally found an exciting exhibit.

This guy had about 25 VCR tapes of all the best hockey fights over the past 20 years.

It was worth the drive in to see Terry O'Reilly and Stan Jonathan kicking some Canadien butt.

After a while I walked back to my truck. I was tired but it was the good kind of tired.

It looks as though that butt-smoking, conniving witch on skates, Tonya Harding, won't be going to the Big House after all.

Instead, Harding was rapped with a $160,000 fine, community service and a psychological evaluation on charges with interfering with an investigation in Portland, Oregon last week.

In between blasts from her asthma medication and cigarettes, Harding will be able to watch as "L.A. Law" bombshell Alexandra Powers transforms from one of the best looking actresses on prime time into America's hurl next door.

Powers must be making a pretty penny having to head off to work to cake on the makeup, have her silky blond hair turned into a rat nest and a king-sized pillow placed where her eye-catching posterior used to be for this project. I guess it's all in the name of acting.

But for Harding to be let off the hook with three years probation, community service and a $160,000 fine is a slap in the wrist and a stinging slap in the face to the Kerrigans.

What's more, Harding will be able to collect a percentage of all the made-for-TV movies — and you can bet your skates there'll be a handful — about her pathetic existence and how it made Kerrigan's a living hell in what should have been the most exhilarating period of her life.

And even though she has been banned for life from competing in any United States Figure Skating Association sanctioned event, Harding can go pro. However, it is quite hard to imagine her being picked up by a legitimate ice show any parent would want his or her child to see.

Promoter Don King, whose dome is almost as wild looking as Harding's mane of terror, could put together a solo show for the mall rat: "America's Most Wanted On Ice." That's a pair that deserves each other. Besides, it would give King a project he could sink his teeth into, at least until his meal ticket, Mike Tyson, is released from prison.

Here's hoping she accepts the $2 million contract to wrestle in Japan and is squashed by a Sumo with a bigger bum than hers, if there is one out there.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 104178T2
Notice Of Fiduciary's Account

To all persons interested in the estate of Maria Forbush Dewson late of Cohasset in the county of Norfolk.

You are hereby notified pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 72 that the ninth through twelfth accounts of Fleet Bank of Massachusetts N.A. as Trustee (the fiduciary) of the will of said deceased for the benefit of Ada F. Iselin and Delinda I. Harding et al have been presented to said Court for allowance.

If you desire to preserve your right to file an objection to said accounts, you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before the twentieth day of April, 1994 the return day of this citation. You may upon written request by registered or certified mail to the fiduciary, or to the attorney for the fiduciary, obtain without cost a copy of said accounts. If you desire to object to any item of said accounts, you must, in addition to filing a written appearance as aforesaid, file within thirty days after said return day or within such other time as the Court upon motion may order a written statement of each such item together with the grounds for each objection thereto, a copy to be served upon the fiduciary pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 5.

WITNESS, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham this fifteenth day of March, 1994.

Firefighters union tries to douse regionalization study

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Union officials representing local fire fighters in Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate have accused officials in the five towns of acquiring a state grant under false pretenses.

In a press conference last Friday, Professional Fire Fighters of Massachusetts union president Robert McCarthy claimed the towns got a $30,000 grant from the state Executive Office of Communities and Development under the pretext of setting up a regional fire district.

"I told [local fire fighters] from the beginning I thought the whole thing was a sham," McCarthy said. "The chiefs want to keep their jobs and the selectmen want to maintain their autonomy."

The union has requested an investigation by the state Attorney General and Inspector General's office. The union also threatened to file a complaint with the state labor relations board.

Town officials responded by calling the charges "nonsense." They countercharged McCarthy and the union membership made their accusations because the five towns won't let them dictate the regionalization agenda.

"They are in favor of regionalization, but they want an independent fire district so it will be out of the tax base," Norwell executive secretary Annette Sexton said. Sexton described an independent fire district as being akin to the MWRA where member communities are assessed by an independent board not subject to the restrictions of Proposition 2-1/2.

Hingham's executive secretary Charles Cristello refuted the accusation that money has been misspent or misused, saying EOCD has signed off on every step of the project.

"We do not have carte blanche," Cristello said. "We must have their approval for everything we do."

At the heart of the union's complaints is the feeling union officials have been locked out of the decision-making process.

According to McCarthy, local union leaders in all five communities send town officials letters designating the statewide PFFM as their representative at any regionalization meetings.

Norwell's executive secretary Annette Sexton said PFFM approached the committee nearly a year ago demanding to be the representative at the table for bargaining purposes.

"We told them there was nothing to negotiate," Sexton said.

Following last week's press conference, the committee received another letter from PFFM demanding they be allowed to represent the firefighters in collective bargaining.

"We still need to get all the facts together," Sexton said. "Then we will need to go to town meeting in [illegible] of the towns before anything can happen. If all five meetings agree, then we will have to draw up s[illegible] legislation to authorize the fire district."

At the press conference, McCarthy also faulted the towns for hiring Management Development Institute, Inc. of Oregon to study the five towns and make recommendations on how to proceed with consolidation into a single district.

"The money went to a consultant that doesn't even live in the state," McCarthy complained. "They gave jobs to outsiders that could have gone to Massachusetts residents."

MDI was the low bidder in an open bidding process. According to Cristello, MDI charged $22,600 for its study. The remaining $7,400 is being used to look at a regional communication center and to fund an intern who is working on financial aspects of regionalization.

McCarthy and his union membership also criticized the five towns for exploring interim regionalization of training, fire prevention programs and emergency communication services. McCarthy called the cooperative ventures "a bastardization of . . . regionalization" and accused the committee of being a "reverse Robin Hood."

"[It] is stealing from the poor and giving to the rich," McCarthy claimed. He charged taxpayers in Cohasset would be subsidizing residents in Scituate if the shared response approach is put into effect.

"That's just nonsense," Hingham's executive secretary Charles Cristello said. "Their notion is misguided and ill-informed."

Hotly contested seats highlight town election

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Last year a wedding party and a few joggers provided the only surge in voting during what was a very long town election day for registrars in Cohasset.

But this year, the turnout is expected to be fairly heavy all day as six races highlight the ballot.

Incumbents are being challenged for in races for selectman, planning board, health board, and housing authority. Four are vying for two open seats on the school committee and two are competing for an open seat on the water commission.

A year ago a three-way race for two seats on the board of library trustees was the only election contest.

No one is predicting who will win Saturday — but town clerk Marion Douglas wagered a 'guesstimate' that "at least" 50 percent of the town's 4,593 registered voters will make a trip to the polls.

The polls are open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., Saturday

Advisors dig short tunnel alternative

By Tom Henshaw
Mariner staff

Restoration of commuter service on the Old Colony Railroad's Greenbush line achieved a breakthrough last week when the Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) agreed to a "short tunnel" under downtown Hingham.

But, warned Terry Fancher, general manager of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, the move is only a recommendation by the Greenbush sub-committee of the CAC and there is no guarantee that the MBTA will accept it.

Resistance from Hingham Square, where at least five grade crossings would be needed through the center of town and the historic district, has proved to be a major stumbling block to the restoration of commuter rail from Scituate to Boston.

The CAC recognized that surface grade crossings would create "significant impacts" in the Square that "call for mitigation."

"Although adverse impacts of an at-grade Hingham Square alternative could be partially mitigated, an adequate mitigation would be the construction of a short tunnel," said the CAC.

"Cost estimates show that the short tunnel option would increase costs of construction. Yet the cost of restoration of commuter rail service at-grade may have been understated in light of the

New sports field, track take off at town meeting

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The troops turned out in force Monday to support construction of a new sports field and all-weather track at the high school.

The high school auditorium was filled to overflowing when with vote of 326-to-5, the vast majority of those in attendance gave a resounding yes for the town to borrow $750,000 to pay for designing and constructing a new field on land adjacent to Milliken Field and for making repairs to Milliken field.

The vote is contingent of the success of a debt-exclusion override at a special town election May 21. The override is necessary because the price tag of the project cannot be absorbed within the constraints of Prop. 2-1/2, the state law that caps the annual tax levy for municipalities at 2-1/2 percent.

Raimund G. Vanderweil, Jr. showed slides comparing Cohasset's dilapidated track with new state-of-the-art all-weather high school tracks in Hingham, Scituate, and Norwell. The visual comparison drew muffled laughs from the crowd.

"Our outdoor sports facilities are greatly outmoded, substandard and below the level of neighboring towns," Vanderweil told the supportive audience.

Vanderweil stressed that the new fields "are not just for kids."

"We expect everyone will take advantage of the athletic fields," he said.

The new field will be built where the tennis courts and parking area currently are beside the high school. This location will make bathroom facilities in the high school for sports events easily accessible, Vanderweil said.

Encircled by an all-weather track, the new lighted field will be used for soccer, field hockey, lacrosse, and football as well as track meets. Currently Cohasset track teams cannot host home meets because of the Road-race field of 550 chases Chasen

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

It took Weymouth's Bob Chasen a minute or so to remember the last time he won Cohasset's Roadrace By-the-Sea 10K event.

As he stood in the Community Center with the throng of runners, Chasen finally said he and another runner topped the rest of the field in the 1990 race.

But that hardly mattered four years later. Chasen has never been one to dwell on races, whether good or bad. He simply runs them and looks forward to the next time he can get on the roads and pound out a strong effort.

"If you ask me why (he couldn't remember) it's because I'm not very obsessive about my times," said Chasen, who has been a model of consistency in the Cohasset race with 14 consecutive top-five finishes.

Chasen didn't have to worry about a tie or any other company at the end of Sunday's event. He took the lead at the three-quarter-mile mark as he made his way past Kimball's By the Sea and secured first-place with a strong surge at the two-mile mark. The result was a

Rabies clinic April 16

A rabies clinic for cats and dogs will be held Saturday, April 16, from 1 to 3 p.m. in the Cohasset Town Hall auditorium.

Dogs must be leashed and cats caged.

Inoculation session for dogs only will be from 1 to 2 p.m. and, for cats from 2 to 3 p.m. Fee is $8 cash per animal. No checks or charges will be accepted. Arrangements were made by the Cohasset Board of Health with Dr. Charles Waters, veterinarian of the Hingham Animal Clinic.

Education grant awarded

State Sen. Brian J. McDonald (D-Weymouth) said the Town of Cohasset has been awarded $48,766 in grant funds for the 1993-1994 school year to implement comprehensive pre-K to 12 health education and health and human service programs with a focus on tobacco prevention education.

"Studies have shown that among all people who smoke, 70 percent began by the age of 17. The vast majority of high school seniors who smoke regularly will go on to smoke as adults. This grant will help ensure that our students are healthy and smoke-free," McDonald said. "I am pleased to see the Commonwealth living up to its commitment to protecting the health of our children."

The grant is funded by the voter approved increase in the tobacco tax and is distributed by the state Department of Education. Altogether over $30 million in health education grants have flowed to Commonwealth schools this fiscal year.

'Spring forward, fall back,' Sunday

Early risers lose an hour of daylight this weekend while the 9-to-5 set will be able to drive home from work in the daylight.

The clocks go from 1:59 a.m. forward to 3 a.m. Sunday morning as the state moves from the winter's Standard Time to the summer's Daylight Savings Time.

Remember, set the clock ahead one hour when you go to bed Saturday night and avoid the embarrassment of finding yourself in church an hour late on Sunday morning.

Permits at town hall

Permits for the Cedar Street Recycling Transfer Facility (RTF) are no longer sold at the facility.

All Cohasset residents must have a valid 1994 RTF permit for recycling or trash disposal. The annual fee is $65 per household. A family may purchase two permits at that rate for two vehicles registered at the same address if both registrations are presented at the same time. Purchase of a second permit at a different time is an additional $25. Residents who live alone will be charged $33. Permits are sold only at the board of health office at the town hall.

No vehicles will be allowed into the facility without a permit attached to the vehicle being used.

Contested seats highlight election

(April 2) at Town Hall. Douglas expects to have results tallied by about 7 p.m.

Long-time selectman Rocco F. Laugelle, who is seeking reelection to what would be his sixth term, is being challenged by Peter J. Pratt, a former water commissioner. Both men, born and raised in town, come from large, extended Cohasset families.

Local businessman Robert V. Davenport who was initially appointed to fill a vacant seat on the board of health two years ago and was elected to fill the balance of the unexpired term last year, faces Alix P. White, a painter and organic farmer, who is past president of S.A.F.E., a grass-roots group against expansion of the Cohasset Heights Landfill.

Three relative newcomers to town elections and a fourth who's thrown his hat into the ring before vie for two open seats on the school committee. Boston public school teacher Owen O'Malley, who feels he is representing Cohasseters who are not parents, has run for the school committee before. JoAnne Chittick, artist, editor and homemaker, is also running along with Dan Evans, an attorney, and Jim Kirk, a former teacher turned business executive.

An open seat on the water commission attracted two candidates, Mark Bell, who says he'll use his analytical skills to identify and solve problems, and Fred Koed, who says his budgetary experience and public service to the town are pluses.

In addition, Mary N. Grassie, a senior citizen, will challenge incumbent Joanne Young-Nawn for a seat on the Housing Authority. Nawn, who is seeking her second term, is director of support services, Quincy Housing Authority.

Running unopposed are: Michael C. Patrolia, who is seeking reelection to the board of assessors; June S. Hubbard who is running to fill an unexpired term on the Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library; Raimond G. Vanderweil, Jr., is a candidate for reelection to the sewer commission; and Shelanne S. Durkin is seeking reelection to the recreation commission.

Government Island driveway, seawall repairs okayed

√ Town meeting voters opted to spend $9,900 from this fiscal year's budget to extend the common-use driveway leading from the rear of the Lightkeepers House on Government Island to the Edwin Young Parking Lot and to provide conduits, wires and fixtures to light the driveway.

Advisory Committee Member Michael T. Putziger said the driveway improvements would greatly be an "enhancement to the town" enabling the driveway to be used by town residents.

Joseph McElroy, who is president of the Lightkeepers' Corporation a non-profit group dedicated to renovating the Lightkeepers' House, said the one-way traffic pattern resulting from the improvements would create a safer situation.

√ Voted to transfer $1,800 from the account designated "Reserve for Appropriation for Wetlands Protection" so the Conservation Commission can access the money for items and activities such as purchasing a computer desk and publishing a brochure detailing what the commission does. Acting on this at the special town meeting allows the commission to use the funds before July 1.

(See page 5)

During town meeting, Water Commissioner Ronald Goodwin asks for residents' support during the water department's "transition period" as it investigates the possibility of going for full contract services to run the department.

PAID FOR BY THE COMMITTEE TO ELECT DAN EVANS

Repairs okayed . . .

√ The town can use $10,000 from a prior year appropriation to repair walkways and seawalls by the Chart House and in Cohasset Harbor.

√ Voters authorized $4,100 in overtime expenses for the water department. Water Commission Chairman Ronald Goodwin explained that more overtime was needed because of the dry summer. Advisory committee member Kenneth Ingber said the "small internal transfer" was supported by advisors.

√ The police department can use $16,000 in surplus revenue to pay for overtime incurred this fiscal year. Police chief Brian W. Noonan explained the overtime was needed to pay overtime for shifts covered while the department was not at full force. Noonan explained that the department paid $21,000 in salaries for two new recruits while they attended the police academy. He noted that in the past police candidates were hired from the rehire list and had already attended the academy. No candidates applied from the rehire list for the two police openings.

√ The town will spend about $100,000 in surplus revenue to cover the snow removal line-item deficit and therefore the debt will not be transferred to Fiscal Year 1995 which begins July 1.

√ Voters authorized a 10 percent increase in quarterly water rates so the water department will not run at a deficit and to enable the department to begin a comprehensive re-metering program. Water commissioner Ronald Goodwin asked for voters support during the department's "transition period." The water department recently contracted with a contract services company to cover the superintendent's position and may opt to go to full contract services.

Election Day

Voting hours are 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, April 2 at the town hall auditorium.

Public works garage goes back to square one

Two years of hard work went down the drain Monday when a motion to reconsider a vote on the proposed new DPW garage was never raised.

The article asking for authorization to borrow $475,000 for the new garage to be built in the gravel pit off North Main Street failed to win the required 2/3 majority at town meeting by a single vote Saturday.

At the close of Saturday's session; Public Works Garage Study Committee members said they would move to have the matter reconsidered at the continuation of town meeting.

Debate over the garage went on for the better part of an hour Saturday. The project had the backing of the selectmen and advisory committee with the board of health opposed to the proposed location because of its proximity to a town well and the capital budget committee recommending deferment until further study.

But Monday the project was put on hold indefinitely when it was revealed that the entire gravel pit area rests in a water resources district protected from the siting of structures like garages by a town by-law.

Town Counsel Richard A. Henderson said while it's not illegal to put a garage there, a variance seeking zoning relief would be necessary. He said if the variance is appealed the garage could be held up for years while a decision is made.

According the Henderson, there are two town maps depicting water protection districts. The flood plain map does not show the gravel pit in a water resources district — but another map incorporated in the by-law does.

Chairman Terry Atherton declined to say which town official brought the matter to his attention.

While he agreed with the new findings, he felt let down.

"I'm discouraged," he said.

Atherton explained the garage committee had met with different town boards with expertise on environmental issues during the two years of study and this matter had not be raised.

Advisory committee members Wayne Sawchuk, Michael T. Putziger and Roger S. Whitley look at budget figures during the annual town meeting Saturday.

condition of the old high school track which was built in 1938.

The four high school tennis courts will be razed and new ones built by the two at Milliken Field. The Milliken baseball diamond will be relocated and Milliken will be revamped into practice fields.

Tree and Park Supt. Peter Laugelle, who explained current town fields are stretched to the limit, heartily endorsed the project which he sees as promoting a positive trend.

"I've seen a return of family values the past three years," he said. "If a family wants to use a field for softball or a birthday party, I sometimes have to refuse.

"I want to encourage more, it's a good trend," he said.

The advisory committee, selectmen and school committee also wholeheartedly supported the project.

Advisors dig short tunnel alternative addition mitigation that may be necessary in the at-grade alternative.

"The CAC would like to see the MBTA revise the estimated cost figures for the at-grade commuter rail alternative to better reflect the mitigation that would be required for the at-grade alternative.

"Concurrently, we urged the MBTA to look closely at ways to reduce the cost of (the short tunnel) alternative.

"We think the elimination of the otherwise necessary at-grade mitigation measures should further reduce the differential between the cost of the tunnel in relation to the cost of the at-grade alternative,"

The recommended tunnel, the cheapest of four proposed, would start at the intersection of Fort Hill and West Streets near the Weymouth line, run a mile under the downtown and emerge at Water Street. It would eliminate five grade crossings.

It would be what is known as a "cut and cover" tunnel, one that is excavated from the surface and covered up after the tracks are laid. It would cost less than one that is tunneled out rather than dug.

Fancher said the short tunnel would be more feasible if the cost could be trimmed from the $92 million estimated by the MBTA to a more manageable $60 million with 80 per cent funding from the federal government.

He noted that the CAC, which advises on all three proposed Old Colony line restorations, approved the $38 million taking of land and nine homes in Kingston for a parking lot on the Plymouth line.

Sen. Brian McDonald said the cost of the tunnel also "would be less than the cost of at-grade crossings if Hingham decided to litigate to matter."

"Our biggest concern is time," said Fancher. "We don't want to waste any. If we wait too long the constituency will change and they will want to reopen the matter. This is going on now in Middleboro and Lakeville."

The CAC has a meeting scheduled for tonight (Wednesday) in Braintree Town Hall to sign the compromise agreement. It still has to be endorsed by the full CAC and the State Department of Environmental Affairs.

"Then comes the real sell comes to the various constituencies, the Boards of Selectmen, the business organizations and such," said Fancher.

"This has to take place between now and mid-May so we can see some public comment between mid-May and June.

around town

by Sallyann Chatterton

Let's give a rounding cheer for Jenna Reece, the brand new baby girl of Linda Sheppard-Reece and Dad Ronald!

Jenna was born March 1 at 6:12 p.m. at South Shore Hospital and weighed in at 7 lbs. 3 1/2 ozs.!

Jenna's sister Reneé is certainly happy. She has two brothers, Steven and Joshua, so when the "battles" begin, it will be two against two.

Jenna's maternal grandparents, Paul and Pauline Sheppard, are delighted, as is Pricilla Reece, her paternal grandmother. If spring ever comes, we will undoubtedly see Jenna "around town." We cannot wait! In fact, it will probably be Aunt Amy wheeling the carriage, she is super too!

We received news from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst this week, and Charlotte N. Begley of 455 Beechwood Street and Erin C. McCallister of 60 Aaron River Road are the reason. They were both named to the University's Dean's List for the fall semester. Wonderful job, everyone applauds you two!

Be sure to check this week's edition of the Mariner, Athletic Director Clark Chatterton has enclosed a sports schedule for the spring semester — with so many super athletes at CHS, it promises to be great! And do be sure to support our teams — it means so much to them and you will have a great time while you cheer them on and watch them go on to victory!

Speaking of schedules, don't forget to set your clocks ahead this Sunday (Easter), April 3. Be on time to celebrate your Easter.

The youth of the Second Congregational Church had a stupendous trip recently, they went on a ski trip to Waterville Valley. They stayed in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Steele and had a great time. Chaperones Kate Caldwell, Heidi Maitland, Wayne Sawchuk, and Mark VanHartesvelt must have had their hands full with the crowd that went, but from all reports all went well!! And, what a weekend to ski!! Especially if you didn't have to shovel it, just enjoy it!

We have to mention Ruth Silvia again, and here's hoping that she is still on the road to recovery and will be home very soon.

Ruth is at the Deaconess Hospital, but by the time the good weather comes, we are sure she will be home!!

Attention all of you wrestlers (or want-to-be), our very own Torin Sweeney, who has been the varsity coach at Cohasset High for 11 years, is running a wrestling camp at CHS from July 5 to 8. The reason we want to mention it now is that you can plan your vacation around it! The staff that Torin has organized is incredible, and his philosophy is an admirable one — "to ensure wrestling is a positive experience for each camper". You will get a trainer on site, weight-lifting clinic, free tee-shirt, weight management clinic and a free style clinic. The hours are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., call Torin at 383-2213 for more details. Knowing him, it will be a great experience.

Winter did an awful job on our roads, the pot holes are THERE! More importantly, the gravel at the Joseph Osgood school has sort of disappeared! It sure is hard for the kiddos to play without being careful, let's find a way to "fill it up"! They all love it so, and with spring here it needs to be perfect for them.

April 8 is the CHS Class of '94 Annual Senior Show. Seniors will entertain the whole family with a hilarious multi-talented variety show, within a framework written by Director Ron Emmons.

Sharon Weber is the choregrapher, and rumor has it that she is teaching football players how to dance! They guarantee a good time, so be there at 8 p.m.

Hey, don't forget that this is the weekend to vote! Your town needs you to show an interest, as do your candidates, they work hard to make everything work! No excuses, just VOTE!!

We are so proud of the Cohasset Varsity Gymnastics Team, who placed first along with Scituate High in the South Shore League Pilgrim Conference II.

Their coach, Ruthann Ardizzoni, is of the firm belief that all of the girls' hard work is what made it happen, and they also have more good news to share — Erica Hettstrom, Jodi Colwill, and Megan Pratt were all named to the South Shore League All Star Team. Their teammates Tafana Fiore, Tara Hettstrom and Lauren Genovese were awarded medals at the South Shore All League Meet.

You are all wonderful!!

That's the news for this week, keep me informed as to what's going on with you and yours!!

CONFIDENCE

The Grand Tour — with Ginger Ferenz, 383-2863

At the entrance to Windy Hill Road stand two lampposts with copper lanterns that were fully restored to working order a few years ago. The residents of Windy Hill contribute to the maintenance and lighting of these lovely gas lanterns. Special thanks go to Alex Fulton, Tom Burke and John McQueen, for it is through their vigilant efforts that our lanterns remain cleaned and lit throughout the year. At times the ocean "breezes" seem to blow the flame out as soon as they have been re-lit, but we do appreciate how beautifully they light our way in the evening hours. I have dressed the lampposts with a spray of fluffy pussy willows with right leaf-green ribbons.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

WHAT GOES WITH HOUSE?

QUESTION: What stays with the property and what goes when you sell a house?

ANSWER: Real Estate is usually defined as the land and everything attached to it, such as: buildings, trees, shrubs, etc. The buyer normally gets all the real estate, but none of the owner's personal property. The problem arises when personal property has become a part of the real estate. This is called a FIXTURE and DOES pass with the real estate. Usual fixtures might include: shades, heaters, ranges, screens, storm windows, lighting fixtures, etc. It is important that the seller spell out in the sales agreement what he intends to give to the buyer as part of real estate.

One vote can change history

Saturday, April 2 is the date for the annual town election in Cohasset. This election features more races than those in recent years.

Two seats on the school committee are up for grabs. Incumbents on the board of selectmen, health board, planning board and housing authority face challenges. And two are vying for an open seat on the water commission.

The town clerk is predicting "at least" 50 percent of the town's 4,593 registered voters will make a trip to the polls Saturday. This is a good news/bad news situation for Cohasset.

The good news? This would be an improvement over last year's nominal 10 percent turn out. The bad news is that still nearly half the town's voters will stay home.

More than ever, the town needs leaders who possess intelligence, foresight, courage, dedication and compassion.

You might think that your single vote doesn't count, so you don't need to participate in Saturday's election. If you feel this way, you're wrong.

No too long ago in Braintree, an intense 11-man race for tax collector wound up in a dead heat and required a recount and a court decision.

If you're still not convinced, just look at Cohasset. Exactly a decade ago, a selectman's race was determined by one vote.

In Norwell during the late 1980's, a single vote also separated two candidates for the water board.

A planning board race was decided in Holbrook by one vote four years ago.

Always keep in mind that the "one-vote phenomenon" has determined national as well as state races in the course of history.

John F. Kennedy won the Presidency in 1960 by just one vote per precinct in Illinois.

Just one voter in each precinct could have changed the outcome by voting for Richard Nixon, thus moving the state's 26 electoral votes into the Republican column.

In the 1839 contest for governor of Massachusetts, Marcos Manton was elected by a single vote out of 102,066 ballots which were cast.

The U.S. Senate failed to convict President Andrew Johnson after Abraham Lincoln's successor was impeached in 1868. The margin of Johnson's acquittal was just one vote.

One vote decided the 1800 race for President between Aaron Burr and Thomas Jefferson in Jefferson's favor.

You see, one vote can change history, and one vote can change the direction of our town.

Vote Saturday. Please.

Election procedures for Cohasset school councils

School councils, mandated by the Education Reform Act, consist of the building principal, teachers, parents, and a community representative. Responsibility for overseeing the election of parent members to the councils was given to the "locally recognized parent organization."

The PSO nominating committee will oversee the election of parents to each school council. The committee consists of three members of the Executive Board and the PSO Vice President and three at-large members representing each school.

School council nominations for 1994 are open April 4 to 16; school council election period for 1994 is May 2 to 6. Notices asking for interested persons to submit their names will be posted in schools, publicized in newspapers, and sent home with school communications.

Every parent who has a student at the given school for the length of the school council term is eligible to run. Each candidate will be asked to write a paragraph about themselves which will be mailed with the voting ballot prior to election week.

Voting ballots will be mailed to parents the week of April 25 to 29 along with the information sheet on the candidates. Write-in votes will be accepted.

School council openings 1994: Osgood — 2 two-year positions; Deer Hill — 2 two-year positions; jr./sr. high — 2 two-year positions.

If you have any questions about either the school councils or the election, please call Ruth Wilcox at 383-1827 or Maureen Jerz at 383-6592.

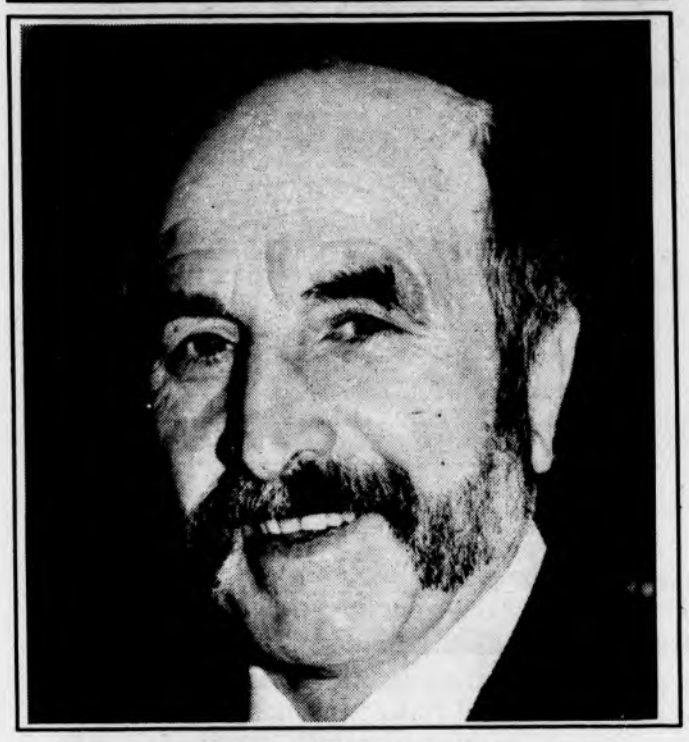
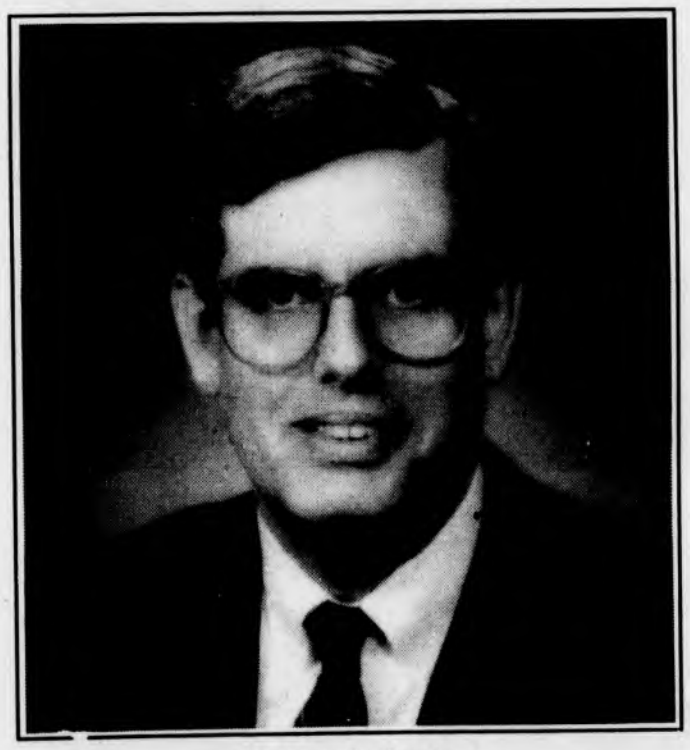
Selectman
(vote for one)



Rocco F. Laugelle

Name: Rocco F. Laugelle
Candidate for reelection to the board of selectmen.
Address: 18 Norfolk Rd.
Age: 65
Education: Cohasset High School.
Occupation: Line foreman, Eastern Edison.
Community service/elected offices held: Selectman, 15 years; Norfolk County Advisory Board, 13 years; former water and sewer commissioner, former member Government Island Study Committee, former member board of directors Cohasset Community Center and Cohasset Sailing Club, past commander George H.. Mealy Post #118, American Legion; veteran, United States Marine Corps, World War II.
Family: Four children.
Years in Cohasset: 65

Why should people vote for you: My experience is a valuable asset. During my service to the town I've been involved in the building of the sewer treatment plant, water treatment plant and resevoir and as a member of the board of selectmen, I've been deeply involved with issues relating to Cohasset Heights Landfill. I want to see our water supply protected. If reelected, my sixth term will be my last and in that term I'd like to help see that the new athletic field at the high school is built and work toward seeing that a new DPW garage goes through.

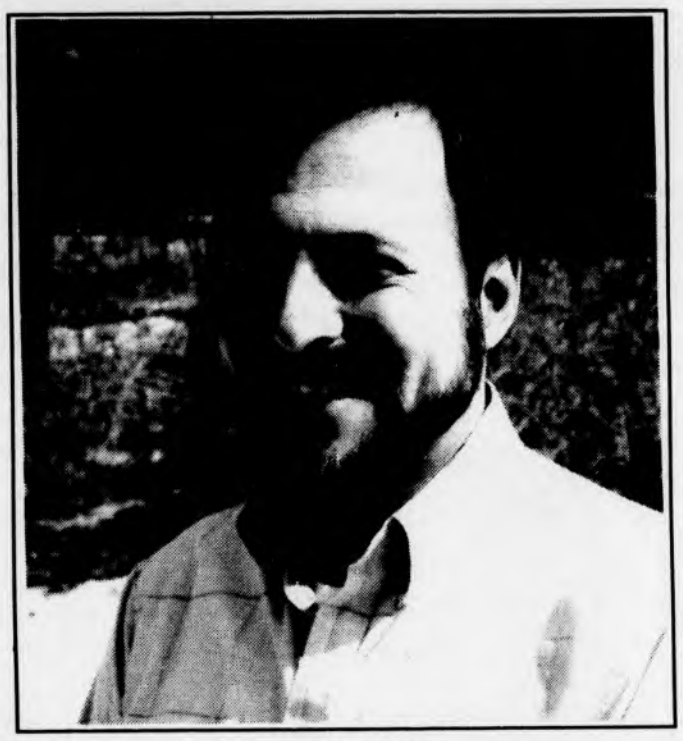


Peter J. Pratt

Name: Peter J. Pratt
Candidate for selectman.
Address: 75 Ripley Rd.
Age: 38
Education: Cohasset High School, B.A. Bard College.
Community service/elected offices held: Former member of the board of water commissioners.
Family: Married, first child due in May.
Years in Cohasset: "28 of my 38 years."

Why should people vote for you: I advocate substantial change in the process of town government and because we have to constantly move forward to make local government more professional.

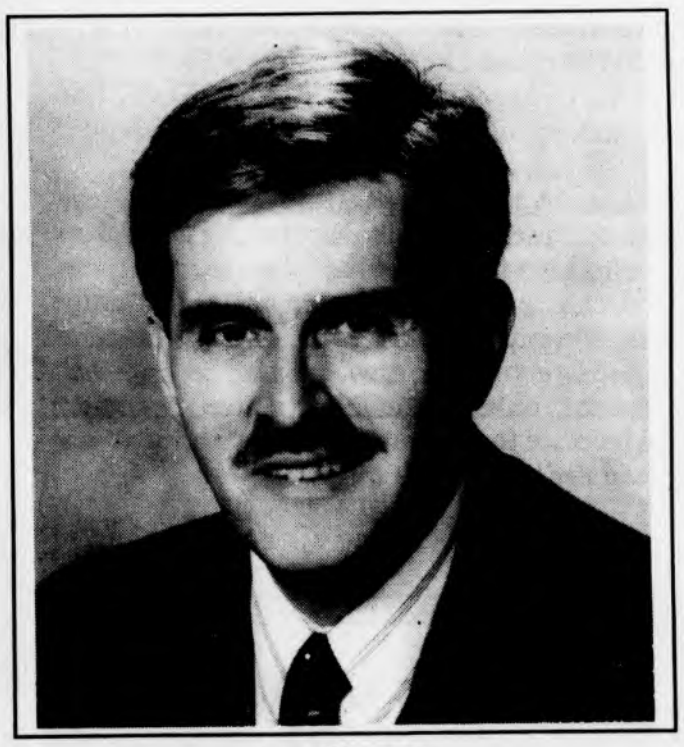
Water Commission
(vote for one)



Mark Bell

Name: Mark Bell
Candidate for water commission.
Address: 460 King St.
Age: 39
Education: B.S., Emerson College.
Community service/elected offices held: Chairman, Title 5 Transition Study Committee; contributed heavily to construction of the playground facility at the Community Center of Cohasset Nursery School.
Occupation: Senior audio/visual engineer, technical operations, Boston University.
Family: Married, two children.
Years in Cohasset: 10.

Why should people vote for you? The department needs someone analytical who can see when problems exist, analyze solutions and implement what it takes to correct the problem. This is something I've been doing at very high levels for 20-plus years.



Fred Koed

Name: Fred Koed
Candidate for the water commission.
Address: 92 Pleasant St.
Age: 42
Education: Cohasset High School, University of Massachusetts.
Occupation: Computer network administration.
Community service/elected offices held: Former member Cohasset Advisory Committee and Cohasset Housing Authority, tenant selection committee, Habitat for Humanity.
Family: Married, two children.
Years in Cohasset: 33

Why should people vote for you: I have strong budgetary skills and have ten years of public service to the town.

Health Board
(vote for one)

Robert V. Davenport

Name: Robert V. Davenport
Candidate for reelection to the board of health.
Address: 135 Sohier St.
Age: 51
Education: Cohasset High School.
Occupation: Owner, Elena Sestito Florist, Cohasset Greenhouses, Inc.
Community service/elected offices held: Board of health, two years; Cemetery study committee, fire/police station study committee, volunteered time to televise selectmen's meetings.
Family: Married, two children.
Years in Cohasset: 51

Why should people vote for you: Although Cohasset Heights Landfill is a large issue which I'm very concerned about, it's not the only issue out there. If reelected, I would continue to work on trying to improve the RTF making the rules fair to everyone; work on Title V changes (cesspool); and see that the capping of the landfill gets done.

Health Board
(vote for one)

Alix P. White

Name: Alix P. White
Candidate for the board of health.
Address: 224 Jerusalem Rd.
Age: 40
Education: Bachelor of Fine Arts, California College of Arts and Crafts.
Community service/elected offices held: Cohasset recycling committee, six years; mosquito control committee; South Shore Regional Disposal Planning Board; former president of S.A.F.E. (Stop Any Further Expansion); wrote recycling column for local paper; serve in the vestry, altar guild, and teach Sunday school at St. Stephen's; and volunteer in Cohasset schools specifically for the Great Books and Artist of the Month programs.
Occupation: Farmer and painter.
Family: Married, 3 children.
Years in Cohasset: 10

Why should people vote for you? I get things done. Also, I can bring a lot of background to the board of health; I have served in many capacities through recycling, S.A.F.E., and my organic farming. I would consider my election as an unpaid promotion, a step up from what I've already been doing.

School Committee
(vote for two)

JoAnne Chittick

Name: JoAnne Chittick
Candidate for school committee.
Address: 98 S. Main St.
Age: 49
Education: Smith College, B.A.
Occupation: Freelance editor, watercolor painter, and homemaker.
Community service/elected offices held: Volunteer at schools, 15 years: PSO board; PSO representative Osgood, Deer Hill and Junior High; classroom volunteer; PSO volunteer talent pool; high school career lecture series; senior class parent committee; high school community service program; arts enrichment program at Deer Hill and Osgood; high school arts boosters; METCO committee, host family 7 years; Great Books and Artist of the Month program.
Family: Married, 3 children.
Years in Cohasset: 23.

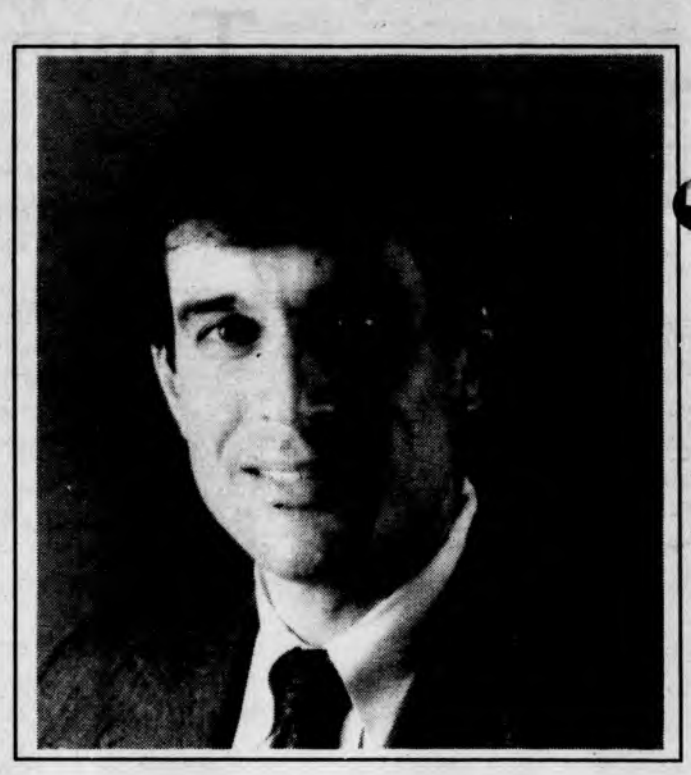
Why should people vote for you: I have an inside view of schools with 15 years experience working with teachers, programs and administration. I understand the school system and care about public education and giving all children in Cohasset an excellent education. As a member of the school committee, I would provide balance as a parent with experience in publishing and curriculum issues and teaching methods that work.

Dan Evans

Name: Dan Evans
Candidate for school committee.
Address: 94 Black Horse Lane.
Age: 34
Education: Dartmouth College, Harvard Law School.
Community service/elected offices held: Fund-raising for the United Way; fund-raising for Harvard and Dartmouth alumni funds; involved in American Bar Association committees.
Occupation: Business lawyer, Ropes & Gray.
Family: Married, three children.
Years in Cohasset: Grew up in Cohasset; has been back in town two years.

Why should people vote for you: I have the judgement and experience that can be helpful on the school committee which oversees a great deal. I can use my analytical and negotiating skills. In my profession I spend half my time negotiating contracts. Also, my generation is not represented on the school committee, I can add some balance to the committee partly due to my age and the age of my children.

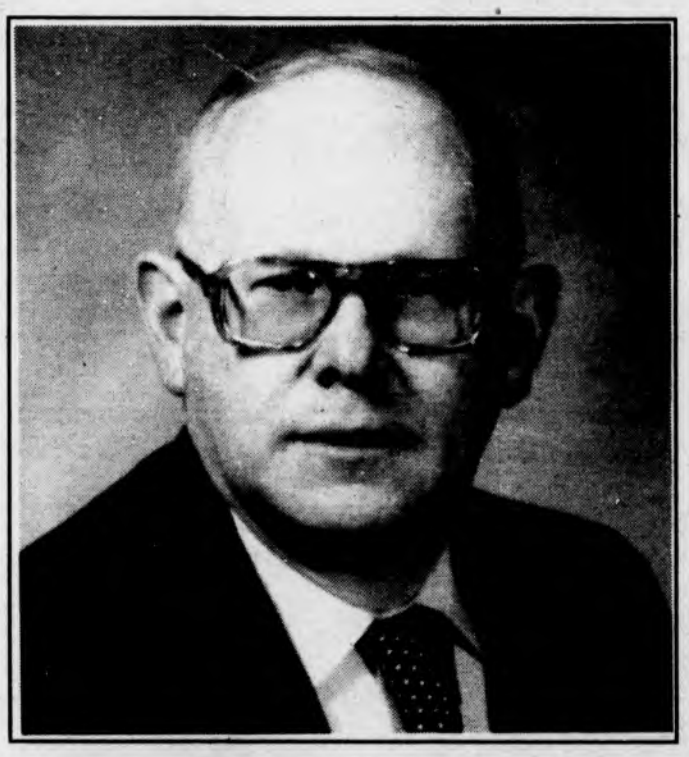
Voting hours are 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, April 2 at the town hall auditorium.



Jim Kirk

Name: Jim Kirk
Candidate for school committee.
Address: 254 S. Main St.
Age: 43
Education: Harvard B.A., Stanford M.A.
Occupation: Vice president of marketing and sales, Eidetics, Inc.
Community service/elected offices held: Chairman, regional school study committee, actively involved in the PSO and the Cohasset Education Foundation; volunteer weekly at the Pine Street Inn in the medical clinic; former finance committee chairman Second Congregational Church; Boston participation chairman for Harvard fundraising (alumni giving).
Family: Married, three daughters.
Years in Cohasset: 14.

Why should people vote for you: I have a combination of experience that is particularly relevant to the school committee. As a public high school teacher for five years in science and with 20 years of business management experience in planning and policy setting as well as budget management, I can bring a dual perspective. Also, my two older daughters went all the way through Cohasset Schools and with my youngest daughter just starting, I have a vested interest in staying involved.



Owen O'Malley

Name: Owen O'Malley
Candidate for school committee.
Address: 29 Sohier St.
Age: 56
Education: B.C. High; bachelor of arts, Boston College; masters, Boston College; law degree, New England School of Law, member of Massachusetts Bar.
Community service/elected offices held: Volunteer at St. Anthony's.

School Committee
(vote for two)

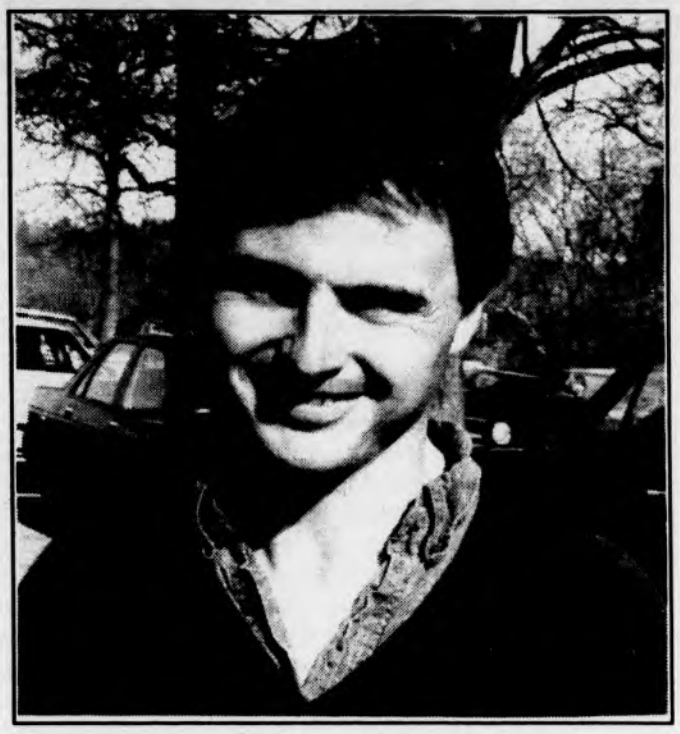
Occupation: Teacher, Boston Latin High School and lawyer.
Family: Single
Years in Cohasset: 56

Why should people vote for you? I would provide balance on the school committee. There are all parents on there now. I would represent the 1/2 of the town without children — the people who are paying taxes and don't get represented.

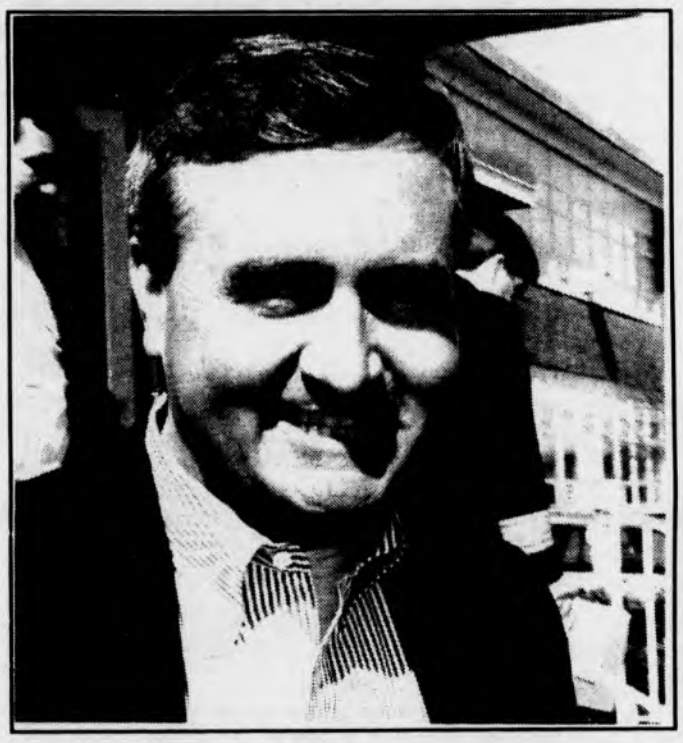


Dean Rizzo

Name: Dean Rizzo
Candidate for the planning board.
Address: 56 Spring St.
Age: 30
Education: B.S., UMass Boston.
Occupation: Owner, Aquarius Sunrooms, Inc.
Community service/elected offices held: Served on Arlington recycling committee.
Family: Married, no children.
Years in Cohasset: 1-1/2.

Why should people vote for you: I hope to bring new ideas to the planning board and help make the board a more active one that initiates concepts. My experience in business and dealings with building departments and planning boards is an asset. I think it's important to have compassion and understanding and be fair when decisions are made. I hope to bring that attitude to the board.

Planning Board
(vote for one)



Bill Good

Name: Bill Good
Candidate for reelection to the planning board.
Address: 269 Atlantic Ave.
Age: 44
Education: Boston Latin; B.A. Saint Anselm College.
Occupation: Sales and marketing executive in home health care industry.
Community service/elected offices held: Planning board, 5 years; former member personnel committee; involved in neighborhood, school and sports activities.
Family: Married, three children.
Years in Cohasset: 18.

Why should people vote for you: I have experience on the planning board and feel I have an understanding of the zoning by-law which I feel takes a few years to gain an appreciation of. I also have a perspective resulting from living in three different areas of town during the past 18 years.

Voting hours are 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, April 2 at the town hall auditorium.

Paul Barry proposes plan to improve drainage at CHL

By Sean Sweeney
Mariner correspondent

The owner of Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL) met with the board of health Tuesday (March 29) to discuss proposed drainage improvements at the landfill off Rte. 3A.

Paul Barry made numerous references to the "cloud of doubt" that exists among town boards and citizens regarding the affect of the landfill on Lily Pond and emphasized his commitment to eliminating the doubts.

Barry was accompanied by a representative of SAIC, an engineering firm hired by the landfill, as he discussed a plan to divert the current flow of water discharge from the landfill away from Lily Pond, the town's drinking water source, and towards another more northerly wetland.

"We want to talk openly with the various committees in town and identify people's concerns," Barry said. "We want to know if the various town boards feel that this is a good plan."

Barry urged the board to seek the involvement of its engineering firm, Camp, Dresser & McKee, to oversee the new plan.

"My personal feeling is that this cloud of doubt about the flow of surface water is always going to remain. I want CDM involved," he said.

Health Board Chairman William Baird assured Barry that Camp, Dresser & McKee would be utilized by the board to monitor and inspect the improvements.

"CDM will inspect this but I do not want them to be a participant in this plan," Baird said, clarifying the town's position as a regulator and not as a participant.

The specific plan calls for the removal of the existing outflow, the restoration of the existing swale which flows in the direction of Lily Pond and the construction of a new outflow diverting discharge away from Lily Pond. According to SAIC, the plan calls for the reduction in the velocity of the flow from the landfill before hitting the wetlands. The structure will be supplemented with hay bales and siltation fences.

The individual members of the board gave their conditional and preliminary approval.

"Generally, I think this is a good idea. We will send a copy to CDM for review and we will report back on their findings," Baird said.

While the proposed plan is a step in the right direction toward alleviating one of the town's concerns regarding the private landfill, there still exist a number of other problems at the site. In fact, in March, Barry received letters from both the board of health and conservation commission outlining a number of problem areas.

On March 17, the conservation commission notified CHL that it was in violation of certain terms of an Order of Conditions issued by the Conservation Commission on July 30, 1992. According to the notice, at the time of the issuance of the Order of Conditions, the landfill's position was that the mitigation measures proposed by it would control runoff, erosion and siltation on the site so as to protect wetland resources. Following a recent inspection and a review of the findings of an independent consultant, the conservation commission determined that siltation control measures have failed, that sedimentation, erosion and runoff have adversely impacted wetlands vegetation and that groundwater and water quality impacts are evident.

The conservation commission has instructed CHL to appear before the commission on April 26 to discuss these problems and to propose short-term and long-term measures to remedy these violations. Depending upon the measures undertaken to correct the problems, CHL may be required to seek board of health approval as well.

In a press release issued last week, S.A.F.E. members commended the conservation commission for issuing a noncompliance notice to the landfill.

"It is encouraging to see a town board take affirmative action to deal with the threat posed by Cohasset Heights Landfill," John K. McNabb, Jr. of S.A.F.E. said.

McNabb also pointed out that a recent test performed by S.A.F.E. member Jim Kinch, a certified engineer, revealed the presence of certain volatile organic compounds in the wetlands that comprise the watershed for Lily Pond.

The health board also issued a letter to Barry earlier this month outlining its concerns over test results from the site for the last quarter. According to Baird, the last quarter's test results of surface water revealed contaminants. In response to these results, the board wrote a letter to CHL requesting that monthly monitoring be performed and that results be furnished to the board by the 20th of each month. In addition, the board requested that CHL provide some assurances that there is enough material on the site to cap the existing landfill.

Barry provided test results for March at Tuesday's meeting and said there is more that enough material at the site to accomplish capping. The health board said it will continue to receive and monitor test results for an indefinite period.

Town meeting voters were in a spending mood

√ Voters took about ten minutes to okay' a fiscal year 1995 operating budget of $15,115,093 which Advisory Committee Chairman Nan Roth said is a 3.4 percent increase of last year's. The amount includes the increase in water revenue with the 10 percent increase in water rates voted at the special town meeting moments earlier.

"(With this budget) services will continue at their present level for the most part," Roth said.

√ Town meeting voted to amend the town's Personnel Classification By-Law Schedule bring non-union town employees' salaries in line with their union counterparts; voted to increase the pay of elected full-time officials at a cost of $3,925.

√ Appropriated $102,533 which is the town's share of state funds and is reimbursed 100 percent from the state to resurface town roads.

√ Voted to spend $23,000 to purchase and equip a new four-wheel drive heavy duty cab and chassis with a new dump body for the highway department and to authorize the "trade-in" of a 1987 Chevrolet C-30 truck with dump body currently used. Highway Supt. Harold Litchfield said this truck is used to plow and sand private ways that are too narrow for bigger plows and to do road resurfacing in the summer months. Voters also decided to pend $15,000 for purchase and equip a new heavy duty-four-wheel drive pick-up truck for the Highway department and authorize a "trade-in" of a 1985 model. This truck is used by the highway superintended to oversee jobs and to patch roads in the winter months.

"I can see the street through the floor boards (in the current truck)," Litchfield said.

√ Town meeting amended a town by-law adding "snow or ice" to Article VII of the General By-Laws, Safety and Public Order so it reads: "No person shall cause or allow the discharge of water, snow or ice upon a public street, sidewalk, or way in the Town so as to create a hazardous condition."

√ Increased the maximum annual income from $20,000 to $40,000 for senior citizens 65-years of age or older to qualify for property tax deferments. Assessor Ross Rosano said that assessors feel that $20,000 is not adequate today. The town collects eight percent annual interest on the deferred taxes, he said. There are currently about eight tax deferrals.

Nancy Snowdale, 52 Mill Lane, said the while the deferrals don't add up to a lot of money to the town, they can mean a great deal to senior citizens.

√ The town will spend $14,000 to refurbish the practice field at the Milliken Field sports complex including installing an all-automatic sprinkler system. This should not be confused with the article asking for the go-ahead to construct a new field and all-weather track at the high school.

√ Voters authorized spending $18,000 to repair roofs, copper valleys and gutters, down spouts and the damaged children's room ceiling and $9,000 to repair and waterproof the exterior masonry at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

√ Spending $38,174 on a new radio communications system which will enable the Cohasset Police Department to communicate with other towns and will help set the stage for E-911 service was approved.

√ Voters okayed spending $25,000 to purchase and install an exhaust removal system for fire department apparatus. Presently, the fire department leaves the doors open for five minutes after a truck leaves and following its return to rid exhaust. This new system will "alleviate an unhealthy situation" because the harmful effects of diesel exhaust "have been well established over a number of years," Lincoln said. The new system employes a "source capture system," including attaching hose to the tail pipe. The chief added that fuel bills run as high as $1300 a month because the doors have to be left open.

√ Town meeting authorized spending $15,000 for a new generator at the police and fire headquarters. The present generator is 32 years old and a recent inspection revealed oil in the crank case.

"It's reached the end of its life span and it served us well," Fire Chief Roger W. Lincoln said.

√ The town will appropriate $15,000 to cover legal fees incurred by special town counsel for professional services relating to ongoing negotiations with the objective of evolving a wastewater treatment and disposal plan that is economically acceptable to the town and ecologically acceptable to the state, Sewer Commissioner Edward Guild said. Town meeting also approved spending $5,000 to maintain the town's waste water treatment plant or collector system and $5,200 to purchase an effluent composite sampler.

√ Voters appropriated $10,000 to conduct a Hazardous Waste Collection day in 1995. The cost of conducting the collection day could run has high as $12,500 but the health board has $3,000 left from last year's funds which can be used to cover the difference. The advisory committee said it had been persuaded to the benefits of conducting this collection day on an annual basis.

√ $120,000 will be needed to replace underground storage tanks at the town's three schools. The state requires all underground tanks be replaced with underground double-walled tanks by 1998. School committee chairman Nancy Sandell said it would save the town about $20,000 to replace all the tanks at once.

√ Residents' parking permits this year will be valid for Parker Avenue (Hagerty property) as well as Sandy Beach, Government Island, and the Edwin A. Young Parking lot at Government Island.

√ Town meeting authorized spending $45,000 to purchase of a new school bus and $35,000 to install a wheelchair lift at the Junior/Senior High School to allow increased handicapped accessibility.

√ The "Handicapped Commission" will now be called the "Commission on Disabilities" conforming to what other towns call their handicapped commissions.

√ Voters opted to set the stage for the Conservation Commission to appoint a conservation agent by amending a town by-law to give the commission that authority. Chairman Jeffrey Waal explained that the commission was not asking for money just the ability to appoint an agent and to create the personnel classification for the position. He noted that Cohasset is the only coastal town in the state that does not at least have a part-time conservation agent. Waal said with issues and projects pending such as the Area V expansion of Cohasset Heights Landfill, Star Market, Shaw's Supermarket, a private harbor project, harbor dredging and slight expansion of another shopping plaza, an agent "would certainly be helpful." Although the building inspector is currently helping out with conservation inspections but the commission, which is made up of volunteers, could use someone with more expertise in conservation matters, Waal said.

He said the position would provide the type of assistance that the health agent does to the board of health. Waal explained that while the applicant still hires an engineer to present information to the board of health, the health agent helps the health board do its job better.

Voters agreed with Waal and voted 81 to 53 in the affirmative to establish the conservation agent's position. Selectmen and advisory board members were divided on the issue.

Rodgers, Meyer highlight running clinic

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Four-time Boston and New York City Marathon winner Bill Rodgers' message was loud and clear to the members of the Hingham and Norwell High track teams: No matter how long you've been running, you can always learn a lesson.

The high school runners and field event athletes listened intently as Rodgers recalled last November's National Masters Cross Country championship at Boston's Franklin Park.

The heavy favorite heading into the race, a downpour turned the 8K course into a quagmire. Unfortunately Rodgers hadn't brought along his racing spikes to the meet and wound up slipping and sliding to a second-place finish, behind a runner he had beaten on numerous occasions.

Rodgers was just one of the well-known running personalities on hand for the John Hancock Running and Fitness Clinic, March 16 at Hingham High School. Also providing running and racing tips were 1983 Boston Marathon winner Greg Meyer, former Harvard cross country coach and last year's Cohasset Roadrace-By-the-Sea winner, Ed Sheehan and Boston Running Club founder and coach, Fred Tresler.

The event was just one of a series of running and fitness clinics sponsored by John Hancock Financial Services. John Hancock, which will put up $10 million in prize money over the next 10 years for the Boston Marathon, offers the clinic year-round throughout the country.

Road-race field of 550 chases Chasen

33:23 victory over the 550-runner field. Chasen finished exactly one minute in front of Scituate's Michael Kelleher. Wellesley's John Delaney (34:31) was eight seconds back in third.

The field was down slightly from the 675 runners who answered the starting gun in the '93 race. But race director Peter Logan said the combination of a tough winter and having to schedule the race a week earlier because of Easter, were factors in the slightly smaller turnout.

"Normally we're the first Sunday in April," said Logan. "It was a great turnout, considering the weather. The winter has been more severe and a lot of people don't have road racing on their mind."

Once clear of the pack in first place, Chasen had only to contend with maintaining his lead through the wind and raw, 40-degree temperature as he snaked his way along the tight, winding Jerusalem Road section of the course.

"The weather made it tough," Chasen said. "It seemed like five of the six miles we had the wind in our face. The only thing that could have been worse was if it had poured."

Chasen turns 40 in September and is looking forward to running cross-country as a master competitor. "I'd like to run in championship-level cross-country races," he said. "I guess this (road racing) stuff isn't grueling enough for me. I need more punishment."

Chasen praised the work of the race volunteers and the support he received along the course. "That alone makes you come back," he said. "Then it becomes a ritual for you. I open my season with it."

Women's winner Courtney DiFrancesco didn't even have all her bags unpacked after moving to Cohasset from Marblehead, just last week. DiFrancesco finished slightly less than a minute ahead of Cohasset's Joanne Cannon (39:16), a 1500-meter specialist with the Liberty Athletic Club. DiFrancesco's first-place time was 38:18, good for 21st overall.

"It's a beautiful town," said DiFrancesco, who was clutching a bouquet of flowers. "Everyone has been very friendly. There was a lot of support out there today."

DiFrancesco didn't mind the raw temperature, but did say the wind was played a factor in the slowish times recorded. "It was a little bit windy in places," she said, "but temperature-wise it was almost ideal."

She especially liked the course's most scenic section along Jerusalem Road ("It's beautiful") and definitely plans on running the race next year.

Cannon's previous best finish in her two other times running the race was a fourth. The Bridgewater State College graduate runs on the course regularly during her training and incorporates sections of the route into her long run.

Cannon was happy with her performance in her fourth race of the year. "It seems like I'm doing better," she said.

And her favorite part of the race?

"Heading towards the finish," Concannon said with a laugh.

The field of 550 runners dash out at the start of Sunday's 18th annual Cohasset Roadrace By-the-Sea 10K. Robert Chasen (3) won the race for the second time in 33:23.

Dave McKee

by Joe & Dave

It was a nice run for the Boston College basketball team.

The Eagles, paced by Duxbury center Bill Curley, ended up one game short of reaching the Final Four.

Their performance showed that Massachusetts is indeed a college basketball power.

As for Curley, he played himself into the top-15 picks in the first round of the NBA draft over the last two weeks.

He is disappointed now, but his solid play against North Carolina, Indiana and Florida should earn him a few million dollars of NBA green.

But with everyone talking about Final Fours and college basketball, college hockey's Final Four has been overlooked.

And it's a shame because two Massachusetts colleges, Boston University and Harvard, are in the Final Four and could possibly end up playing for the national title this week.

Another Massachusetts school, UMass Lowell, just missed making the Final Four as the Minutemen lost in double overtime to Minnesota by a 2-1 margin.

The NCAA hockey tourney shows that Massachusetts is without a doubt the college hockey capital of the USA.

Both Harvard and BU are perennial contenders for the NCAA title and Bos-

Running clinic highlighted

The Hingham Boosters invited the John Hancock clinicians to speak to the Norwell and Hingham squads.

Rodgers, 46, has been speaking at the clinics for the past seven years. He considers them an excellent tool to provide young, up-and-coming runners in the United States with helpful advice and tips on topics ranging from pre-season training to nutrition.

"I love doing the clinics," Rodgers said in the high school's cafeteria. "I like meeting the athletes. I wish more big American corporations would get into sponsoring these types of programs."

Split up into four groups of 10-15, the high school tracksters spent 15 minutes at each station, listening intently to what advice the speaker had to share with them. During the informal presentations the athletes had the chance to ask questions concerning any aspect of running and fitness in general.

Rodgers told the high-schoolers the key to improvement and continued success in the sport was to build up workouts on a gradual basis.

"It's (distance running) not like a lot sports where raw talent takes the edge," Rodgers reminded the athletes. "You have to use your head. Distance running isn't so much technique. It's learning about your competition and your own strength and weaknesses."

Rodgers also shared one of his own training and racing strategies which has more than made up for his admitted weakness throughout his career.

"If you don't have a strong finish, run fastest interval in the middle," Rodgers recommended. "If you can do that — shift gears in the middle of the race — it's a great tactic."

He told them it was important to compete in events they enjoyed and not to get discouraged when improvement seems to come slower than anticipated. "The good thing about our sport is you can always make progress."

Rodgers said drinking lots of water was the "number-one secret for runners.

"It's lubrication for your muscles," he said. "The best thing in the world is to drink a ton of water."

Rodgers stressed the importance of purchasing "a good quality shoe made by a major company." To avoid injuries a good amount of stretching was needed and running on soft surfaces such as dirt, grass and trails was preferable to concrete and asphalt, which is more jarring to the muscles and joints.

Rodgers said it was O.K. to experiment with different foods, but not on the day of the race. He recommended easily digestible foods and a well-balanced diet. If a runner got the munchies in the afternoon, graham crackers and grapes usually did the trick in providing a pick-me-up before an afternoon training session.

Meyer, the last American to win the Boston Marathon with his 2:09 back in 1983, focused on mental preparation and strength work for racing during his 15 minutes.

"You need strength, no matter what the event," said Meyer on his running philosophy.

Longer intervals should be one of the early-season training staples," Meyer said. He explained there was no need to worry about the shorter intervals because once in shape, it only takes a runner three quality workouts to get fast.

"You're going to have all the speed you need," he said.

Meyer went on to say that the races at the beginning of the season were less important than the league and state competitions later in the year. Once the season starts, a runner should set a goal of what he or she wants to run for time over a certain distance. "Be realistic," Meyer said, "but set them far enough to be a challenge."

Meyer told the Hingham runners that since moving to the town last summer, he observed there are certain sports that the town believes to be more important than others. The Hingham athletes nodded their heads in agreement. They named hockey and lacrosse as two of the most popular sports at the high school.

To help bring running to the forefront in town, Meyer said they could work together to put running on the map in Hingham by making it a tradition to get together on weekends and run together as a group.

He said consistent weekend runs could serve as a legacy for the runners who started the program, even years after they graduate.

"You can change some of that," he said. "You won't do it this year but you can start it this year. All it takes is one group of kids. It's twice as good as any trophy."

Tresler had the longest coaching background to go with his talk on goal-setting. A coach for 20 years at the high school and college level, Tresler coached at Boston College for three years and the Boston Athletic Association (BAA) for nine, before starting the Boston Running Club two years ago. The club currently has a membership of 350.

On the national level, Tresler coached Bruce Bickford, the No. 1-ranked 10K runner in the world in 1985. He also coached several Olympic athletes.

"Those who perform better have more concrete goals than abstract goals," Tresler said.

Goals, he said, should be written down and shared with the coach so they can alter workouts if necessary and are on "the same wavelength, moving in the same direction together."

With a specific goal, Tresler explained, different aspects of an athlete's life should be altered to compensate for the added stress on the body from training. Tresler said 8-9 hours of "good sleep" a night was important, as was a diet and proper stretching.

"There are a lot of choices out there," Tresler said. "But if you have a goal, the choices become easier."

And like Rodgers, Tresler stressed the imperativeness of filling the body with liquids. "You almost can't drink enough water," he said.

Sheehan, who is well-known in the South Shore, having won or placed high in several road races, has run a 2:13 marathon and finished as high as 15th in the Hopkinton-to-Boston event.

He had the only session where the athletes performed easy form drills, designed to get the runners used to proper arm movement and leg lift.

Sheehan went over running mechanics and various stretching exercises to loosen several muscle groups of the body, making running all the easier.

Celtics play the name game

Special to the Mariner

The two-point conversion. The last time the pro ranks saw the likes of the two-point conversion was back in the old days of the AFL, God rest its soul.

Back when the NFL and the AFL merged, the NFL was dictating terms. Those terms meant no two-point conversion and the "No Fun League" was born. The truth is I'm grateful. It's a sign of progress for the Jurassic NFL, but let me be the 21st person to tell you that a two-point conversion won't change an already conservative league.

Envision this scenario with the local franchise in mind. With 58 seconds left on the clock, Bledsoe shakes off Cornelius Bennett to connect with Coates, who rumbles through the secondary and into the end zone. The Pats need two to win, one to tie. So, what happens? Parcells trots out the kicking team. It's a game of percentages, and OT is a better chance than an all-or-nothing, two-point conversion. Solution: eliminate overtime. However, in the college game, where the two-point conversion is alive and well, the conversion only happens a mere nine percent of the time. Too bad.

Speaking of bad, the best thing that could happen to the woeful Celtics is happening. Yes. They have lost their last 18 of 20, and are inching toward Ping Pong Pandemonium. And don't think for a second that Irish eyes aren't smiling in the front office...If there is any consolation to this dismal season it's that the Celts are unrivaled for the All-Name Team trophy. They have an Alla, an Xavier, a Dee, a Sherman, an Acie (what is that?) and a Dino. They need to draft a Wilma. If we play name association, the Celts have a general, a deity, a 50s film star, a comic book character, and a cartoon dinosaur. It's just a consolation.

Was there any doubt trashy Tonya was guilty of something? True to form, Tonya just isn't getting the credit she deserves. The sad thing is that Tonya Harding has done more for skating than Babe Ruth did for baseball. The triple lutz is now part of American vernacular.

So the Patriots haven't loaded up on all the free agents you thought they would. You were expecting Tim Brown in the right slot, Anthony Miller in the left, and Seth Joyner at inside linebacker? The facts are as follows: Parcells still has his own key free agents to sign in Harlow, Coates, Hurst, Russell, and Brisby — in that order. All of these players are restricted free agents (Patriots can match all offers), who in all likelihood will be back in Foxboro next year.

An interesting scenario would be for a team to tender Leonard Russell an offer sheet and the Pats let him go. The Pats would receive a first-round pick as compensation. Parcells, Forte and Kraft cannot afford to break the bank with a salary cap that puts serious controls on the future of free agency. The draft is still the tool in the franchise building process.

ton College and Northeastern also have strong traditions over the years.

There are also other solid hockey powers like UMass Lowell and Merrimack that are based in the state.

As for the NHL, there is no need to gloat about the contributions of Mass. players like Marshfield's Jeremy Roenick and Pembroke's Kevin Stevens.

However, last week, Hingham's Tony Amonte, who had a standout college career at BU, was reunited with former Thayer linemate Roenick on the Chicago Blackhawks.

Amonte, a 30-goal scorer with the Rangers over the past two years, was traded to Chicago and now plays on the same line as Roenick, a 50-goal scorer for the past two years.

By the way, on their first shift together, Amonte and Roenick scored a goal.

It was just like the old days at Thayer.

Members of the New England Patriots played hoops with the Scituate all-stars last week in a benefit game for D.A.R.E. and the Scituate Community Playground.

The Patriots were led by tight end Ben Coates and wide receivers Vincent Brisby and Ray Crittenden.

While the Patriots are not going to put a scare into the Boston Celtics, the athletic ability of the football players was something to see.

Brisby and Crittenden, who each stood around six feet, could jump to the moon and shot the ball fairly well.

Coates, who is a well-muscled 6'3" and 225 pounds, ran the court like a gazelle and swatted shots throughout the entire game.

The Patriots ended up winning and the hundreds of fans in attendance had a great time.

By the way, there was no Drew Bledsoe.

Imagine what coach Bill Parcells would say if his $10 million quarterback sprained his ankle in an off-season basketball game.

A couple years ago, Boston Bruin and Hingham resident Chris Nilan was playing some hoops with other team members on the parquet floor at the Garden during an off-day midway through the season.

Nilan landed wrong and broke his ankle. He missed the rest of the season and never got back into the good graces of the Bruin management.

The Under-14 age group in Sunday's Cohasset Roadrace By-the-Sea 10K was a disturbing one for me to rationalize. As I scanned the results of the 488 official finishers of the popular race, I came across two 10-year-olds and a 9-year-old who all finished. There were also more than a couple 13-year-olds who traversed the 6.2 miles and finished.

I always have been a firm advocate that young kids should not be running road races further than 5K (3.1 miles) for the simple fact that their muscles and bones are still growing and cannot handle the stress of training for and running a 10K. They'll either sustain an injury or become so exhausted, they'll become tired of going out and pounding themselves into the pavement day after day.

I question the wisdom of the race directors for having that particular category in the first place. The fact that medals were awarded to the top male and female finisher in the category only encourages the ambitious youngsters to challenge themselves over the difficult 6.2 mile course. No adult is going to tell you the Cohasset route is an easy one.

And what are the parents thinking in letting their kids enter the event? If they are runners themselves, they should know more than anyone the physical exhaustion a hard 10K puts on their bodies. To have their 10-year-old child experience the same strain is not only foolhardy, it's dangerous.

But don't take my word for it. I challenge the parents to pose the question to any cross-country or track coach worth his salt. I'd bet my paycheck that coaches like Abington's Tim Porter and Bob Murphy, Carver's George Rose and Norwell's Chuck Martin would agree with me in full. The furthest distance any high school cross-country runner ran last fall was 3.1 miles, usually shorter.

As an alternative, why not bring the kids to the weekly fun-run at Cambridge's Fresh Pond. The Saturday morning race consists of a flat, 2.5-mile loop around the pond. The parents can opt for the two loop, five-mile race. There are also dozens of 5K races on the Massachusetts calendar, including the May 8, 3.1-miler coming up in Scituate.

Maybe the race directors of Cohasset could add a 1.5-3.1 mile race for kids under the age of 14. A race made up solely of kids would offer even more incentive. If that's not a viable option they should simply do away with the Under-14 category entirely, for the good of the kids.

Find your 'home on the range' before attacking the links

By Joe Keefe
Special to the Mariner

I am a believer in practice, constructive practice that is. And before I go out to play, I always try to loosen up before the first tee. Last week, I talked on exercising throughout the winter to help prepare your body when the courses open. Now that they are close to opening (I hope), it would be a great idea on your part to commit yourself to warming up before going out each time this season.

Now, I know what you're saying: "O.K. I'll show this pro. I will go warm up first and prove to him it just won't work. Now give me that driver!" Wrong!

Start off your session with a short iron, a pitching wedge or nine iron. Make slow practice swings and concentrate on rhythm and balance. When you want to proceed, take a few swings with little care where they go at first, but have the ball go 50 percent of the club's potential. Feel the weight of the club and focus on half the distance. Feel the impact of the ball and the lightness of your grip. This is an excellent way to improve your feel, which in turn will help lower your scores and also prevent injuries. Try it.

If you want proof, watch the best players in the world, male and female alike, warm up. You'll see a whole new concept of the "driving range." It suddenly becomes a "practice facility," a place where one goes to stretch out, gain mental confidence, work on new concepts and ideas, and yes, practice.

Jack Nicklaus said that he never went to the range just to "beat balls." He always had a purpose to frequent the range. Let's make 1994 a year with purpose. Now, your purpose may be to work on your driver. This is fine. But start your session off properly and slowly, stretching all your golf muscles before the heavy artillery comes out.

If you have any suggestions, comments, or requests for topics of discussion, please write me at: Joe Keefe, PGA, South Shore Country Club, 274 South Street, Hingham, MA 02043.

Remember to have fun and play "better golf."

New step class set

Registrations are now being taken for a new step class starting in March at the Cohasset Town Hall. This is a 60-minute class for intermediate participants which includes basic stepping, stretching, and toning. (The workout can be adapted for all fitness levels.) The class is held Tuesdays and Thursday nights at 6:30 p.m. Special pricing is available for monthly sign-ups or 10 session cards. Drop-ins are welcome. Please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791 for more information.

Schedule for step classes at the Cohasset Town Hall is as follows: 'Fatburner'/Intro — (beginners to intermediate), Monday and Wednesday nights from 5 to 6 p.m.; Step II (intermediate), Tuesday and Thursday nights at 6:30 to 7:30 p.m.

Indoor golf lessons

The Cohasset and Scituate Recreation Departments are co-sponsoring indoor golf lessons for beginner players, scheduled to begin Thursday evening, April 7, at the Cushing School, Scituate.

Lessons are five weeks in duration, meeting one hour weekly. The fee for the five hour session is $60 per person.

To register, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791. Classes are limited in size and registrations are accepted on a first call basis. Class times available are 6 p.m., 7 p.m., and 8 p.m.

The last voyage of the schooner Charlotte

By David Wadsworth - A Tower descendant
Special to the Mariner

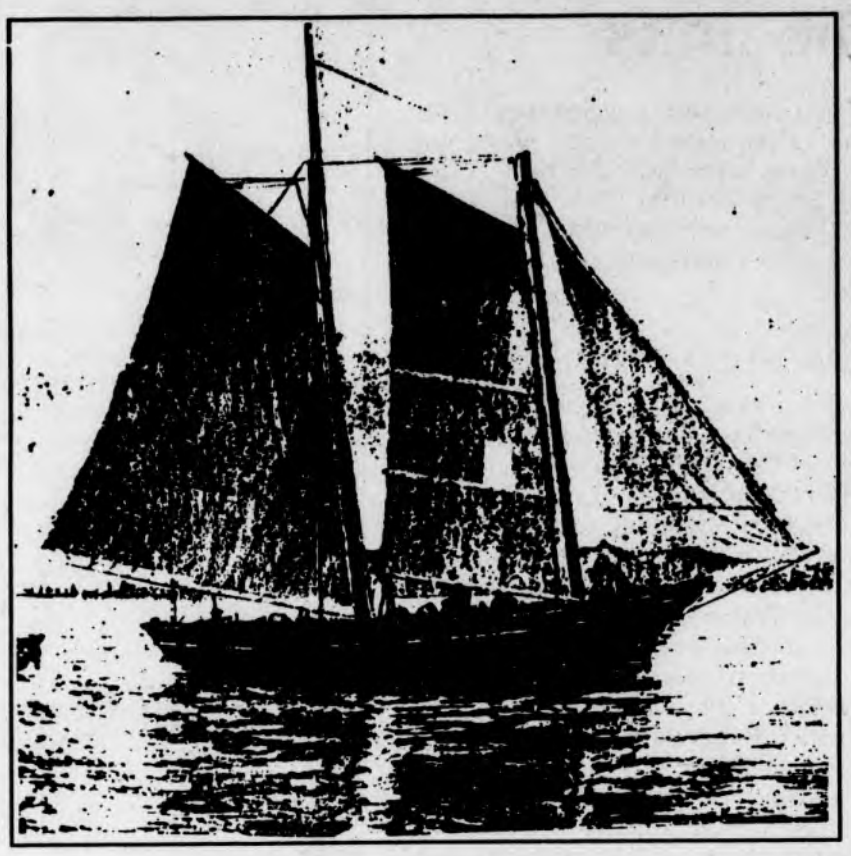
In the Canadian Gulf of Saint Lawrence, some 100 miles northeast of Prince Edward Island, there lies a chain of islands called the Magdalen Islands. In the summer of 1894, a fishing schooner from Cohasset was sailing close to the Magdalen Islands, pursuing its regular task of catching mackeral and perch. The schooner was the Charlotte.

Its owners were members of the Tower family of Cohasset and Weymouth. Charlotte was the last representative of the once numerous schooner fleets of family-owned fishing vessels, and had been built in 1876. It was registered at the Cohasset Customs House as being a schooner of 71.66 tons. Its owners were members of the Tower family: Abraham H., Henry Clay, Charlotte M. B., Newcomb B., and Daniel N. Tower of Cohasset, and Charles C. Tower of Weymouth.

August 21, 1894, the Charlotte was seized by the Canadian government, for violating Canada's territorial waters at the Magdalen Island (fishing within the territorial limit of three miles) and for violations of Canadian Customs Laws. The Custom Laws allegedly violated related to the "Charlotte's" crew having unlawfully sold some "oilskins," or foul weather gear, and tobacco, along with barrels of salt, without informing the Customs Department, and without paying the necessary duty. The fishing violations also included the unlawful purchase of a barrel of clams for bait.

Upon its seizure, Charlotte was taken to the port of Arichat, C.B., and tied up at a wharf. Word of the incident reached the vessel's owners almost immediately. Newcomb Bates Tower, one of the owners, and representing all of them, began efforts to obtain the schooner's release. First, on August 23, two days after the seizure by Canadian authorities, the vessel's crew was discharged. Some of them were Canadians. On the following day, a letter arrived in Cohasset from James G. Tarr of Gloucester, pointing out the existence of an 1818 treaty between the U.S. and Great Britain, giving fishing rights to American fishermen around the Magdalen Islands.

He also pledged the assistance of the entire Gloucester community to aid in obtaining the release of the "Charlotte." Other American schooners had previously been seized by the Canadian government. At the same time, American Consul, at Arichat Peter Cambell, took over the handling of the "Charlotte's" case at the site of its impoundment. The Official Notice of Seizure, issued on August 29, by the Canadian Customs Office at Hawkesbury, Nova Scotia, arrived in Cohasset. The notice described the charges against the vessel and contained a copy of excerpts from Canadian Customs Law pertaining to the seizure of foreign vessels.



'The two disgruntled crewmen took their revenge upon the ship better than they could perhaps ever have imagined, for Cohasset had come to the end of its Age of Sail.'

Seven charges had been made against the "Charlotte," three customs violations and four fishing violations. It was alleged that the vessel had been fishing within territorial waters, that the barrel of clams was purchased unlawfully, that the sale of clothing and tobacco was illegal, and that the sale of salt by the vessel's captain also had been unlawful.

Newcomb B. Tower now began an exchange of letters with American and Canadian officials, as well as visiting the ship at Arichat. From the captain of the Charlotte came a story of intrigue and conspiracy on the part of two of the vessel's crew. Among the crew were two men from Arichat. It appears that they had requested the captain allow the schooner to remain in port long enough for them to pay a visit to their homes.

But the weather was good, the season drawing to a close, and the captain refused their request. The two crewmen threatened revenge against the captain before the voyage was over. The "Charlotte's" captain maintained that the two Arichat men had purposefully

Friends team up for a cure in the '94 MS walk

April 10, friends and family of Steve Perkins will step out to find a cure for MS by walking as a team in Cohasset's MS walk. Steve Perkins of Alcatel Vacuum Products of Hingham recently reported that, thus far, fifteen family members and friends had signed up to walk on his team. This year he hopes to have one of the top fundraising teams in Massachusetts.

MS is a chronic, often disabling disease that attacks a person's nervous system. The progress, severity and specific symptoms of the disease cannot be foreseen; symptoms may range from numbness to paralysis and blindness. Most people are diagnosed with MS between the ages of 20-40, but the unpredictable physical and emotional effects can occur for the rest of their lives. The MS Society provides a wide range of vital support services to help families affected by MS live with a chronic disease and cope with the stress of an unknown future.

During the weekend of April 9 and 10, the MS Society will hold 16 MS walks across the Massachusetts in the following cities and towns: Boston, Marblehead, Hopkinton, Hyannis, Plymouth, Attleboro, Westport, Greenfield, Northampton, Worcester, Haverhill, Concord, Cohasset, Springfield. Southbridge, Pittsfield. The MS Society hopes thousands of residents will join the walk closest to their home and help find a cure for the number one disabling disease of young adults.

'The MS Walk is a major source of funding for our research program, which is bringing us closer and closer to a cure for this difficult, unpredictable disease.'

— James Dunlop, of the Massachusetts MS Chapter.

James Dunlop, Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Massachusetts Chapter, commented "The MS Walk is a major source of funding for our research program, which is bringing us closer and closer to a cure for this difficult, unpredictable disease. Just a few months ago, Betaseron, the first drug in 25 years to effect the course of MS, came on the market. This new MS drug is a major breakthrough and with the public's support we can continue to make strides towards a cure."

Steve Perkins hopes that many of his friends and neighbors will either pledge his team walkers or join the walk and help raise funds for MS research and local support services. Several other teams in this area will be competing with Steve's team to be named the top team of "Cohasset by the Sea."

The National MS Society is dedicated to advancing the cure, prevention and treatment of MS and to improving the lives of those affected by the disease. Since the MS Society was founded in 1946, it has spent over $150 million for research — the largest sum allocated for MS research anywhere in the world, outside the U.S. federal government. Through its 144 chapters and branches, the society provides services for people with MS across the nation.

If you wish to sponsor any of the teams in this article or participate as either a walker or volunteer yourself, call Lori at (508) 291-2169.

Walk for MS, April 10

The "Cohasset by the Sea" WALK is planned for Sunday April 10. The walk, sponsored by the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, will help raise money to fund research and services conducted by the society.

"The MS WALK is a major source of funding for our research program, which is bringing us closer and closer to a cure for MS. Just a few months ago, the first drug in 25 years to effect the course of MS came on the market.l It's a major breakthrough, and we can continue to make strides only with the public's support," explained James Dunlop, chairman of the board of the Massachusetts chapter.

For information about walking, sponsoring walkers, or volunteering for the event, call the MS Society at 508-291-2169.

The last voyage of Charlotte

caused the customs violations in order to gain their revenge. He further stated that the men had smuggled ashore the "oilskins" and tobacco to sell them in exchange for rum.

The barrel of salt had been given to a customs official at the official's request, and no payment received for it. This left the unlawful barrel of bait clams, purchased from the schooner Sea Clipper on August 4th, at the Magdalen Islands, as the only apparent violation of substance. In late September of 1894, the American Consul General's Office in Ottawa wrote to Newcomb Tower that Canadian charges of unlawful fishing had been dropped. The Treaty of 1818 was being honored by the Canadian government. On the subject of the customs violations, however, the Canadians remained adamant.

The Admiralty Court ruled that a fine would have to be paid for the release of the vessel. At first they required the sum of $3,000, equal to the appraised value of the schooner. American Consul General John B. Riley in Ottawa interceded, and the fine was dropped, first to $400, then $75, plus legal and other costs. Canadian officials were becoming aware of the peculiar circumstances surrounding the alleged violations. Total costs paid for the release of the "Charlotte," including the value of the smuggled oilskins and tobacco, plus the duty, came to $350.78.

However, there were other costs: for docking facilities, watchman's wages, repairs to the vessel, and the expenses of the U.S. Consul, Peter Cambell, who had taken over the care of the vessel at Arichat. The total cost submitted by Cambell amounted to $1,289.45.

"Charlotte's" last voyage from Cohasset had indeed been a costly one. In March of 1895, with Charlotte having been icebound all winter and still in Canada, the owners decided to sell the schooner as soon as a buyer could be found. They sold it to a Canadian, David Walker, for $1,450, but not before masts and spars had to be replaced. Sale of some of the ship's stores netted another $58.62.

In that way the schooner Charlotte was lost. The two disgruntled crewmen took their revenge upon the ship better than they could perhaps ever have imagined, for Cohasset had come to the end of its Age of Sail.

Subsequently, in 1899, a Boston law firm representing the Towers ascertained that Peter Cambell, Consul at Arichat, had yet to turn over to the Towers a total of $600 he had received from additional sale of the seines and a ship's boat from the "Charlotte." Not even that could erase the sadness felt by the people to whom the Charlotte had been more than just a ship, but also a symbol of their way of life and their love for the sea.

(This article is the result of the discovery of a packet of original documents relating to the Charlotte case, including correspondence between Newcomb B. Tower and various American and Canadian officials. There were the American Consul at Arichat, the Hawkesbury Customs Office in Nova Scotia, the Canadian Department of Marine and Fisheries, the American Consul General at Ottawa, an accusatory letter written by one of the Canadian members of the "Charlotte's" crew, and American Customs House Records. Newcomb B. Tower was my great-grandfather, and the packet of documents is in the possession of the Wadsworth family. It may be of interest to know that the old typewriter used to type the original of this article formerly belonged to the late Miss Charlotte S. Tower, my Great aunt, and daughter of Newcomb B. Tower. E. Victor Bigelow in his Narrative History of Cohasset, published in 1898, notes that the Charlotte was the last of the Cohasset fishing schooners.)

Cohasset METCO provides home away from home

By Lori Merliss
Special to the Mariner

Two Thursdays each month Cohasset schools have an early release day so that teachers can participate in conferences or continuing education. In past years, Cohasset's METCO students, who attend school here but live in Boston, would have simply boarded a bus to go home. That changed when Cohasset METCO director Patricia Brown and the host family committee of the PSO decided to create the monthly "Stay Days" program.

"Stay Days are a positive exchange between Boston students and Cohasset residents," says Pat Brown. "The program gives Boston children representation in the community. They are not just getting into the bus to go home." Instead, the children may join in a variety of activities with their host families. There have been trips to a bowling alley, the beach and the Franklin Park Zoo. On days when no field trip is planned, the children go home with their host families to play, do homework and relax. Many spend the night. This enables the children in grades one through six to develop a closer relationship with their host families.

"Some of the high school students may be in Cohasset most of the week, if they have sports practice or other activities," says METCO host parent Dayle Dickinson. "The younger ones come mostly on the Stay Days. Sometimes they stay overnight, sometimes just for two hours in the afternoon." The Dickinson-O'Hayre family has hosted fifth grader Antoine Miller since he was in the second grade. Antoine usually spends the night at Dickinson's on Stay Days. He and Dickinson's son, Patrick O'Hayre, are good friends, although they are no longer in class together.

January 13, Antoine and Patrick were at Patrick's home. The boys had stopped to enjoy the snow, so they were late and arrived in the kitchen on the run. Antoine's feet had gotten wet, so Dickinson directed him to change into some of Patrick's socks. He clearly felt comfortable and at home.

"It's fun when Antoine comes here because we get to go downtown," said Patrick.

"Hey! We forgot to go downtown!" said Antoine.

"You were too busy sledding," said Dickinson.

According to Patrick Brown, the Boston children enjoy the opportunities to play outside that Cohasset offers. Antoine's family comes here every Halloween to go trick-or-treating with the Dickinson-O'Hayre family.

Antoine described what his younger brother Aaron said when he saw downtown Cohasset.

"He said, 'We can't be downtown! Where are all the cars?' " Antoine said that he also likes to play video games at the Patrick's.

Antoine and Patrick look forward to high school, when both hope to play basketball.

"My mom says if we have to practice a lot, Antoine will practically be living here," said Patrick. He said that it's O.K. with him. "It's like having another brother live with you." The boys got a taste of the frosting on a cake Dickinson was baking, then went off upstairs.

At the O'Connell-Chase home on Highland Court, second grader Tiyanna Pope had gone back to Boston to attend a birthday party, although she usually spends the night on Stay Days. Amyra O'Connell-Chase told me about the friendship her daughter, Amyra, and Tiyanna have developed over the past year and a half.

"When Tiyanna comes, we don't do anything special. Whatever's going on, she's part of it. If she decides to stay over, fine. If not, she doesn't." Today, O'Connell-Chase took Tiyanna back to school to catch the bus home.

For O'Connell-Chase, one of the nicest things about hosting Tiyanna has been the rapport she has developed with Tiyanna's mother, Barbara Pope.

"It's a comfortable relationship — just one mother to another. We've talked about what it's like for Tiyanna to be in basically a white town in a white school. Just regular mother things, with that added dimension."

O'Connell-Chase thinks Tiyanna and her mother both feel at ease with Tiyanna's visits.

"There's a lot of kids living around here — it's a real kids' atmosphere. They just have a fun time playing."

Barbara Pope agrees.

"At first I was concerned about Tiyanna coming such a long distance. So, one morning I visited the school, had lunch with Amyra and met some of the neighbors. After a few visits, I felt I'd had a chance to develop a good relationship with Amyra, and I could feel comfortable having my daughter there."

Pope also said that with all the bad weather this winter, it's been comforting to know that Tiyanna has a place to go in Cohasset.

Tiyanna and Amyra were together again on the next Stay Day, Feb. 3. They were participating in a special program at the South Shore Arts Center. The METCO students and their host family friends were doing art activities focused on Black History Month. Instructor Naoe Suzuki showed the younger students pictures of quilts made by African-American artist Faith Ringwald. Using these as inspiration, Suzuki asked them to "tell a story about the people around you," using oil pastel crayons. Tiyanna and Amyra worked side by side, absorbed in their drawings of people and flowers.

Upstairs, the fourth, fifth and sixth graders in Nancy Connolly's group were making clay masks suggested by African tribal examples. They talked about plans for the evening while giving each other tips on how to finish their masks.

"How do I make a nose?" asked Karima Allie. Connolly moved to help her, giving suggestions. The students seemed to be enjoying themselves.

"I thought this would be boring, but it's not," one commented. They also agreed that they would like to come back on another Stay Day.

The masks were decorated with beads and feathers, and the students went on to make pots, baskets and even a cat's face. Pat Brown circulated between the two classrooms, giving encouragement. As the bus arrived to take those who were going back to Boston, she helped them gather their work and coats. The rest of the children left for their host families' homes.

"I thought it went extremely well," Brown commented. "The kids were excited. It brought together the community, the schools and the host families." She was pleased that the activities recognized Black History Month, making the day especially meaningful for the students. Another Stay Day at the Arts Center is planned for May.

METCO is window to a better education

(Ed's note: The following are excerpts from letters written by Cohasset METCO students urging Gov. Weld to attend a METCO rally March 15).

Dear Governor Weld:

My name is Pauline Nguyen and I'm 12 years old. I am a METCO student in the sixth grade at the Deer Hill school in Cohasset. I have been in the program for one year so far.

I'm writing this letter because the METCO Program is very important and I do not want it to end. This program lets kids from the inner city go to schools in the suburbs and get a good education. If this program is eliminated we would not be able to finish our education in the schools we go to now. Being in the METCO program has made it possible for me to make lots of new Cohasset friends. The Program helps us feel welcomed in Cohasset by pairing us with host families. This gives Boston students a chance to get to know a Cohasset family. We spend the afternoon together and sometimes sleep over.

Pauline Nguyen
Boston

Dear Governor Weld:

My name is Marcina Boone, age 11, Grade 6. I am writing to you about our education. We need the Metco program. I want to continue my education with this program and then go on to college. Please support this program .

Remember, a child's education is very important. Without education, where would children be? They would be on the city streets committing crimes. That is why education is imperative.

Marcina Boone
Dorchester

Dear Governor Weld:

My name is Kevin. I'm eleven years old. I am a METCO student in the sixth grade at the Deer Hill school in Cohasset. We have host families in my school. My host brother is Liam O'Donnell. We spend a lot of time together.

I'm writing this letter because I want you to understand how important the METCO Program is to me and my family. I know the METCO Program is a good program for children that live in the city. I want you to support the METCO Program because it helps students like me to get a better education.

Parenting workshop set

The elementary school adjustment counselors are offering a series of four parenting workshops from 9:30 to 11 a.m. Thursdays in the "living room" at First Parish House, Main St.

April 28 — Looking at Your Parenting Style

May 5 — Summary of Lee Canter's "Assertive Discipline for Parents"

May 12 — Self-esteem...What Can a Parent Do?

May 19 — Teaching Responsibility and Respect to Children

The workshops are open to any Cohassset parent and will be led by Ed Leonard and Frank Fitzgerald who have extensive experience consulting with parents. The success and appeal of the workshops offered earlier in the year has prompted this four-part series that will include parts of Canter's "Assertive Discipline" as well as information from the "STEP Parenting" and "How to Talk so Children Will Listen (And Listen so Children Will Talk)" programs.

Even if you attended the earlier workshops, the series will offer much more as well as a refresher. Attend any or all of the dates. Call Ed or Frank at 383-6115 or 383-6117 for information.

Seniors' parents to meet

The PSO is sponsoring a meeting for parents of Cohasset High School Class of 1994 at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday April 5 in the audio-visual studio at the high school.

Principal Mary Ellen Gallagher; Jack Leary, student services director; Sarah Atherton, class president; and parent sponsors will have information on senior activities. Graduation invitations may be ordered at this time.

For information call PSO representatives Connie Afshar at 383-6006 or Terese D'Urso at 383-1143.

Spelling bee winners

Twenty junior high students recently competed in the preliminary round of the Scripps Howard National Spelling Bee. The following students, who were classroom champions, participated:

Grade 8 classroom champions: Stephen Baker, Christopher Laas, Alison Kinchla, Raishaun Barboza, Renese Wright, Patrick Hurley, Greg Bilton, Courtney Brown, Andrew Hamilton, Garrick Towle and Bourke Corcoran.

Grade 7: Mark Caristi, Morgan Bigley, Kaitlin Jackson, Katie Walsh, Sergei Skorupa, Greg Connolly, John-Paul Laugelle, Ben Littauer and James O'Sullivan.

The school champion was James O'Sullivan, a seventh grader, who will represent Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School at the regional contest March 26. The regional winner then represents the school at the National Spelling Bee held in Washington, D.C. Ben Littauer, also a grade 7 student, was school runner-up and alternate. Andrew Hamilton won first place in grade 8, and Chris Laas placed second. Each contestant was presented with a certificate of achievement and a silver dollar. The P.S.O. sponsors this preliminary event.

Unicorn Singers perform

The Unicorn Singers will present Gilbert & Sullivan's "The Yeomen of the Guard," at 8 p.m. Saturday April 9 and 4 p.m. Sunday April 10 at Old Ship Church in Hingham.

Scott Ketcham and Rich Jensen of Cohasset will perform major roles. Other roles will be played by Jeanne Scammell of Norwell, Norman Shaw of Weymouth and Davis Dassori and Martha Reardon of Hingham. The operetta will be preceded by choruses from grand opera including the ballroom scene from "Eugene Onegin" and the Easter Chorus from "Cavalleria Rusticana."

Advance sales tickets are $10 and $8 for seniors and students and are available at Noble's Camera in Hingham Square or be sending a check payable to Unicorn Singers to 66 Lincoln St., Hingham. All tickets at the door will be $10.

For information call 749-6561.

Host families needed

Cohasset has been selected by the International Education Forum to be the home for 25 Spanish students in July. IEF chose Cohasset because it represents a wholesome, all-American community with proximity to a major city.

The students offer families in Cohasset the opportunity to experience Spanish culture without leaving home. Students, speak varying degrees of English, carry their own insurance, pocket money and a desire to share in the life of an American family.

IEF organizes activities for the students and the host families are welcome to participate.

Any family can host a student. The only requirement is a desire to welcome the student into your family circle and make him feel welcome. The host family provides a bed and meals and allows the student to participate in its usual summer activities.

Anyone interested in learning more about being a host family should call IEF community coordinator Lucia Papile at 492-1018.

Candidates will debate on "Pierson to Person"

Pierson's guests on a special edition from 9 to 9:30 p.m. Thursday March 31 on Channel 3 will be candidates for the Cohasset School Committee: Owen O'Malley, James Kirk, Daniel Evans and JoAnne Chittick. Joining Pierson in the questioning will be Patriot Ledger Cohasset correspondent Molly Hochkeppel and Cohasset Mariner Editor Mary Ford.

From 8 to 9 p.m. Thursday March 31, Pierson's guests Mark Picciotto, Ph.D.; John Matthews, M.D.; Rochelle Cooper, R.N. and C.S.; William Engels, Ph.D.; and Richard Elliott, Ph.D. will discuss mental health issues including addictions, manic depression, dementia in the elderly and adolescent mental health disorders.

"Pierson to Person" is broadcast live from 8 to 9 p.m. each Thursday from the North Scituate studio of Continental Cablevision. The show airs on Channel 53 in Hingham and Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset. The public is invited to be part of the studio audience. Those planning to attend should be at the studio on Gannett Road by 7:30 p.m.

For information call Robert Belliveau at 545-2500.

Globe columnist to speak

Social Service League of Cohasset is sponsoring award winning Boston Globe columnist, Linda Weltner, speaking on "The Courage to Nurture," from 10 a.m. to noon Thursday April 14 at The Chart House, Cohasset Harbor.

Weltner is best known for her column, "Ever So Humble," which appears in the "At Home" section of the Globe Thursdays.

Advance registration is $4. Tickets will be $5 at the door.

Call 383-0771/1319 or 545-0096 by Thursday April 7 to register.

Learning center fundraiser

The Mary Martha Learning Center, 1045 Main Street. Hingham, is holding its first major fund raiser at the Sons of Italy Hall, 81 Market Street, Rockland, Saturday, April 16.

The event, which was postponed earlier by one of the many snowstorms which hit the area, features dancing to the 18-piece "Soft Touch Band." Your favorite music of the 1940s will be highlighted, much in the styles of Glenn Miller and Tommy Dorsey. Dancing will be from eight to midnight.

The Mary Martha Learning Center is a residential educational program for homeless women with young children, where residents receive training in life skills designed to help them achieve positive, long-term changes in their lives. It's located at 1045 Main Street, Hingham. For more information on the dance, call Nancy Boyle at 740-1375. To reach the center, you may call 749-5441.

Furniture class offered

Kenneth Sargent of Cohasset Country Workshop will teach a class in furniture restoration, refinishing and revitalization from 7 to 9 p.m. in the Cohasset High School woodworking shop. The fee for the program, sponsored by the Cohasset Recreation Dept., is $60.

Sargent has been a professional refinisher for a number of years in Cohasset and has experience teaching his art. Call 383-6791 for information.

Arts education lecture

According to Eric Oddleifson, president of The Center for Arts in the Basic Curriculum, research indicates that a curriculum devoting 25 percent or more of the school day to the arts produces students with academically superior abilities. Oddleifson will take his "Case for the Arts" to the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Rd., Cohasset from 9 a.m. to noon Thursday April 7. He will speak on arts integrated learning paradigms as part of a morning seminar which includes discussion periods.

"The arts are not so much a result of inspiration and innate talent as they are a person's capacities for creative thinking and imagining, problem solving, critical judgment and a host of other mental processes," said Oddleifson.

The seminar is free and open to the public. Call 383-9548 before April 1 to register.

Gallery features artist

Monoprints and etchings of E. Mandeville Avery's gourd women are on display at the South Shore Conservatory's Staircase Gallery, One Conservatory Dr., Hingham through April 30.

A resident of Pembroke, Avery is a faculty member at the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset. She also works at her own business, Backriver Studio as a portrait artist and fine arts framer.

She studied printmaking at the University of Massachusetts at Dartmouth and has studied studio arts, papermaking and papersculpting.

On Saturday April 30, Avery and other artists will participate in "The Artist Tree," an open house art fair at the conservatory. The day will feature storytelling, workshops, performances, music and dance.

The gallery is open Monday through Friday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday 9 a.m. to noon.

Call 749-7565 for information.

The RTF will be closed Easter Sunday, but will be open Monday, April 4.

Beach party added to Harborfest agenda

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

This year Harborfest organizers have put their heads together again and come up with another afternoon of summer fun for participants.

'You have to furnish your own Spandex'
— Bob Martin, on in-line skating instruction.

Bob Martin and Jim Lagrotteria of the Harborfest committee won selectmen's approval Monday to conduct a sandcastle contest, ice cream festival, boat races, breeches buoy demonstration, balloon toss, and in-line skating instruction at Sandy Beach from 1 p.m. to sun down, Friday, June 17.

Martin assured the board the in-line skating company which will furnish Rollerblades™, helmets and protective gear, has insurance coverage.

"(But) you have to furnish your own Spandex," Martin noted.

Organizers are also looking into installing a telephone pole at the north

Pratt squeaks by Laugelle in tight election contest

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Three incumbents lost their bids for reelection last week in an election that will go down in the books for its unpredictability.

The biggest upset was Peter J. Pratt's defeat of five-term selectman Rocco F. Laugelle by 38 votes. Pratt garnered about 46 percent of the vote to Laugelle's 44 percent. Just over eight percent of or 226 of the 2397 votes cast for selectman were blank.

Incumbents Robert V. Davenport and Joanne Young Nawn lost their reelection bids to the health board and housing authority respectively.

Laugelle won Precinct Two with a comfortable 78 vote margin but it was not enough to make up a 116 vote deficit to Pratt in Precinct One.

Pratt, who campaigned hard, said he studied the "political mechanics" of the election and thought a turnout of 2,300 would go in his favor.

Cliff Dickson is one of a kind

By Jim Hamilton
Special to the Mariner

The Chart House was packed Wednesday, March 30 for Cliff Dickson's official retirement dinner acknowledging his 51 years of service as an auxiliary firefighter. From the invocation given by the Rev. John F. Caulfield, S. J. to the benediction delivered by the Rev. Edward T. Atkinson, the evening's entertainment was full of heart-felt testimonials about Cliff's extraordinary career. One had to wonder if Cliff has enough wall space in his home to display the tributes that he received during the course of the evening's program.

For the 280 guests who have known Cliff as a good neighbor, fellow firefighter or chief steward of the Cohasset Yacht Club, the Chart House was an

David Cutler resigns as publisher

David S. Cutler resigned this week as publisher of Mariner Newspapers.

Cutler, who sold the group of weekly newspapers to Capital Cities/ABC, Inc. in 1989, will continue to assist the company on a part-time consulting basis.

Margaret Smoragiewicz, publisher of the Cape Cod Pennysaver shoppers, will assume the additional duties as publisher of Mariner Newspapers.

In announcing his resignation Monday to the more than 100 Mariner employees, Cutler noted it was almost 22 years to the day that he left his position as state house reporter for The Patriot Ledger to found the Marshfield Mariner. "It took two weeks and an all-nighter" to get the first 16-page edition published, he recalled. The Marshfield Mariner, which has grown to an average 36 pages each week, serves as the flagship of the company that continued to grow through the 1980s.

The Mariner Newspapers now include 15 weekly newspapers, the monthly South Shore Business Journal, five shoppers and a commercial printing division, and encompasses a territory that stretches from Canton to Kingston.

Cutler, a Norwell resident, said he has no immediate plans, "but I am enthusiastic about the possibilities that lie ahead."

John Coots, president of the New England Newspaper Group of Capital Cities/ABC, Inc., praised Cutler for his ability to steer Mariner Newspapers through the years of recession into a time of stability and profit in 1994. "From nothing, David built his company over 22 years of tremendous effort and sacrifice," Coots said. "As a newspaper publisher and entrepreneur, David is both a shrewd business leader and citizen of great conscience. I will miss my friend terribly as I wish him well in his new horizons."

Smoragiewicz will be returning to a familiar place

Cohasset's week

Override is May 14

A special election set for May 14 will feature only one ballot question asking voters to exempt from Prop. 2-1/2 the amount required to pay the bond issue for designing and constructing a new playing field on land adjacent to Milliken Field and for making repairs to Milliken Field. The project will cost about $750,000.Town meeting approved the plans subject to passing an override last week.

New shop gets license

Victoria L. Chin plans to open a shop across from Kimball's at 87 Elm Street where she will buy and sell antiques and used furniture, art, pottery and collectibles mostly with a nautical theme.

Selectmen approved Chin's Junk Dealer's License at their board meeting Monday.

Tag Sale is approved

The Scituate/Cohasset Newcomers Club plans to hold a Tag Sale with proceeds going toward local community organizations like the library and food pantry, from 9 a.m. to noon, May 14 at the Community Center. Selectmen approved issuing a license for the tag sale this week.

Computer bid awarded

Selectmen awarded a $18,881 contract to DataNational Corp. of Norwell, the lowest bidder and the only vendor who submitted a full proposal for the software and hardware computer project at town hall.

The project is part of an ongoing plan to upgrage the town hall computer system.

Town Accountant Michael Buckley said DataNational has also proposed enlisting the town's current hardware maintenance vendor MainTech for the next three years. The cost of the project includes $14,825 for hardware, $1,800 for installation, and $1,128 for each of the second and third year's maintenance.

School committee candidate Dan Evans and supporter Polly Logan greet voters outside the polls Saturday. Evans narrowly lost his bid by 34 votes to rival Jim Kirk for one of two open seats on the school committee.

Ahearn submits resignation

Austin L. Ahearn Jr. of Clayspring Rd. has resigned from the public works garage study committee. Selectmen accepted his resignation with regret this week.

In 1987, she oversaw construction of the Mariner's new headquarters on Enterprise Drive in Marshfield; she was subsequently named publisher of the Pennysaver shoppers on Cape Cod in 1990.

"Although I assume this transition with great hope and anticipation, it is a bittersweet time for me," Smoragiewicz said. "It will be a monumental task to take over the reins of Mariner Newspapers from the man who created the business. David Cutler is a man of great vision, compassion and intelligence. I learned everything about this business from him and consider him the most knowledgeable newspaperman I have ever met. I have learned from the best."

end of the beach by the sea wall to hook the line onto for the breeches buoy demonstration.

They said the pole, which would be permanent, could also be used for hoisting flags to warn swimmers about sharks or inclement weather.

Flags could be hoisted alerting beach goers that the ice cream vendor has arrived, Lagrotteria said jokingly.

Harborfest is part of the Festival on the Common, June 17-19 which features the annual Art and Strawberry Festivals. Harborfest also sponsors the Chowderfest, Blessing of the Fleet, pancake breakfast and parade. Last year about 10,000 people attended the annual event.

Bill payments are made

Selectmen authorized payment of $13,186 to Rosano Davis, Inc. for demolition work at the Hagerty Property off Parker Ave.; and $2,450 to Flaherty Associates for engineering work on a proposed town cemetery.

Tree to be planted

The Cohasset Police Association will plant a living tree in memory of Phyllis H. Leslie in front of the police station.

Mrs. Leslie has made many donations to the town over the years including money for a computer at the fire department and new guns for the police department, Executive Secretary Gregory A. Doyon noted.

Articles get mixed reviews

An attempt by a group of concerned citizens to see if the town would amend to by-laws to add more detail to water bills including consumer appeal rights and to order the water department to stop assessing a "multiplier" fee to multiple units served by one water meter failed at town meeting last week.

Voters did support establishing a committee to study forming a watershed protection district that would include neighboring towns of Hingham and Norwell. The new committee will report its findings to the 1995 annual town meeting.

An article to see if the town would establish a committee to investigate the long-range financial impacts of Cohasset Heights Landfill failed to win town meeting support. While the issue is of grave concern to the town, Advisory Board Member Michael Putziger said, other town bodies are responsible for this issue. Putziger said forming a new committee "might diffuse the process and responsibility."

Rabies clinic April 16

A rabies clinic for cats and dogs will be held Saturday, April 16, from 1 to 3 p.m. in the Cohasset Town Hall auditorium.

Dogs must be leashed and cats caged.

Inoculation session for dogs only will be from 1 to 2 p.m. and, for cats from 2 to 3 p.m. Fee is $8 cash per animal. No checks or charges will be accepted. Arrangements were made by the Cohasset Board of Health with Dr. Charles Waters, veterinarian of the Hingham Animal Clinic.

Schools, police adopt PALS for Wellness program

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The school and police departments have joined forces to provide a DARE-like program for Cohasset students.

While DARE which features a standard 17-week curriculum usually delivered to sixth graders — PALS for Wellness is tailor-made for Cohasset.

PALS, which stands for Police Assisting Local Schools, will be more comprehensive than DARE focusing on violence prevention and conflict management in addition to substance abuse education, school Health Director Michael Gill said. The program will also reach several grade levels.

Cohasset's program will start on a small scale this spring, Gill explained, and should expand next fall.

Gill will seek grant money to pay for the program which will cost about $14,000 next year. This year's training and start-up costs will be paid for through money the school receives from the state tobacco tax.

Recently the school department lost a grant from the department of public safety because legislative language required the money go to bonafide DARE programs. School Supt. Stephen Hart said the town's representatives on Beacon Hill, Sen. Brian McDonald and Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, were looking into the matter to see if there could be a broader interpretation.

In addition to substance abuse awareness education, DARE and PALS also have in common employing a uniformed police officer to give lessons to students in the schools. Police Chief Brian W. Noonan said he was pleased with the new program and stressed his goal of getting DARE into the schools was tied to getting an officer involved with kids on a more personal level.

Police officer Lisa Matos will be the PALS officer and Safety Officer Clifton Jones will also be involved in the program.

Both Matos and Jones said they were excited about PALS.

Matos will receive training in some health education areas later this month and will start delivering lessons to elementary-age youngsters this spring.

Next fall with additional funding, the program will expand to the junior and senior high, Gill explained.

Ahearn submits resignation

Austin L. Ahearn Jr. of Clayspring Rd. has resigned from the public works garage study committee. Selectmen accepted his resignation with regret this week.

Cemetery committee update

James Gilman of Rust Way has been appointed to the Cemetery Study Committee. The committee is now at full force. Joseph Jerz recently joined the committee. Mary Hartwell submitted her resignation but has decided to stay on, Selectman Merle S. Brown said. Glenn Pratt and Jane Hamilton stepped down from the committee recently after selectmen voted to withdraw a warrant article the committee submitted. Other members include Nancy Snowdale, Gerard L. Deveney, and Peter Laugelle (ex-officio).

appropriate setting with Cohasset harbor as a backdrop for Master of Ceremonies Linton Young to invite the evening's speakers to the rostrum for remarks and reminiscences. Linton, wearing garb similar to Cliff's familiar summer attire—sword fisherman's broad-billed cap, khakis and red suspenders—looked like a scale model of Cliff and kept the evening's program rolling smoothly with his unique brand of Southern good old boy humor.

First to speak was Jay Piepenbrink, Cliff's godson and son of former Fire Chief Charles Piepenbrink. Jay toasted Cliff and explained how Cliff had nicknamed him "Bubbles" for his childhood bathtub antics.

Linton then acknowledged the biographical data compiled by dinner committee organizers Jack McNeill and Bill McArthur which was presented to everyone as they arrived at the Chart House. Linton also reminded Cliff of the famous missing equipment from neighboring towns' fire departments and particularly the kitchen pots and pans that disappeared from the "Shack" fire that possibly reappeared at the Jesuits' retreat.

John Dockray, representing the Cohasset Firefighter's Association presented Cliff a plaque from the town's permanent firefighters, followed by State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray who had grown up next to Cliff and gone to junior and senior high school with him. She presented him with a vintage set of Pick Up Sticks and citations from the State Senate and House of Representatives.

Between speakers, Linton took the opportunity to enlighten everyone about how the No Wake sign disappeared shortly after its installation in the harbor channel and was found floating in the Common pond.

Next up was Paul Laugelle representing the Cohasset Police Association who presented a plaque to Cliff. Then Linton remembered the time Cliff and faithful dog Sam were on their way up Route 3A for coffee and doughnuts early one morning when they encountered an errant horse loose from his barn on King Street. Always able to improvise, Cliff reached for Sam's cache of dog biscuits and coaxed the horse safely to the side of the road to wait for his mistress to arrive.

Selectmen Chairman Martha Gjesteby who read a public town proclamation full of Whereas's and finally a Thereby which evoked a Lintonian comment that it was a good thing Cliff wasn't being presented a gold watch because all that verbiage would never have fit on the back.

Dog biscuits were the order of the evening again, but this time the reason why Sam's dog pal Max looks somewhat like the Hindenburg blimp.

Bruce Pratt of the Cohasset Firemen's Benefit Association presented Cliff with the evening's most creative plaque which featured a fire bell, called a tapper, which had been installed in Cliff's home to summon him to a fire before the age of beepers. On the same plaque was Cliff's hand-painted helmet shield. Bruce also gave Cliff a framed Hamilton cartoon that ran in last week's Mariner showing Cliff in his pickup truck heading for Parker Avenue with Sam in his customary shotgun position. Bruce assured Cliff that there would be a check forthcoming just as soon as the dinner committee could cover the expenses of the evening and figure out what was left. He also gave Cliff a beeper that would go off during a fire alarm just to remind Cliff that there was some action in some part of town.

The honored guest finally strode to the rostrum to tell of the summers that the call firefighters spent in Fitzwilliam, New Hampshire pulling practical jokes on each other, such as Cliff's truck and boots being filled with acorns which elicited his Rambo-like response by hosing down his fellows' bedrooms with a fire hose.

Linton told the story of the Yacht Club neighbor who reported a fire in her home on Hobart Lane, only she'd moved from that house four years before. Maggie Tebbetts enjoyed the story as much as anyone in the room.

Jay Piepenbrink read a letter from his father, former Chief Charles Piepenbrink, Cliff's close friend under whom he served for twenty-four years. Linton remarked that Cliff had served under seven chiefs in his fifty-one year career—twenty-four of them under Chief Piepenbrink, though one of his least respected successors term's seemed like 120 years to some townspeople.

As the evening came to a close, daughters Lee and Kelly who had flown to Cohasset as a complete surprise to Cliff spoke warmly of him. Linton disclosed that their mother Peggy "Chick" didn't even clean the house so as not to tip him off. "Chick" said that the past 45 years with Cliff have been the best years of her life.

The last speaker of the evening, Chief Roger Lincoln remembered the steady leadership example that Cliff set when Roger first joined the fire department. In Roger's words, Cliff "is a shining example of public service at it's best and a gentleman". He presented Cliff a gold badge signifying Fire Captain, the position he's held since 1957.

Cliff finished the evening by thanking everyone for a great life, though he wondered if something was wrong lately since he was being ignored in the coffee shops around town. He was truly surprised by the party and only began to suspect it when he spotted daughters Lee and Kelly arriving at the same time at the Chart House.

Thanks go to the organizational efforts of the auxiliary firefighters who made this one of Cohasset's most memorable occasions. The committee was chaired by Joe Migliaccio and was made up of Bruce Pratt, Bill Brooke, Bill McArthur, Jack McNeill, George Broderick and Linton Young.

Unemployment is down

Unemployment was on the recent decline in Cohasset.

According to the state Department of Employment and Training, unemployment in Cohasset dropped from 3.7 percent in January to 3.5 percent in February.

The state reported that in February, 137 Cohasset residents were unemployed from a total local labor force of 3,881.

There was good news for the state, too, where unemployment dropped to 5.9 percent in March.

Unemployment figures for municipalities lag a month behind the state numbers.

"We are pleased with the downward trend in the unemployment rate," said Commissioner Nils L. Nordberg. "The three-month Massachusetts average for 1994 is 6.5 percent, while the federal three-month average is 6.6 percent."

Nordberg also noted that the payroll survey of Massachusetts employers for february compiled last week shows a jobs total of 2.8 million - the highest total since December, 1990.

REVIEW COURSE FOR UPCOMING POLICE EXAM

Gerard Whittemore, noted author and lecturer, is offering a course to prepare candidates for the upcoming Civil Service Police Examination.

The Commonwealth's Department of Personnel Administration has announced that it will administer the first police examination since 1990 for Massachusetts cities and towns and for the MBTA Police Department on Saturday, May 21, 1994. The deadline for applications has been extended to 5:00 PM, Friday, April 22, 1994. To be eligible to take this examination, you must be a high school graduate or possess a GED certificate, and you must have reached your l9th birthday on or before April 22, 1994. (Check with the Department of Personnel Administration regarding upper age limits in your municipality.) Applications for this examination are available at local police departments, city and town halls, or at the DPA, Examination Administration, One Ashburton Place, Boston, MA 02108.

The selection process for becoming a police officer is a highly competitive one. It begins with this entry level examination, so if you want to become a police officer, act now and file an application as soon as possible.

To earn the highest possible score on the exam, candidates should enroll in Gerard Whittemore's preparatory class. This course will familiarize and prepare students for three major sections of the exam. The first part of the examination, "Observation and Memory," will require candidates to look at a series of wanted posters for a brief time and then answer questions about them. Mr. Whittemore's sure-fire memorization techniques will aid students in their efforts to memorize names, faces and facts. Drills and practice tests will be provided for the next two sections of the test: "Learning and Applying Police Information," and "Judgment and Problem Solving."

Don't allow this opportunity to pass you by! In some municipalities a police officer can earn over $100,000 annually, when court time, overtime pay, paid details, and shift differentials are added to base salary.

Bring pens, pencils and notebook. Tuition is $175. Only cashier's check or money order made out to Gerard Whittemore, payable at the start of the course, will be accepted.

Two sessions are available:

Saturday, April 16, 1994 from 9:00 AM - 5:30 PM at the John B. Hynes Convention Center, 900 Boylston Street, Boston, MA.

Saturday, April 23, 1994 from 9:00 AM - 5:30 PM at the Boxborough Host Hotel, One Adams Place, Boxborough, MA (Exit 28 off 495).

around town

by Sallyann Chatterton

I made a boo-boo last week, I inadvertently left out a V.I.P.. when reporting about the youth of the Second Congregational Church ski trip. J neglected to tell you who organized the whole trip, it was Ami Argus, and as reported, she did an admirable job.

Ami certainly deserves credit for her efforts, sorry about that!!

If you see Larry and Linda Shultz walking around with their heads in the clouds, there is a good reason! Her name is Anna Lynne Shultz, the daughter of Bob and Jennifer (Tews) Shultz, and their granddaughter! Anna was born Tuesday, March 29, and weighed 7 lbs. 3 ozs.

Her maternal grandparents are Jean and Dixon Tews, they are bursting their buttons with pride too. You can bet that Larry and Linda will be on the first plane out of here as soon as they can to visit Anna.

51 years later, Cliff Dickson is retiring from the call firefighter regime. There was a surprise party held for him at the Chart House, and there were around 300 people to honor him and his efforts!

Bruce Pratt ran the occasion, and presented him with a plaque and beeper to replace one he had to turn in when he retired.

Fire Chief Roger Lincoln gave him a gold captain's badge (Chief Lincoln was his 7th chief that he served under), State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray presented citations, Selectman Martha Gjesteby honored Cliff, and Paul Laugelle gave him a plaque on behalf of the police union.

Don't worry though, you will still be seeing the red suspenders, baseball hat and khakis around town, he is a trademark! An admirable one! Cliff, we salute you!

Please welcome Francesca Astino, the brand new baby daughter of Jeanne and Joseph Astino! Francesca was born March 6 at South Shore Hospital and weighed 7 lbs. 7 ozs.

Her grandparents, Theodore and Dorothy Poutree and Domenick and Kathryn Astino, are thrilled of course, and that must have been one happy Easter at Flintlocke Ridge Road!!

Vanderbilt University sent good news, Daniel Sherman Baird, school of engineering, made honors for the fall semester! Good work Dan.

It isn't an April Fool's joke, Earl McArthur really did retire on that day (4/1). Isn't it hard to imagine the town without they big great truck that he was always in? Well, we wish you the best in your retirement, after all of your hard work, "you deserve a break today." We love you!

Accolades go to Charlotte Begley, daughter of Velma and Kevin Begley, she was named to Phi Beta Kappa at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. That means she is outstanding in academic achievement, and that she has the honor recognizing excellence at the undergraduate level.

Charlotte is a member of the 1994 Class, majoring in legal studies and Spanish, and a 1990 CHS graduate.

GREAT!!

Did you know that there is a National Geography Bee State Finals, held at Clark University April 8? And, did you know that James V. O'Sullivan II is going to be taking part in the action? The competition is hosted by the Teachers Center for Global Studies at Clark, and James will be competing for prizes and a chance to represent Massachusetts at the National Geography Bee to be held in Washington D.C. in May!

We are so proud of you James, that certainly is an honor! Win, lose or draw, you are a winner!

Congratulations to Angela Parisi, daughter of Bruce and Georgine Butman. She has again received high honors at South Shore Vo-Tech. Angela is studying to be an electrical engineer. Angela shows great leadership qualities in school and out. She also possesses her mom's volunteer qualities in helping young children, senior citizens, and helping teenagers in crisis.

Angela, keep up your good work!!!

Walter Wheelwright Jr.

Walter C. Wheelwright Jr., 79, of Cohasset, a firefighter with the Cohasset Fire Department for 30 years, died at home March 27.

He worked at the family farm, the former F.w. Wheelwright and Sons, Walnut Grove Farm, who supplied milk and cream to customers in Cohasset and Scituate. The farm was sold in 1948 to the White Brothers.

Mr. Wheelwright was a member of Conahasset Masonic Lodge.

He lived all his life in Cohasset where he graduated from high school.

Mr. Wheelwright retired from the fire department in 1975.

Husband of the late Louise J. (Thomas) Wheelwright, he is survived by a son, Frank W. Wheelwright of Hanover; his mother, Ruth (Stoughton) Wheelwright of Cohasset; a brother, Frank S. Wheelwright of Cohasset; two sisters, Jean Burriss of Columbia, S.C., and Mary Handy of Marshfield; two grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. He was the son of the late Walter C. Wheelwright Sr.

A funeral service was held April 30 in Second Congregational Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Donations may be made to the Dana-Faber Cancer Institute, 44 Binney St., Boston 02115.

Ruth L. Bacigalupo

Ruth L. (Tanton) Bacigalupo, 89, of Cohasset, died April 3 at Cardigan Nursing Home in Scituate.

Mrs. Bacigalupo was born in Lexington, the daughter of Mary (Carter) and William Pearl Tanton. She was raised in Woburn and graduated from Woburn High School.

She worked as secretary to William Ripley, superintendent of the Cohasset School Department for more than 10 years.

She was a member of St. Anthony's Church and was an avid Bridge player.

She was the wife of the late Frederick L. Bacigalupo and leaves one son, William C. Bacigalupo of Johannesburg, South Africa; three daughters, Mary Munci and Jane Dolph, both of Cohasset and Susan Cabaniol of Sheffield; a sister, Ethel Forbes of Quincy; 11 grandchildren and 2 great-grandchildren. She was the sister the late George Tanton, Grace Kerrigan, Helen Washburn, Marie Foley and Alice Scanlon.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Anthony Church April 9. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Donations in her memory may be made to the Rotary Club, P.O. Box 36, Cohasset 02025..

Alice J. McDonald

Alice J. (Forsyth) McDonald of Cohasset, died at Bethesda at Evanswood Nursing Home, Kingston March 27 after a short illness. Mrs. McDonald was 94 years old. She was born and educated in Boston.

Mrs. McDonald lived with her daughter, R. Patricia Brown of Cohasset for the past 13 years. Prior to that she lived in Malden and Stoneham. She was a member of the 60+ Club of Cohasset.

She was the wife of the late William F. McDonald.

In addition to her daughter, R. Patricia Brown, she leaves four grandchildren, William, Stephen and Michael Brown; and Susan Fellows; and two great-grandchildren, Brianna and Brian Brown.

A Funeral Mass was held in St. Anthony's Church at 11 a.m. March 30. Interment was in New Calvary Cemetery in Boston.

Small business

This year, Small Business Week, an annual event to honor America's hard working, sometimes unsung, business women and men, will be celebrated May 1 through May 7.

These are the individual that keep our economic engine running and account for 99.7 percent of all employers in the United States, the mom-and-pop shops, the entrepreneurs, the neighborhood stores that deliver service — and quality — with a smile.

According to Joseph Pellegrino, the Massachusetts district director of the U.S. Small Business Administration, small businesses employ about 54 percent of the private workforce and account for 52 percent of all sales in the country.

Most often, small businesses provide most Americans with their first job, he says.

Small business really isn't small, in terms of its contribution to the economy. During the past five years, as the country weathered a deep recession, small businesses provided 100 percent of the net new jobs, according to the SBA.

And, that trend is expected to continue as the monolithic companies, the ones whose profits or losses are bigger than most municipal budgets, downsize and fine-tune their workforce.

Within the next 10 years, the economy is expected to add 25 million new jobs; small businesses will contribute 68 percent or more than 13 million of those jobs, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

As we approach the 21st century, the SBA predicts that nine of the fastest growing small businesses will be in the service industries — companies that provide residential care, medical and dental laboratories and eating and drinking establishments.

While the first two sectors reflect a graying of the baby boomers, the anticipated growth of jobs — an additional 2.2 million jobs — in restaurant industry indicates an increasing trend among Americans to eat their meals away from home.

During Small Business Week, a Small Business Person of the Year is chosen from each state. David Dunn, president and CEO of Dunn & Company of Clinton, will represent Massachusetts. His 18-year-old company is a "book hospital" that restores old books and recyclesexcess books. It is the only one of its kind in the world.

A dinner honoring him and six other small business advocates will be held May 5 at Lombardo's in Randolph. The guest speaker will be Robert Kraft, the new owner of the New England Patriots.

Others business advocates to be honored are James Zafris, president of the Danvers Savings Bank; Nancy Piccin, a business reporter for the Springfield Union News and Sunday Republican; Eric Suher, president of E-S Sports Corporation; Vicki Donlan, executive director of the South Shore Women's Business Network; Dorothy Altman, principal of Dorothy Altman Housing and Development Services, and Jose Garcia, a minority business advocate, owner of Garcia Realty.

All have contributed to the health of our economy, and just to bring home the point of the value of small businesses, Pellegrino provided some other interesting statistics:

- Small businesses contribute more to their communities — in terms of in-kind services and financial donations — on a per-employee basis than do their larger corporate cousins.
- The number of businesses owned by blacks and other minorities — Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders, Hispanics, American Indians and Alaska natives — increased substantially.
- More women entered business too, starting businesses at nearly twice the rate of men during the same period.

Small businesses are rebuilding our economy, and they should be applauded.

'Field of dreams' may come true

To the Editor:

In the spring of 1952 a group of men in Cohasset started the Cohasset Little League program. People like Bill Poland, George McLaughlin, Chet Brown, Jimmy Collins, "Bing" Leonard, Bob Hall, Leo Kurtz, Al Sencebaugh, Jim Higgins, Tom Hernan, Harold Barnes and others saw a need for organized sports and leisure time enjoyment. For those of us eligible to play ball in that league during the 50's the experience was arguably the most memorable time of our young lives. The Sargents, Ainslies, Tildens, McCarthys, Reardons, Leonards, Lincolns, Humphreys, Megathlins, Brennans, Mulcaheys, Ferreiras and hundreds of others can recall every moment that we had our uniform on. The only problem with the 1950's was that for the most part only males were included in after school or town wide activities.

How times have changed. Female sports, activities, and camps have grown ten-fold. Monday evening, March 28, the residents of Cohasset at Town Meeting voted to build a recreation and athletic complex for the entire community because town officials and residents recognized the need for new and upgraded facilities.

At approximately 8:30 p.m. that evening I experienced the same feeling as 42 years ago, when my father told me that the previously mentioned group of men where going to establish a baseball league for boys ages 8 to 12. My granddaughter and her friends are now going to be able to experience the memories and relationships that my friends experienced growing up in Cohasset in the 1950's.

My dream team has always been the group of men who made life growing up in Cohasset in the 50's and 60's so enjoyable and rewarding.

I have a new dream team; men and women of the 90's who had a vision that is going to make Cohasset an even nicer place to call home. Thanks Gary, Ralph, Shelanne, Larry, Bill, Donna, Karen, Dave, Mike, Jane, Bill, Jeff, Steve, Wayne, Ann, Nan, Rick, Nancy, Carol, Gerard and the hundreds of others who have made my "field of dreams" almost a reality.

Candidate's commitment reinforced

To the Editor:

I would like to thank all the people who gave me their support throughout the campaign and on election day. The encouragement which I received has reinforced the warm feeling Barbara and I have for this community.

Even though we may be "newcomers" you did not make us feel that way and your reassurance has strengthened my commitment to community service.

Thanks again!

Dean Rizzo

Weekly question provided forum

To the Editor:

I would like to thank the Mariner for publishing the "Questions of the Week," which provided all candidates with an opportunity to state our positions on various issues.

This forum gave Cohasset voters a chance to get to know us better and to learn what qualifications and points of view we would bring to the different town offices.

Thanks also to my campaign committee and to the voters, who, in electing me to the school committee, have entrusted me with the responsibility of making decisions about school issues. I appreciate your support and will try to do what is best educationally for the children of Cohasset.

Rotary says thanks for roadrace help

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Rotary Club of Cohasset and the Roadrace Committee, I want to express our most sincere gratitude to all the residents of Cohasset for their warm welcome and support to all the runners and for their acceptance of any inconvenience the event may have caused. Special gratitude to the police, fire and highway departments who provide a safe and beautiful environment for the race to occur. Our sincere appreciation to the countless volunteers, especially the high school students under the direction of Ryan Sawchuk, who demonstrated that the youth do have a commitment to our town. The donations by most of the businesses in town are gratefully acknowledged and assured the financial success of the event.

The endless time and effort of Roy Fitzsimmons, Sharpless Jones, Fran Coffey, Andy Hailer, Rick Curtis and Don Harrold assured the success of the event in which we can all take pride and we extend our heartfelt gratitude to them. Special thanks to the Mariner for its coverage of the day and to Normandie Nigh for directing the walk, which provided for so many residents a fun morning.

Pratt squeaks by Laugelle in tight election contest

"I was rather surprised when the turnout went over 2,400 and we won by about 40 votes," he said. "But I think I may pay too much attention to political mechanics.

"Getting in late in the game against a 15-year record (and winning) is quite an accomplishment," he said.

Fifty-two percent of the town's 4,593 registered voters participated in last Saturday's election.

Town Clerk Marion Douglas said voting was steady all day. Two-hundred-and-thirty-three absentee ballots were cast, she said.

Douglas said she wasn't satisfied though.

"I'd like to see the turnout up there at 80 or 90 percent," she said.

The turn-out was the largest in a town election since 1990 when 55 percent of registered voters participated. That year override questions were also on the ballot, Douglas said. Ironically in 1990, Pratt's father Burtram Pratt, lost his reelection bid to the board of selectmen.

Alix P. White defeated Davenport for a three-year term on the health board. Davenport, who was elected last year to fill an unexpired term, won Precinct Two by 11 votes but lost big to White in Precinct One by a 186 vote-margin.

White said her interest in recycling and involvement with S.A.F.E, a grass roots group opposed to expansion of Cohasset Heights Landfill, have prepared her well.

"I feel like I've been campaigning for six years and this is the finishing touch," she said.

White said she decided to run after a public hearing in February on the landfill where she received a standing ovation.

"People wanted an environmental candidate," she said.

Planning Board member Bill Good was the sole incumbent to survive a challenge.

He was the top vote-getter in a race with 1,367 votes. His opponent Dean Rizzo received 688 votes.

"I thought it was good to be challenged," Good said. "In the next five years I plan to do my best work working with the Chamber of Commerce in bringing business and tourists into town."

Rizzo said the experience was a positive one.

The four-way race for two open seats on the school committee was an exciting one. JoAnne Chittick was the top vote-getter with 1240 votes. James C. Kirk with 1168 votes narrowly defeated Daniel Evans by a 34-vote margin. Evans received 1134 votes. Owen O'Malley was a distant fourth with 376 votes.

At the corner of the Town Common, Rob Spofford and Katherine Evans; and Kelsey & Devon Bell and Lynne Sheridan show their loyal support to those on the way to the polls Saturday.

Bus, water service should be expanded

To the Editor:

In response to Isabelle Leonardi's March 17 pro-train letter, I would like to share some of the most compelling facts about the train that the newly forming Coastal Coalition of citizens has learned.

"Highway traffic won't get any lighter," (once the train is built) according to the former Old Colony Project Manager as quoted in the Patriot Ledger.

Why? Because four-fifths of the South Shore's workforce don't even work in Boston. And of the small minority who do work in "Boston" many have to drive because the train doesn't help them (they are going to South Boston, East Boston, Roslindale, Jamaica Plain, etc.).

Hundreds of millions of dollars will be spent on a train project that when completed won't even make a dent in highway traffic. Wouldn't that be a shame? The public should be clamouring for a transportation system that would impact the overwhelming majority who don't work in Boston. Spend those transportation dollars on a system that will do the job of getting cars off the highway!

Voters on the South Shore were asked in 1991 if they wanted the train. The majority "simply" said yes. In the only two towns (Cohasset and Hingham) that asked the more informed question of would they still want the train if they had to pay to maintain it, the answer was no.

Perhaps the following will help clarify why these two towns said no. Cohasset (without the train) will pay $149,706 to the MBTA in 1994. Braintree, on the other hand, for the "priviledge" of having a train station and buses in their town, has to pay $936,322!

These MBTA assessments are paid annually through your local real estate taxes. Either your taxes would go up to pay for any increase or the money would have to come from the town's operating budget (too bad for the schools, police, fire, etc.).

Let's not bury our heads in nostalgia. Try to listen and learn all the facts about safety, traffic tie-ups, noise pollution, and taxes before you allow the MBTA into your community. Support the efforts of the Coastal Coalition to force Governor Weld to improve and expand our bus and water transportation systems that will actually do the job of getting cars off the road.

Concession help appreciated

To the Editor:

Now that basketball season is over, I would like to thank all the moms and dads (and siblings) who so graciously helped with the basketball concession stand — grades four through 12 at the high school.

Nearly everyone I called was willing to volunteer, and, after "zillions" of phone calls, it was inspiring as to how pleasant and cooperative people were! I hope you all had fun. This is the major fund raiser of recreation basketball, so without your help, it would not have been successful.

Cohasset Basketball Boosters thank you.

Support is appreciated

To the Editor:

I would like to publicly express my gratitude to all those who supported me in my candidacy for the School Committee, and in particular to all those who worked so very hard on our campaign.

Although I was disappointed not to win, the experience was a positive and rewarding one. I feel privileged to have been a candidate, grateful for the opportunity to have met so many great people, and honored to have come as close as I did.

I am confident that JoAnne Chittick and Jim Kirk will be terrific members of the School Committee, and wish them the best in their new roles.

Education foundation adds new directors

By Jim Kinch
Cohasset Educational Foundation

In October the Cohasset Educational Foundation (CEF) formally began its second year of existence and welcomed its new directors to the board. With a stated mission of increasing the basis of private support to enhance the excellence within the Cohasset Schools, the first CEF sponsored program is taking shape in the new computer center at the Osgood School. In this article the CEF introduces these new members of the board. This complement of nine new members brings the active membership of the Board of Directors to 24. The new directors bring added diversity, experience and talent to the foundation.

Mary Hagerty — A long time Cohasset resident, Mary has raised two sons in town, both through the Cohasset schools. It was her great interest in Cohasset and education that brought her to the CEF. She joins the board with a hope of seeking some new ways to help the school system meet the needs of Cohasset's children.

Jim Kirk — A 14-year resident, Jim has three children. His oldest daughter, now in college, went through Cohasset schools, his youngest is a pupil at Osgood School. He sees the foundation as a chance to expand the resources available to the town's youth. As a marketing executive he is lending his experience to work on corporate partnerships to expand their investment in our schools.

Agnes McCann — An attorney with Travelers Insurance, Agnes has lived in Cohasset for 12 years with her two sons in Cohasset schools. She accepted an invitation to the foundation as a way for her to show public support for the Mission of CEF. She hopes that the success of the effort will establish continuity of public support and eventually a healthy endowment fund to support the schools' excellence.

Michael Hurley — An insurance broker, Michael brought his family to Cohasset six years ago. With a family of nine (six girls, three boys) his concern for quality education prompted him to join the foundation. He too feels the CEF is a concept for the time, one to bring public and private sources together to provide a wider base of financial and intellectual resources to the system. He envisions these resources will produce an endowment to permit the development of alternatives to rival the elite of public and private schools.

Elizabeth Muncey — As the youngest member of the board, Elizabeth is a lifelong Cohasset resident. A product of Cohasset education, she has seen its strengths and weaknesses from the 'inside.' As a college senior and an education major she looks to the CEF to enhance the system by bringing support for new programs to the students. She also wants to broaden her own understanding of public education's fiscal realities and the struggle to develop new resources.

Midge Stone — Midge and her husband moved to Cohasset three years ago with their three daughters. As a former educator Midge has experienced the impact of financial limitations and restrictions in the public learning experience. She sees the CEF as an opportunity to communicate the schools' need to both corporate and private audiences and an agent for promoting excellence in the public system.

Matthew Steele — Matt, the president of Norfolk Corporation, came to Cohasset eight years ago. With three young children, he and his wife are active supporters of Cohasset schools. Interested in technology, the CEF drew his attention with its support for the Osgood computer lab. He sees the CEF as a vehicle to bring a broader financial support to the system to help in establishing an academically well-rounded educational program for all Cohasset's students.

Anne Lane — As the housing counselor for the South Sore Assn. for Retarded Citizens, Anne understands financial restraints and the need for outside and corporate support. As an 11 year resident and with a a son in Deer Hill School, she knows the fiscal problems facing Cohasset education. Anne sees the CEF as an added dimension, filling a niche with the professional teaching staff and the PSO. She hopes the foundation can add more student input, bringing more public recognition and support to needs that presently receive little attention.

David Gray — A seven year resident, David and his wife have two daughters at Cohasset High School. An investments manager with the Boston Company, David sees our children in competition with the best in a global marketplace. It is this concern for high quality in public education that prompted him to join the CEF. He hopes the CEF can act as an advocate for children, a voice not often heard in the budget debate, by providing support for programs that reach the needs of all levels of students.

The CEF is an independent non-profit organization of concerned townspeople focused on developing new and non-traditional sources of support for the Cohasset Public School System. Membership on the board is voluntary and open to any concerned citizen of Cohasset. People interested in learning more about the mission of the CEF and of its activities are encouraged to call 383-2833 or writing Cohasset Educational Foundation, P.O. Box 224, Cohasset 02025 for a copy of our brochure and additional information on our programs. As a registered non-profit organization all donations to our project fund are completely tax deductible and dedicated to enhancing the educational environment for Cohasset students.

Grant to support art

At the first 1994 meeting of the PSO board Jan. 15, PSO President Maureen Jerz introduced a special guest. Rick Shea, president of the Cohasset Education Foundation (CEF), was on hand to present the PSO with a $500 check. Rick explained that a PSO contribution of $500 in 1992 represented the first donation to the newly established CEF.

Maureen said she and the other members of the PSO board were surprised and pleased by the unexpected donation. She feels the gift is a symbol of the cooperation between the two volunteer bodies working in different ways to enhance Cohasset's public schools.

On behalf of the CEF, Rick was pleased to return the initial donation. He noted that the CEF board voted unanimously for the contribution as a material expression of its thanks to the PSO for its energy and support in the development of the CEF. Rick also used the opportunity to invite a member of the PSO to serve on the CEF board to better coordinate the activities of the two organizations.

Jerz noted the contribution would be used to support one of the PSO's ongoing "Artist in Residence" programs at the Osgood School.

The Cohasset Education Foundation is a non-profit local education foundation created in 1992 to support and promote academic initiative and excellence in the Cohasset public schools.

HOME CENTER REAL ESTATE'S ANTIQUE HOMES DIVISION AWARDED CERTIFICATION BY THE NATIONAL TRUST FOR HISTORIC PRESERVATION

Gail Petersen Bell, CRB, President, announces that she, along with agents, Nancy Ryan Boyle, and Sandra Pollock have completed the vigorous training program of the National Trust for Historic Preservation (NTHP), in Washington, D.C., and are now certified by this prestigious organization to specialize in the marketing of antique homes, for their new Antique Homes Division.

Held at NTHP headquarters in Washington, the courses were led by antique home specialists and prominent authors, and focused on such subjects as architectural history, historic interiors, the marketing of historic properties and regulatory and tax issues. At the completion of their course work, the three Realtors were awarded their formal certification by the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

"Each antique home is unique, and requires a special marketing plan directed at a select market segment, a segment that not only has an understanding of antique homes, but appreciates them as well," explained Ms. Bell. Homeowners who opt for the program will receive special marketing directed at antique lovers such as advertising in the Preservation News, published by the National Trust for Historic Preservation. Colorful property brochures will also be mailed to selected real estate brokers, and to a special list of potential homebuyers.

For further information about buying or selling antique homes, call Home Center Real Estate at 749-8833

What happens when children have early dismissal?

By Ed Leonard
Special to the Mariner

The Jr./Sr. High School faculty used this release day, March 24, to work on their professional development goals. For example, there are several projects revolving around technology.

Bryan Marks, vocal music teacher, is using the CD ROM for application in his music classes. Joel Antolini, industrial arts instructor, is developing a Hypercard Stack containing woodworking resource information. Marilyn Watson and Ron Ford, physical education teachers, are computerizing annual fitness tests given to students. This process will be ongoing throughout the year, culminating in individual research projects presented to the whole faculty in May.

The Deer Hill faculty conducted parent conferences on this day. Parent conferences are held twice yearly in order to discuss a child's progress with his/her parent. The times for these meetings are scheduled in advance by the homeroom teacher.

At the Osgood School, teachers worked on their professional development goals. The first grade teachers, Faith Maloney, Marilyn D'Angelo, Marie Davis and Jean Free, are developing a curriculum around the four seasons for their goal. The lessons are to include how plants, animals, weather and people change throughout the seasons.

A day with an educator

The faculty Senate of Cohasset High School invites citizens of Cohasset to participate in the "A Day with an Educator" program, which will take place April 28. Instead of basing their opinions upon the highly generalized accounts in Boston newspapers and the even more highly generalized articles in national magazines, the citizens of Cohasset will be afforded the opportunity to view the specifics of education at Cohasset High School.

The Faculty Senate feels there is no better way to gain a clear understanding of what CHS education in the middle of a new decade is all about than to experience the school environment first-hand. That is what "A Day with an Educator" is all about - bringing Cohasset citizens into the school April 28 and having them experience the real-life, everyday educational environment.

The program will allow individuals from the community to experience an entire school day with a member of the CHS staff. They will share in all of the activities the staff member performs. In the case of a classroom teacher, for example, the participant will be with the cooperating teacher while he or she teaches class, does lunch or corridor duty, supervises study hall, corrects homework or tests, attends meetings, covers detention, and performs extra-duty assignments

Those citizens spending "A Day with an Educator" will choose the discipline or area in which they wish to participate; however, because of scheduling problems, they will not be able to choose a specific staff member to visit. This will be done via a lottery system. For more information about this unique program call the high school at 383-6100.

Deer Hill parents to meet

The PSO will sponsor a meeting for Deer Hill parents at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday April 27 in the school cafeteria.

Deer Hill Principal, Mr. Ekberg, will be available to respond to ideas raised at the March 7 parents meeting and answer possible questions regarding the restructuring of grades 4, 5 and 6 necessitated by the large class size of the incoming 5th grade.

These changes will be outlined in a letter sent to parents prior to the week of April vacation.

Vacation change sought

The school committee is seeking public input on proposed changes to the school calendar. At its March 24 meeting, the Cohasset school committee discussed the 1994/95 school calendar and the possibility of making changes in next year's vacation schedule.

These changes would involve eliminating February and April vacations and substituting one week in March. The schedule would result in a net gain of three school days, setting the last day of school for June 14. These changes would allow more continuity of instructional time and would give the system some flexibility of scheduling in the event of an unusually high number of snow days next year, the school committee said.

Comments should be directed prior to the committee's April 28 meeting to Supt. Stephen Hart (383-6111), School Committee Chairman Nancy Sandell (383-0486); or PSO president Maureen Jerz (383-6592).
